Pesta Appeals College's Action

Kate Juliano
Grizzly Staff Writer

When students on this campus began to talk about Duke Pesta not returning as a member of the English department next fall, word spread rather quickly. No one could figure out the reasons why the college would not want him to return, and people were at a loss for any confirmation or definitive answers.

However, as the decision stands right now, Duke Pesta, assistant professor of English, will not be returning to Ursinus College for the 2002-2003 academic year. Dr. Pesta's contract will not be renewed after its expiration at the end of June, for what the college calls a "lack of collegiality." Basically, this means that Dr. Pesta allegedly does not get along in a cooperative and productive manner with the English Department as a whole.

For those students on campus who would like a clearer understanding about the steps involved in the decision not to renew Dr. Pesta's contract, here is the information the Grizzly has been able to

Last November, a review board, known as the Fourth-Year Review Committee, met to evaluate Dr. Pesta's overall performance. This committee was comprised of selected faculty members of the English department, here on campus. Because she was in London at the time of the committee's evaluation, Dr. Joyce Lionarons, who had been chair of the department during Pesta's first year, sent an individual evaluation, which was "100% positive," according to David Ferleger, Dr. Pesta's lawyer.

The committee's report was twelve pages long and did not recommend anywhere that Dr. Pesta not be retained. The first two pages complimented him concerning his involvement and volunteerism where students were concerned. As a matter of fact, the committee is quoted as saying Dr. Pesta's participation was "outstanding."

The next nine pages criticized

Pesta's syllabus design, and expressed other pedagogical concerns. The last page contained remarks from several anonymous students and faculty members, stating that Dr. Pesta allegedly made derogatory comments about fellow English faculty. Dr. Pesta then responded to the committee's review in writing, which is allowed as part of the process.

Two to three weeks after both the review and response were submitted, Dr. Pesta was called into President Strassburger's office, where Ferleger claims Pesta was informed that his contract would terminate in June. One month later, according to his lawyer, Pesta received a letter from Dean Levy stating that his contract would not be renewed for the following year because he was "not a good fit for Ursinus College."

In a letter that Ferleger wrote to Dr. Lionarons at the beginning of April, he states, "the College wishes to eliminate from the English Department someone who, by all accounts, has brought a freshness and excitement to the teaching of literature of many eras."

Because there was nothing recommending his dismissal in either Dr. Lionarons' evaluation or the report of the Fourth-Year Review Committee, Ferleger states, "the president's decision must have been based on material and information which are outside the mandated evaluation process."

Because of confidentiality reasons, the administration does not discuss personnel matters. When contacted by the Grizzly, both the president and Dean Levy declined to comment after serious consideration, especially since the situation is under appeal. Dr. Pesta requested that all questions be directed to his lawyer, who advised his client not to give a statement concerning this issue.

At this time, Pesta and Ferleger are trying to get the college to reverse its decision to terminate the contract. The first step is to appeal to the department chair, Dr. Lionarons. She reviewed the Fourth-Year Review Committee's evaluation and said that the committee followed Faculty Handbook guidelines correctly. However, she did not comment on the non-renewal of Pesta's contract. The next step is to appeal to Dean Levy, who, according to Ferleger, received a letter from him on Friday, April 19.

If nothing happens after these two steps, an appeal letter will be sent to President Strassburger. According to the Faculty Handbook, if Dr. Pesta is unsatisfied with the administration's response, he can take his case to the Faculty Appeals Committee. If the decision is not overturned after this procedure is followed, Pesta and his lawyer could decide to take the matter to court.

According to Ferleger, if he and Pesta decide to go to court, they will be appealing the decision on "substantive and procedural grounds." Ferleger believes that the administration violated its own rules for procedure in not renewing Dr. Pesta's contract. Once again, the administration's policy is not to comment on personnel matters of any nature because of privacy issues.

Diverse and Abundant Research Continues

Katherine Goddard-Doms
Special to the Grizzly

Intense competition for summer research fellowships has led to the funding of 55 student research projects for the summer of 2002. Summer research students and their mentors will be funded by the college and its alumni and friends including the Eden Foundation and the Norristown Times Herald by the Howard Hughes Medical Institute, by a grant from the National Science Foundation to Dr. Holly Gaede, Department of Chemistry, and by grants from the National Institutes of Health to Dr. Rebecca Kohn and Dr. Beth Bailey.

More students than ever have been funded, and it was very difficult for the Ursinus College Working Group on Undergraduate Research to select from among a large pool of excellent applicants in all academic disciplines.

Students and faculty engaged in the 8 week (summer fellows) or 10 week (HHMI, NSF, and NIH) programs are looking forward to getting started on their projects. This summer, as usual, the program will include a series of lunches and other social events to bring the research community together. Some lunches will be followed by seminars on research ethics, and "How to" programs, such as how to get into graduate school (given by recent alums), and how to use library resources quickly and efficiently. Other lunches will be followed by engaging speakers: Dr. Catherine Roberts, College of the Holy Cross, will speak about the use of applied mathematics to solve interesting and important problems. Just one of the examples that she will discuss is how to use mathematics to detect art forgery.

