Dear Mr. Meredith,

While listening to the news reports this evening of the hysterical events which you have been buried in, I knew that you must be feeling a very lonely man. I would like you to know that there must be thousands of others like myself in our country, at present obscured from your view, who are reaching out our hands and hearts to you during this struggle.

While the anger and confusion must seem to be overwhelming I hope that you are able to know that there are many who pray and hope for you. You have seemed to me to be a most courageous man and I hope that you are able to retain your convictions.

I hope that your studies will
