Dear Jim,

Bill Willis has been and gone. We had a very short time together but I was able to have him meet a few people here, and I think, on the whole, he got away unscathed, intellectually and physically! He had lively news of you and must be in his own field a great asset to what you are all doing at Oxford. He arrived in the middle of the Edinburgh Festival of Music and Drama and what not, although I think his only intake of culture was confined to a late night performance of the Military Tattoo!

It will be pleasant one day to welcome you here again. In the meantime it will always be congenial to hear of any special novelties and interests. Your local political scene becomes no less piquant as the years pass.

Best wishes to you all.

Ever sincerely,

Alastair M. Dunnett.