Some of the titles of the work in which students will engage this summer include: "Influence of Political, Cultural, and Social Change on Mid 19th Century Irish Literature" Margaret Gallagher, working with Dr. Rebecca Jaroff

"Locating nervous system proteins in C. elegans, a small worm whose development has implications for understanding the human nervous system" Kristin Servant, working with Dr. Rebecca Kohn

"The Common Commie" Brittany A. Lewis, working with Dr. Richard King

"Developing a Software Environment for Computer Assisted Education in Chemical and Biological Sciences" Douglas Weidner, working with Dr. Mirela Damian

Students have presented some of their research in recent weeks at professional meetings. In fact, the students listed here are only a sample of the students who have presented their work at professional meetings during this academic year. On April 13th, Debora Sarmento presented her honors research in international relations and Matthew Bunczk presented his honors research in French at the Third Annual Berks County Undergraduate Conference in Reading, PA.

Layali Esquidef presented her research in chemistry at the same meeting. Alicia Morgans presented her honors research in association with Michelle Janelsins, Lindsey Lewis, Josh Adkinson, and Nikki Lentz at the Council on Undergraduate Research Poster Session on Capitol Hill on April 18th. They found the opportunity to meet with their senators and representatives a very enlightening experience.

This weekend, Stephanie Parker is off to Whitewater, WI. to present her research entitled:

O' Flaherty Speaks to Ursinus about Human Rights

Quinn Dinsmore
Grizzly Staff Writer

"Human rights are not long distance or important only to foreigners. Human rights begin with you and are relevant to everyone. It is about one human race and community." The words of Michael O'Flaherty expressed the triumphs and challenges of human rights law during his time at Ursinus on Monday.

O'Flaherty serves as the interim Deputy Director of the NY Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights. A colleague of Ambassador in Residence Joseph Melrose, O'Flaherty gave an informal discussion for students interested in human rights Monday afternoon.

During the talk, O'Flaherty explored various topics ranging from the treatment of suspected Al-Qaeda members and how to pursue a career in international agencies to the work of the United Nations and the climate of human rights law. He remarked, "The system may be weak in some areas, but the fact that the laws exist for all is an achievement in itself. We have come so far in fifty years."

His work is far from over however, as the news reports human rights abuses in not only "chaos" countries, but in developed and stable areas as well. O'Flaherty reminded students that the United States has not signed many human rights treaties and that everyone needs to create a culture of human rights. He stated, "All people should be aware of the rights to which they are entitled. We don't need to guess what the rights are. We have a set of laws but we need to increase our understanding of those laws."

Michael O'Flaherty is a human rights lawyer, with wide experience with the United Nations and non-governmental organizations. His first UN assignment, in 1993, was the initiation of its human rights field presence in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Appointed Secretary of the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination and Coordinator of the UN Human Rights Fellowship Program, he returned to Bosnia as the first UN expert advisor for implementation of the Dayton Peace Agreement. From 1998 to 2000, Michael O'Flaherty established and managed the UN human rights program in Sierra Leone and served as Human Rights Advisor to the Special Representative of the UN Secretary-General.

In 2000, he became the Asia-Pacific Coordinator at the Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights, and is currently on temporary assignment to United Nations Headquarters as interim Deputy Director. He continues to serve on the international advisory boards of a number of human rights organizations and institutions.

Michael O'Flaherty holds degrees in Law (Dublin), Philosophy and Theology (Rome) and international relations (Amsterdam). He has published extensively on human rights and lectures on issues of human rights theory and practice.

During his talk, O'Flaherty targeted his advice to students interested in human rights to begin at Ursinus. Before addressing national issues, he feels human rights should be tackled on campus. "If you believe in human rights, you find out who you are and your place here because they start with you. Form a human rights group to make sure those rights are carried out on campus," he said.

O'Flaherty further discussed creating a culture of human rights during an evening lecture Monday night entitled, "Protect Human Rights in Conflicts and Complex Emergencies." The human rights lawyer stated, "Integrity demands you speak out and not blind your eyes to abuses. It isn't about politics. It is about shared humanity."

Student Reaction to the Duke Pesta Situation

Due to an overwhelming amount of opinions concerning Dr. Pesta, that we have received, we have picked some of them to publish: Kelly Tessena, 2003

"Dr. Pesta is an incredible teacher. He has this amazing energy, and it's obvious that he's excited about literature. He always makes class interesting, but very informative at the same time. Dr. Pesta is the kind of teacher who's always willing to go the extra mile to help students out. This includes reading and thoroughly critiquing multiple drafts of papers in order to help us improve our writing, meeting with advisees outside his regular office hours, and generally being there for us in any way he can. Dr. Pesta is also involved in student's lives outside of the academic sphere. For example, he served as the temporary advisor to the school's Students for Creative Anachronism group while the regular advisor, Dr. Lionarons, was out of the country. Dr. Pesta's being fired is simply uncalled for. Why would the school fire a talented teacher who is extremely well-liked by his students? While Dr. Pesta may disagree with some members of the English Department on philosophical, political, or religious issues or about literary criticism, that's not reason for firing him. A liberal arts education is supposed to be about being exposed to different viewpoints and diverse ways of thinking. Getting rid of someone because of ideological disagreements is completely contrary to the whole purpose of a college education."

