Dear Jim:

After flying back from California I found your generous review of my book on the Southern Claims Commission which sent me up into the clouds again. I have now landed once more and want to express my deep appreciation for your excellent comments. I have been fortunate in the reviews but count yours the best, particularly as one or two of our northern friends have looked with sympathy on the study but still argue that the only trouble with Radical Reconstruction was that it wasn't radical enough. I will look forward to seeing you at one of the national meetings soon and meanwhile best regards to you and to your wife.

As ever,

Frank
