October 1, 1962,
Pueblo, Colorado.

Mr. James Meredith,
Oxford University,
Mississippi.

Dear Sir:

I write this letter to encourage you, to congratulate you, and to thank you. You have accomplished an unpleasant task that man, both black and white, has shirked these many years.

I realize the continuing strain and pressures that you are under, the tremendous courage, the faith, the determination necessary to do what you have to accomplish your goal.

I congratulate you--I congratulate you in the impeachable manner that you have conducted yourself. I congratulate all those who have worked with you, helped you, encouraged you, and I thank you for having successfully performed a task that was really as much mine as yours.

I am proud of you, my brother--for what you are--for what you have accomplished--and the manner in which you have accomplished it.

Respectfully yours,

W. Dale Malleck