Genevieve Romeo, 2002

"To put it plainly, Duke Pesta is the best teacher I have ever had in my 15 years of schooling. I have taken seven classes with Dr. Pesta over the past two years. No other professor in the English department has made me think more or harder about life, learning, or literature. In Dr. Pesta's classes, we are taught not only about the literature, but the socioeconomic conditions, mores, values, art, religion, history, and culture of the society that produced them. Due to the range of classes that I have had with him—including the Bible as Literature, 19th Century Russian Literature, Greek Tragedy, and a seminar on Edmund Spenser's Faerie Queene—I feel incredibly prepared for graduate study. In addition to teaching a wide variety of materials, Dr. Pesta has helped me to dramatically improve my writing skills. He has marked each and every paper—from a simple 2-page essay to a senior seminar thesis—with extreme care and precision. He has helped me not only to write on a higher level, but to think on a higher level, one that goes beyond a superficial analysis that, quite honestly, earned me A's in other classes.

I have always wanted to teach English, but only in an environment that would foster new ideas while encouraging students to get the fullest and deepest meaning out of literature. In my first two years at Ursinus, I came to the conclusion that college was not that kind of environment. The discussions in my English classes were largely superficial and narrowly focused. The majority of students had not even bothered to read the works assigned, but were able to coast through classes because the professor either did not know or did not care. I felt that what I had learned in my AP English class in high school had better prepared me advanced study than did some of the classes I was taking here. In Dr. Pesta's classes, however, the students are sincerely interested and motivated. Despite the difficulty of the material (Spenser's English usage was particularly challenging), the vast majority of students in his classes are active and enthused learners. Class discussions are always lively and informed, and often continue into the dining halls and dormitories long after class is over. Dr. Pesta's classes reinvigorated my love of learning, and made me wish to pursue an advanced degree in English. To help me achieve that goal, Dr. Pesta helped me walk through every step of the process to apply to graduate schools. Of the eleven graduate programs I applied to, seven accepted me and five offered full tuition and a Teaching Assistantship. I firmly believe that without Dr. Pesta's advice and guidance, this would not have been a reality.

I can't even begin to tell you how many people have stories similar to mine. Isn't it baffling that his classes have such long waiting lists even though he is widely acknowledged to be one of the campus' toughest graders? Dr. Pesta is a popular teacher because he is a wonderful teacher. He makes you understand the literature on unparalleled intellectual, emotional, and spiritual levels. He has touched so many people here, and that's why his case has created such a reaction among the students. We simply do not understand how a professor who cares so much about his students can be fired."

Raquel Pidal, 2002

"Dr. Pesta is one of the best professors I've had in my four years at Ursinus. He has opened a new world of literature for me and has been influential in showing me how to appreciate its beauty and meaning. I have been able to carry this outlook over to all aspects of my life. The college's unjust treatment of Dr. Pesta is ethically and morally wrong, and the student body has a right to be informed about it, as well as outraged. In firing him, the administration is overlooking the fact that he is an incredible human being who has touched so many students' lives, both academically and personally. Professors like this are indispensable in furthering higher education—why would the college treat such a valuable educational asset as disposable? This clearly shows that our education is not, as we thought, the school's highest goal."

Jonathan Collier, 2005

"It is both a tragedy and an outrage that the administration seeks to rid this institution of a man with such passion for his work and loyalty to his students. It is my opinion, as is many others, that the administration is not pursuing the best interests of the students, and the school will forever be at a loss for this contemptible action."

Christine Ginty, 2004

"I was incredibly disappointed to hear that Dr. Pesta will not be returning next year. He is an enthusiastic professor who genuinely cares about his students and goes out of his way to help them. His unique teaching style and caring attitude make him, not only an excellent professor, but also a credit to this institution. I think I share the sentiments of many students when I say that Dr. Pesta will be greatly missed."

Sex for Sale: What Drives the Porn Industry?

Syreeta Dixon
Grizzly Writer

One day in human sexuality class, the teacher asked us to choose which topics we would like to speak on. "Commercial Sex" was my last choice. I didn't even know what she meant by commercial sex: commercial sex, as in sex in commercials or sex in the media? Our textbook defines commercial sex as sex for sale. Sex has been for sale since before Christ walked the earth. There's been a great demand for it, and there probably always will be. A character in a movie once said, "there's always work at the post office." I beg to differ, there's always work on the street corner. I feel that prostitution isn't the best business to be in, at least if you're the one for sale. There's always the chance your pimp might not find beating up on you cruel, or your customer could be some psychotic weirdo and even have every STD known to man. Still, it is a profitable business, and many people choose to do it. Before you read on I should let you know that some of my data is taken from the Internet and research my partners and I did for this class.

John Volkmer Named Montgomery County Poet Laureate

Meg Gallagher

Special to The Grizzly

John Volkmer, professor of English at Ursinus College, was selected as Montgomery County Poet Laureate by celebrated poet Gerald Stern.

An awards ceremony was held for Dr. Volkmer on Tuesday, April 16th at Arcadia College, at which Stern, winner of the National Book Award, will present him with a $500 award.

Refreshments began at 6:30 p.m., in the castle, followed by an awards ceremony at 7:30 p.m. and a poetry reading by Stern at 8 p.m. Entertainment was provided by the Tim Schumacher Jazz Trio.

Volkmer, whose winning entry was a humorous "Why I want to be the Montgomery County Poet Lariat," oversees the creative writing program at Ursinus, where he has been employed since 1987.

