Dear Jim Silver,

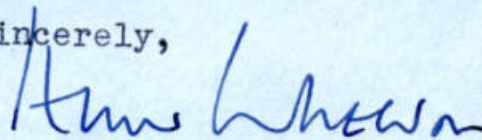

I dropped a note to Bill Green soon after I left Oxford five or six weeks ago; since then I have been moving about at a hell of a clip, and am at last landed home, thank God, to sleep again in my own bed.

I would not like to let the chance go, however, just to drop this note to thank you most warmly for all your kindness in the all too brief couple of days I had in Oxford, and for your great skill in getting me in to see Mrs Faulkner, the Madonna, if not the Holy Spirit.

I won't labour the business of thanks; but I should like you to know that I would be disappointed indeed if you were ever to slip into this country, or out of it, without letting me know. Our address is 44 Mortlake Road, Kew Gardens, Surrey. We have bed and we have board and it would be a great pleasure to see you again.

Please give my kindest regards to Mrs Silver and of course to Bill Green and the others who were so kind.

Yours sincerely,

(Huw Wheldon)

Mr. J. Silver,