He works in many genres including poetry, short fiction, and creative nonfiction. Volkmer has won the Thomas Wolfe Fiction Prize and is a semi-regular contributor to the travel section of the Philadelphia Inquirer. His poems have been published in such venues as The Painted Bride Quarterly, Hellas, The Carolina Quarterly, and the South Dakota Review. Most recently, his essay on the poet A.E. Housman appeared in Parnassus.

He received a B.A. from the University of Colorado, M.A. in creative writing from the University of Denver, and Ph.D. in literature from the University of Nebraska.

Stern is the recipient of many awards, including the National Book Award, the Lamont Prize, a Guggenheim fellowship, three National Endowment for the Arts awards, a fellowship from The Academy of Arts and Letters and the Ruth Lilly Prize.

He has taught at Columbia University, New York University, Sarah Lawrence College, the University of Pittsburgh and the Writer's Workshop at the University of Iowa.

As Poet Laureate, Volkmer participated in the Poetry Personified poetry festival at the Montgomeryville, PA, Barnes & Noble on April 20th.

Volkmer, along with the runners-up of the Montgomery County Poet Laureate Competition 2002, will also be recognized at the Montgomery Theater in Souderton, on Friday, May 17th at 8 p.m. and will speak about writing and the writing process.

Greek Week Change Bad: an opinion

Sarah Ewald

Grizzly A and E Editor

I was going to try to think of some creative way to give my opinion of this year's Greek Week, but then I decided to be truthful.

Let's face it, Greek Week 2002 was completely and totally a huge disappointment.

Greek Week is supposed to be a time when everyone in all of the Greek organizations gets together and hangs out. It is supposed to be a fun time, and looking back on my time at Ursinus, the Greek Weeks of yesteryear were awesome. Everyone hung out, there were fun competitions, and everyone looked forward to the Toga Party, the picnic, or dated, and other parties.

I remember my sophomore year thinking how much fun Ursinus was during Greek Week and how nice it was that everyone could get together and have a blast.

But, this time is over and it is difficult where to place the blame.

This year's Greek Week was a sad, but true representation of what Ursinus has become, a letdown.

First of all, I am not going to dispute that some of the activities that take place during Greek Week promote alcohol consumption. I have nothing to say in defense to the administration's choice to ban activities like the beer crawl and the case race.

But, when the Greek community was stripped of its ability to participate in these activities, did it revolt and decide to do something equally fun in its place? No. Did anyone try to put together something just as fun that would bridge the gaps between the sororities and fraternities? No.

I am reminded of the movie "Animal House." When the brothers of the Delta House Fraternity were told by Dean Vernon Wormer that they were no longer allowed to party they did not just sit there and take it, they revolted and had in the words of John Belushi, "Toga! Toga!"

Now I am not saying that the Greeks at Ursinus put their diplomas on the line and possibly get kicked out of school. The answer to the problem is quite simple.

When I came to Ursinus there was something to do every night of the week (this is not an understatement). People were always hanging out until all hours of the morning and parties were amazing. Reimert was the heart of the campus and no one complained about the noise level there.

Nowadays, I am hard-pressed to find a party or even people hanging out on a Saturday night.

The Greek community is a major factor of the Ursinus social life, and anyone who disagrees has obviously never left their room since they moved into it. But it is a sinking ship, and unfortunately I am glad I am getting out now.

Now there is talk of all the organizations going national, and disbanding traditions and groups that have been around for almost a century.

I fear that when I come back here in five or so years the Ursinus I once knew will be gone and in its place will be some mutant form of the place I once called home.

This year's Greek Week was a result of the breakdowns in Greek life. If it wouldn't have happened this year, most likely it would have happened next year or the year after. Eventually, there may come a time when there is no Greek Week because there are no Greek organizations that know how to have fun.

So I say, don't let the disappointment of this year's Greek Week be a signal of things to come, let it be the turning point that revitalizes a Greek community which appears to be knocking on death's door.

Commencement and Baccalaureate Speakers Announced

Press Release from College Communicatoins

Award-winning poet Sonia Sanchez will be the speaker at the Ursinus College Commencement Saturday May 11. Ceremonies will begin at 10 a.m. on the campus front lawn, and will be held regardless of the weather.

Ursinus College President John Strassburger will present undergraduate degrees to 360 members of the Ursinus Class of 2002 and will confer an honorary degree on Sanchez and baccalaureate speaker, the Rev. Philipa Turner.

Sanchez, who joined Temple's University faculty in 1997, held the Lara Carnell Chair in English until her retirement in 1999. She is the author of "Shake Loose My Skin: New and Selected Poems," published recently, and has written six plays, numerous essays, more than a dozen books of poetry and three children's books.

Her 1997 work, "Does Your House Have Lions?" which chronicles her brother's battle with AIDS, was nominated for both the National Books Critics' Circle Award and the NAACP Image Award.

She earned a B.A. in political science from Hunter College, did postgraduate work at New York University, and was a pioneer in developing black studies courses at what is now San Francisco State University in the late 1960s.

Among the many honors she has received are the Outstanding Arts Award from the Pennsylvania Coalition of 100 Black Women, the Governor's Award for Excellence in the Humanities and a Pew Fellowship for the Arts. Delivering the sermon for May 10, 6:30 p.m. baccalaureate service will be the Rev. Philipa A. Turner, associate priest in The Church of the Heavenly Rest, New York, N.Y., where she initiated curricula for younger children and for teens. An experienced chaplain, she was the staff at the Healthcare Chaplaincy to the Program for Children with AIDS at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center, and a school chaplain at St. James' Episcopal Church in New York, as well as serving in other healthcare pastoral posts.

Her volunteer work has taken her to Bolivia, to a Sisters of Charity home for the mentally and physically disabled; to Durham, England, where she volunteered on a suicide hotline; Zomba, Malawi, and Bonda, Zimbabwe.

She holds a master's of divinity degree from the Yale University Divinity School, and B.A. in theology from Durham University.

The public is welcome to attend the commencement ceremony, weather permitting. In the event of rain, families of graduates will have the priority access to seating under the tent.

Celebrity Profile: Matthew McConaughey

Kelly Gray
Grizzly A&E Editor

You may remember him as the talented lawyer in "A Time To Kill," but Matthew McConaughey is starring in more films that have moved away from your typical drama.

McConaughey was born in Uvalde, Texas on November 9, 1969. The Texas native, who also lived in the town of Longview for sometime, started his college career at the University of Texas. He was a member of the Delta Tau Delta International Fraternity.

Before graduating from college, McConaughey contemplated starting a career in law, but changed his mind and majored in the theater. Before graduating in 1992, McConaughey directed a 12-minute short film "Chicano Chariots," which focused on the world of low riders.

After finishing college, McConaughey earned a small role in "My Boyfriend's Back." Next, McConaughey starred in "Dazed and Confused," centered on a group of students becoming seniors in high school in the 1970's. He played all of these roles while finishing up his spring semester at University of Texas.

Angeles, he took the role as the bloodthirsty truck driver in 1994's "The Return of the Texas Chainsaw Massacre."

When McConaughey moved out to Los Angeles, he earned a role of a baseball player in Disney's "Angels in the Outfield" with Danny Glover. Next, McConaughey starred in Herbert Ross' picture "Boys On The Side." He played the role of a cop who dates Drew Barrymore's character. In 1996, McConaughey earned the role in "Lone Star" directed by John Sayles.

Also, in 1996, McConaughey earned his biggest role to date. Director Joel Schumacher cast McConaughey in the leading role in the John Grisham film adaptation of "A Time To Kill." The film also starred Samuel L. Jackson, Sandra Bullock, and Kevin Spacey. McConaughey earned rave reviews from critics and made over $100 million at the box office. "A Time To Kill" placed McConaughey on the a-list with actors and directors.

McConaughey was the first choice for the lead role in 1997's "Titanic," but somehow Leonardo DiCaprio beat him out.

In 1997, McConaughey starred in Robert Zemeckis' film "Contact" with Jodie Foster. This film was another success for McConaughey and made over $100 million dollars. As if his starpower could not get any bigger, in 1997, Steven Spielberg cast McConaughey with Sir Anthony Hopkins and Morgan Freeman in "Amistad", which was the true story about African Americans revolting on a slave ship in 1839.

In 1999, McConaughey earned the leading role in Ron Howard's film "EdTV." The film focused on a young man caught up in the fame of reality television. McConaughey starred in "U-571" in 2000 with Jon Bon Jovi. The submarine action thriller was a success.

During all of this, McConaughey had time to start up his own production company, j.k. livin'. The company produced 1998's "Making Sandwiches" with Sandra Bullock's film company. Also, the company executive produced the documentary "Hands on a Hardbody: The Documentary." The documentary earned rave reviews from critics. Again in 1998, McConaughey wrote, produced, and directed a short film

"The Rebel." McConaughey played the leading role of a man who breaks rules while imagining himself as a criminal.

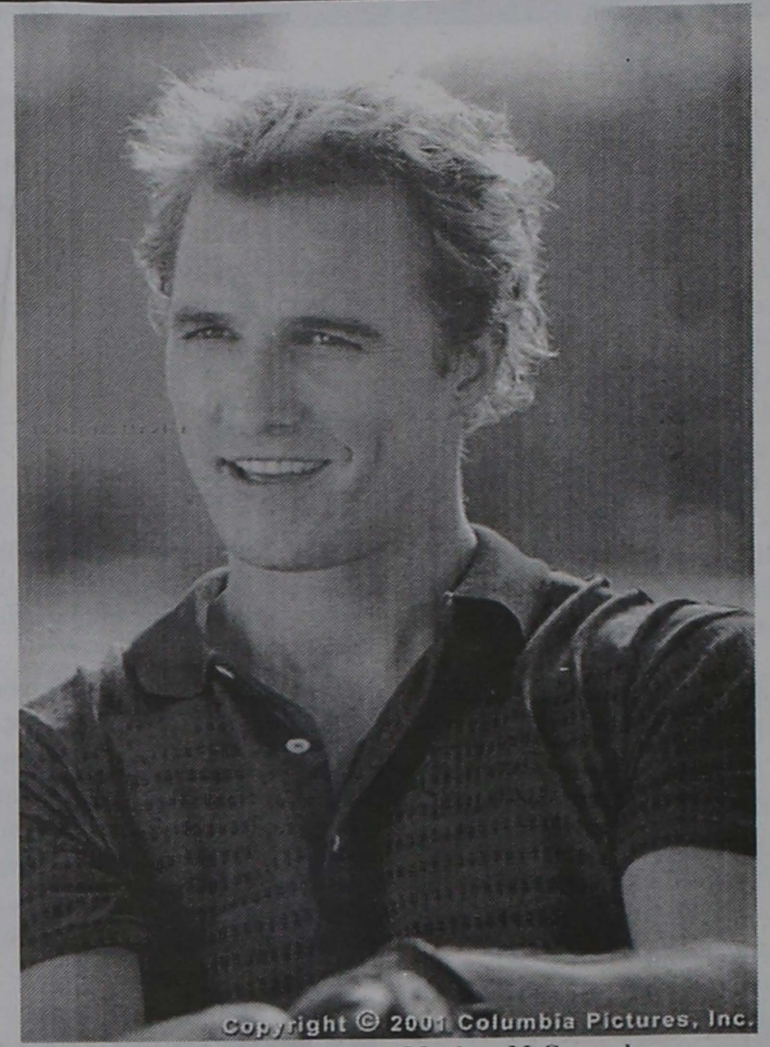

In 2001, McConaughey starred in the hit "The Wedding Planner" with Jennifer Lopez.

On the personal side, McConaughey has dated a couple actresses and ran into some trouble with the law.

After making "A Time To Kill," McConaughey dated both Ashley Judd and Sandra Bullock, who starred in the film.

In October 1999, police arrived at McConaughey's house on a disturbance call. Police found him playing the bongos in the nude and some marijuana in the house. But McConaughey resisted arrest.

Although McConaughey has had some personal problems,

Copyright © 2001 Columbia Pictures, Inc.
Matthew McConaughey

you can now see him on the big screen in the film "Frailty." The film directed by Bill Paxton is a thriller starring McConaughey and Paxton about a serial killer. The film is receiving great reviews everywhere.

Even though we haven't seen McConaughey on the screen in a while, we can hope to see him in more roles like his role as the attorney in "A Time To Kill" very soon.

Y100 Fez: A Concert With No Turkish Hats

Kate Petersen
Grizzly Staff Writer

What's better than going to a concert with one of today's hottest bands? How about a concert with over ten of today's hottest bands? That's exactly what Y100's Fezival is all about.

The 2002 Fezival, the five-year anniversary of this musical extravaganza, will take place on Friday, June 7 at the Tweeter Center. Tickets go on sale Friday, April 26 at 4pm.

Past Fezivals have featured such bands as: STP, No Doubt, Third Eye Blind, Barenaked Ladies, Weezer, Offspring, Smashmouth, Greenday, Mighty Mighty Bosstones, Matchbox 20, Real Big Fish, and more. Every year the show gets bigger and bigger and more bands join the musical insanity.

This year's Fez will feature, on the main stage:

System of a Down—This four-man alternative metal band from California began playing together in 1993. Their latest album Toxicity features such hits as Chop Suey and Toxicity. Perhaps fans will even get an up-close glimpse of these guys. As Dolmayan, said, "When we go on tour, you'll usually find us somewhere in the audience watching the other bands we tour with. That's the best place to watch from. There's a point to all those speakers being pointed out as opposed to in."

Incubus—This band, which MTV describes as being a mix of funk, thrash-rock and hip-hop will be on tour this summer. With a sold out show May, Incubus will return to Philly for the Fezival. Their latest album, Morning View, features such hits as Wish You Were Here and Nice to Know You.

Jimmy Eat World—From Mesa, Arizona, this quartet has been together for eight years. With the release of their self-titled album, Jimmy Eat World, they have finally earned mainstream success. The sudden exposure has surprised the band members, but they have tried to stand grounded. Singles from their new album "Bleed American" and "The Middle" have gained great radio airplay and placed on the Modern Rock Charts. In addition to playing the Y100 Fez, the band went on tour with Blink 182 and Green Day in the Pop Disaster Tour.

Alien Ant Farm—These four guys put on a Sonic Session at Indre Studios with Y100 in February. It was an intimate concert experience for about 50 listeners. Now they are moving on to bigger and better things. Their latest album, ANTHology, features such hits as Movies, Smooth Criminal, and Attitude. The show should be impressive. As frontman Dryden Mitchell explains, "It's magical when we play our stuff for fans and they light up. We take our music very seriously, but we're also a very tongue-in-cheek group. We want to keep that enjoyment going. Everything with us is a pun or a half-way joke, even if we're the only ones in on it."

Other bands appearing on the main stage include: Papa Roach, Pete Yorn, Unwritten Law and Our Lady of Peace. And on the X-box side stage, bands include:

Dashboard Confessional—The leader of this band was a teacher and school administrator before he realized that his true calling was music. MTV describes Carrabba's music as intimate and visceral. Their latest hit is Screaming Infidelities.

Phantom Planet—This five-man band, with Jason Schwartzman playing drums, recently wrapped up a US tour and released a new album. The band feels as though touring is beneficial. As Brautbar explains, "Even in the last couple of months we've been on tour, we've grown as musicians. And I feel like we're a little more competent. We've been exposed to so many bands, and just being around new people, touring and being exposed to new music, we've grown." Their album, The Guest, features their latest hit, California.

Other bands appearing on the side stage include: The Executioners, Goldfinger, Quarashi, and Familiar 48. More bands are still to be announced. So listen to Y100 for details.

In addition to the many bands at the show, Y100's street squad and radio personalities will also be at the event, giving away lots of free stuff. It's a fun summer concert experience that you don't want to miss!

Tips finding a Summer Job

Fallon Szarko
Grizzly Copy Editor

In the next few weeks, college students (including myself) will be scrambling to find a summer job. Here are some resources you can use to help you land a job:

1. Job Flash-Ursinus College's bulletin of off-campus jobs <http://www.ursinus.edu/content.asp?page=ForStudents/>

<http://www.summerjobs.com/>

This site is helpful if you are staying on campus for the summer or live close to Ursinus because most jobs are in the Collegeville area.

2. Summer Jobs—an international listing of seasonal and summer employment opportunities.

3. Flip Dog—Search for jobs by your location and the field in which you'd like to work. <http://www.flipdog.com>

4. If these don't work you can always try the classified section of your local newspaper.

Good luck and happy job-hunting!

Ruminations: A Look At College Life

Sarah Ewald
Grizzly A&E Editor

Did you ever imagine that you could earn money from your observations on college life.

Well, Aaron Karo, author of the monthly e-mail column, Ruminations, did just that.

Ruminations, for those who have not been lucky enough to receive it, is a column about Karo's observations on his college experience at the University of Pennsylvania.

He started his column when he was a freshman back in Sept. 1997. Karo's column has since grown, and now that he has graduated from the University of Pennsylvania he is publishing a book, Ruminations on College Life, which is based off of is monthly column. "The book will consist of all of my best jokes from the original Ruminations e-mail column, plus over one-third of the book is brand new material that none of you have ever seen. I really hope it will become the first real guide to college life—perfect for pre-frosh, college kids, and alumni alike," Karo said.

The column itself was hilarious, and Karo seemed to really grasp the essence of what college was really like. He often commented on how liking the Dave Matthews Band seemed to be a pre-requisite for going to college, and on how crazy fraternity life really was. He would have columns dedicated solely to his spring break trips, and always seemed to make me laugh out loud while reading the column. Since Karo's graduation he has been living in New York City, and it has been a little over a year since the last issue of Ruminations was put out, but never fear, because Karo has started a whole new Ruminations on his life in the Big Apple.

So if you just can't get enough of Ruminations and Karo's wit or if you want to see what Ruminations is all about, you can pick up his book on July 30, 2002.

On The Hunt For A Job

Katie Lambert
Grizzly Writer

Are you a senior? Are you looking for that perfect job for life after graduation? Do you have any idea what you want to do with the rest of your life?

If you're still unsure of what direction you want to take after May 11th, I recommend checking out one of the best career websites on the Net: www.jobhuntersbible.com.

This website, developed by Richard N. Bolles as a supplement to his book What Color is Your Parachute? (Ten Speed Press), is full of advice, ideas, and support for what you're planning on doing or thinking about doing out there in the real world.

Are you looking for a job in a particular field, but aren't sure where to find it? Check out the Job Openings link on the Job Hunters' Bible. How about what salary you should expect to start off with for a certain job? Just go to the site's Find Out link. Even if you don't have your resume built yet, the Job Hunters' Bible can give you tips on how to create one, and even where to post it, inside the Create link.

If you haven't even gotten this far yet, and you still don't know what you want to do with yourself after life at Ursinus, the Job Hunters' Bible will let you take an online interactive test that evaluates your likes, hobbies, and personality, and then gives you a summary of what kind of career field you might like to pursue.

Need to find a phone number for a particular employer or business? Yep, the Job Hunters' Bible has that information ready and waiting for you as well. What if there's a certain website you're looking for involving career decisions that you can't find? Chances are, the Job Hunters' Bible will have it listed for you under the Just the Links link.

So, what happens if you don't land that job that you've had your heart set on? Don't give up! The Job Hunters' Bible has ideas waiting for you under the Plan B link in case you strike out.

Bolles, website creator and operator, is full of profound information that will make you feel so much better if you're feeling a little down about leaving the college life to get out into the working life. To take your ideas even further and to obtain even more valuable advice, Bolles suggests checking out the 2002 edition of What Color is Your Parachute? for extra help.

So, when in doubt, when in depression, when in denial—go to www.jobhuntersbible.com to find yourself the perfect career. I promise, you'll walk away relieved.

Hockey Intramurals

Kelly Gray
Grizzly Editor-in-Chief

For the first time, Ursinus is offering intramural field hockey to all students. Both girls and guys have the opportunity to play the sport. Also, this is great for people who played hockey in high school and did not continue to play at the collegiate level.

With ten co-ed teams, in two divisions, everyone can enjoy the great game of field hockey. The season lasts three weeks and teams in the division will play each other once. Then after the season ends, the two best teams from each division will play for the championship.

Though intramural field hockey allows field hockey players from Ursinus to participate, the game is very competitive. While playing, each team has five players on the floor with no goalie. There are many rules that are supposed to be followed, but very now and then someone uses that very dangerous back swing. Of course, you cannot forget those guys who just love to make the sport very aggressive for everyone out on the floor.

Even though field hockey may look like a difficult sport, after a while it is very easy to play. This is a great program for Ursinus students to become involved in. If you play soccer, just remember do not kick the field hockey ball with your foot!

Thank you, everyone for a great year! I'll see you next year, when Kelly and I improve the newspaper even more, for your enjoyment! Thanks! - Ann

Family or no Family: That is the question for many career women

Quinn Dinsmore
Grizzly Writer

When I was 7, I truly wanted to be the first woman President. I grew up in an empowered generation, which told little girls they could achieve any goal they set to seek equality and financial independence. While becoming President is no longer in my future, I am pursuing a career in broadcasting that will entail a lot of sacrifices. But I have been so lucky to have that option at all.

My grandmother told me that 50 years ago, women went to college to become teachers and social workers, but a large percentage spent their time searching for a husband. That concept seems so foreign here at school where I believe I can be both a career woman and a mother. But as some recent studies reveal, little girls with big dreams may not have come as far as I thought.

A new Times story entitled "Baby Bust" reveals a two-pronged problem for women that should worry us as college students. New information suggests those of us planning to have a family long after establishing a career may not have all the time in the world. Fertility rates for women over 40 are plunging. "Those women who are at the top of their game could have had it all, children and career, if they wanted it," suggests Pamela Madsen, executive director of the American Infertility Association. "The problem was, nobody told them the truth about their bodies." That means we may have to decide whether to start a career or a family earlier, because the biological clock is ticking.

Big shock right? Most of my female classmates told me they are fully aware of that decision to be made at some point. Not many women want to wait until age 40 anyway. Everyone has a different view of the perfect life, balancing career and family in the idealistic way only 20 year olds imagine possible. But a few of us sincerely hope to have a combination of both, realizing the obstacles in our way.

Biology may be unforgiving, but so is corporate culture. There are countless stories of women who voluntarily leave their career to raise children, returning to find that the way back in is extremely difficult. A double standard exists for those who try to follow the "Mommy track," so many women throw themselves into their careers exclusively. That's admirable; a woman who achieves her dream should be respected. But according to some new studies and NY Times editorials, being a CEO doesn't go over well on dates. Sylvia Ann Hewlett, an economist, conducted a survey and found that 55 percent of 35-year-old career women are childless. Adding five years, she found between a third and half of 40-year-old professional women are childless. Furthermore, among corporate executives who earn $100,000 or more, 49 percent of the women did not have children, compared with only 10 percent of the men.

"Nowadays," Hewlett says, "the rule of thumb seems to be that the more successful the woman, the less likely it is she will find a husband or bear a child. For men, the reverse is true." Great. Now if I choose my career completely, will my chances of having a family be even slimmer? And will I ever find someone who admires my career ambitions instead of being scared off by them?

Maureen Dowd of The New York Times posed some of those questions in her article, "Who's Afraid of a Smart Woman?" The moral of her story is, the more women accomplish, the more they have to sacrifice socially. I don't fully accept that. I watched my parents try to give 100 percent in their careers and at home, instilling in my family a desire to work hard without sacrificing family values. It wasn't easy but it can be done. These studies shouldn't scare us to either extreme, reducing our options to the 1950s housewife or the driven executive who dies alone.

Our generation certainly needs to know they can't wait forever for a family because time flies after graduation, and our bodies don't follow the demands of certain career paths. But making these choices also depends on what society is willing to do to give women as many options as possible.

The way companies look at women struggling with this dilemma could change. The way our culture views a successful woman could certainly stand some improvement. And I know plenty of guys who aren't intimidated by smart women. Many proponents of gender equality support getting rid of the corporate tradition that punishes women for taking time for family and a societal view that punishes women for wanting it all. The bottom line is, our generation will be faced with tough choices and I'm starting to wonder what I will choose... and what life will be like for my daughter!

that pornography exists because of our social attitudes about sex.

While sex is a commodity in America, it is not something that is talked about outside of close circles. In class, as part of our presentation we showed clips from four porn movies. Before we did, the teacher asked if anyone had ever seen a porn movie. Almost everyone raised their hand, but most were not comfortable with watching these movies in class. When asked if anyone was turned on by what they saw some raised their hands and specified that the homosexual porn turned them off.

It is ok to express what you do not like, but when it comes to being honest about what is pleasurable, everyone is tightlipped. This attitude comes to many Americans from our Puritanical ancestry. Sex was something unspoken and evil. Though most would not consider himself or herself to be conservative about sex, no one wants to talk about it publicly, especially in a class setting. This makes sex something mystical and exotic and porn helps with this image. All advertisements for porn are shown late at night, and all feature women and men that fit into idealized images of sexy men and beautiful women.

The late night approach to advertising is mainly due to sheltering children from these images, but at the same time signal to the adult that what they are watching is bad, and while this makes almost all feel guilty, it also makes it more appealing. As the saying goes, we always want what we can't get.

In 1969, Denmark rescinded their laws banning pornography. This caused a rise in pornography profits for some time, but slowly declined and has been low ever since. Remember Prohibition? Making something illegal doesn't always stop people from wanting it, especially when there are as many people out there saying "come get it," as there are those saying that's bad. When something as pleasurable as sex is restricted from all talk and mention, people will resort to underhanded methods to enjoy themselves. But if it is seen as being something positive and natural, then maybe there will be a decrease in pornographic images in America.
