143 Students Call Richter/North Hall Home New Dorm Open and Popular

Kate Juliano
Grizzly Opinions Editor

After much anticipation and planning, Richter-North Hall has been completed and is already housing its capacity of 143 students. The dorm is reserved for upperclassmen.

The opening came just in time for the start of the fall semester as over 1,400 students returned to campus. The facility is enabling the campus to house more students due to its remarkably large student body for the 2002-2003 year.

In addition to the amount of space available for student living space, Richter-North also provides common areas at the end of each hallway for students to study, hang out or enjoy the spectacular views of the field hockey and football fields. Spacious lounges on the first floor and basement level of the building also provide additional room for CIE classes to take place.

Stephanie McNulty, Director of Residence Life and Assistant Dean of Students comments, "No other dormitory on campus has as many common areas or lounges for students. The glass windows [at either ends of the hallways] provide the opportunity for people from the outside to see the life and activity of our campus."

The administration is not the only group who has praised the outcome of the building.

Students living throughout the building say they feel very lucky to be able to experience the newest addition to the Ursinus campus firsthand.

"It's a lot quieter here," remarks senior Abbey Sangmeister. "[Richter-North Hall] is cleaner and more spacious. I also like the fact that the building is in a pretty good location in relation to other buildings on campus."

The building is named in honor of Richard P. Richter, who was president of the college for 19 years before retiring in December of 1994.

Under Construction Again: Field House Floor to be Redone

Aubre Andre
Grizzly Staff Writer

As the 2002 fall semester began, returning students quickly realized the field house is under construction...again.

The Field House was completed last year, but an unforeseen problem arose. The floor was laid at the wrong temperature, leaving dead spots in the courts and air bubbles in the track.

The entire floor has been torn out and will be under construction for the next few weeks.

Fortunately, the weather has permitted the fall sports teams to continue practices outside. Most teams will not be directly affected by the absence of the facility as construction continues.

Assistant Athletic Director Carrie Reilly-Kirk feels few teams will lose any practice time or be inconvenienced by the construction.

"Volleyball is the only sport that would have had their entire pre-season in the field house," she said.

"Field hockey would have liked to use the field house for a practice or two, but they were able to work their schedule with volleyball to share the Helfferich gym without any problems," she continued.

Many athletes wondered why the renovation was not done in the summer and how much money Ursinus may be spending on it. The difficult construction began in July and plans indicate it will be finished shortly.

The construction company, who has to redo two other facility floors, is paying for the new floor.

Orientation 2002 A Success for Freshmen and OAs

Quinn Dinsmore
Grizzly News Editor

Many Ursinus students spent the end of August enjoying the last days of summer and packing for the fall semester.

At the same time, thirty-three upperclassmen returned to campus early to give freshmen their first taste of college.

Orientation for first year students started on Thursday, August 22 as 429 freshmen arrived at Ursinus. The job of each orientation assistant was to make the students feel at home despite a hectic schedule.

During the week, OAs organized and participated in safety talks, community service, sessions explaining day to day life on campus and group mixers, as well as various entertainment and the dinner dance.

Carol Bohny, one of the orientation interns who planned many of the activities, explained, "The most important part of orientation is definitely that the freshmen get a chance to meet each other in a comfortable environment. We strive to make them feel at home so that the transition is an easy one."

OA Kacie Meyer agreed about the purpose of the program for the freshmen.

"Orientation is important for them to meet each other and learn about the college," Meyer said.

Preparing for the students' arrival took extensive effort behind the scenes.

Bohny admitted, "There's a lot of hair pulling and moments of insanity, but it's all fun in the end."

The OAs were chosen for their enthusiasm, people skills and dedication to making the week as enjoyable as possible for students adjusting to college life. The group on a whole was pleased with the program and the results of their efforts.

"The OAs worked well together... who knew so many personalities and leaders could collaborate to create such a wonderful group of people?," said Meghan Rooney.

The OAs gave up a week of their summer to help the freshmen adjust, but also to benefit from a unique leadership opportunity themselves. The OAs went to camp before the freshmen arrive to develop cooperation and teamwork, as well as to be familiar with each other. Many of the volunteers felt the week was worthwhile to their personal development.

Sophomore Jessica Soto said, "I met people that I otherwise would have had no contact with simply because we do not share the same academic or social circles. In that sense, the upper classmen benefit from this program as much as the freshmen do, if not more."

The upperclassmen chose to get involved for a variety of reasons.

Meeting the OAs from her freshman orientation period made Heather Pugh want to be an OA this year.

"They made me feel at home, loved, and well, they were so nice, and fun! I wanted to change someone's life.

I wanted to help someone out just like they helped me," Pugh said.

All the OAs feel orientation is vital to the freshmen's experience on campus.

Drew Petersen said, "Though many of the activities can be a little cheesy or childish, we all do them together and have that much in common already."

The group also shared their enthusiasm for the campus. Fallon Szarko said, "I hope freshmen got to meet more people in their class and start to feel comfortable calling Ursinus College 'home.'"

And even though orientation is complete, the OAs believe the adjustment is ongoing.

Pugh said, "I hope the freshmen allow themselves to grow and find who they truly are and what they want to be in their years here."

Other OAs like Eli Goldstein remind the freshmen they are never alone.

"They must realize that there are 400 students that feel the same way they do. Nobody likes change, review for tenure.

Students can submit letters to be shared with the Promotion and Tenure committee, and the faculty member.

This year, the following members of the faculty are being reviewed for tenure:

Dr. Beth Bailey, Biology
Dr. Lynne Edwards, Communication Studies and Theatre
Dr. Thomas Rutledge, Chemistry

Student letters should be sent to Dean Judith T. Levy, Office of the Dean by October 1, 2002.

Three Professors Up for Tenure

Tenure is a long-term commitment by the college to academic excellence and freedom. The student handbook describes tenure in this way:

"As a result of its commitment to academic freedom, the Board of Trustees of the College has provided for the granting of tenure. Both faculty and students benefit from the atmosphere of free inquiry which the institution of academic tenure protects."

Tenure is a commitment of employment to faculty who meet the College's standards of excellence, who continue to work at an appropriately high level, and who meet the ethical standards of the academic community.

The awarding of tenure is not automatic, nor can tenure be earned simply by meeting certain minimum requirements. The tenure review process is an integral part of the College's pursuit of excellence, and the decision to confer tenure must have as its goal the long-term strengthening of the particular academic department and of the College as a whole.

In accordance with the Student Handbook, student comments on teaching effectiveness are invited at the time of a faculty member's

Bridge Program Unique and Important at Ursinus

Rachel Daniel
Grizzly Staff Writer

The Bridge Program, a little known program in the Ursinus Community, has been in existence since the late 1980s.

Not only does the Bridge Program prepare students of color for the rigorous school year ahead of them, but it also allows them to better understand themselves and one another as students of color in a predominantly white college community.

Although it was originally intended to make sure that students of color coming into the college had a sense of academic confidence, the motives have somewhat changed, according to Professor Keita.

She is an active participant in the Bridge Program. Keita believes the new purpose is to insure that students of color willingly stay and connect to the campus community.

Bridge is a fun filled three works filled with hard work, long debates, and weekend trips to give the students a chance to see one another in a different light.

Also planned in past years were outings that are more culturally based, such as the book signing of Toure's newest work, and a show about the art of break dancing and hip hop.

When asked how he felt about the Bridge Program, Aaron Wheeler, a participant of Bridge replied, "Bridge was an excellent opportunity for me to bond with other African-Americans and Latinos such as myself. People of color are a minority at Ursinus College, and, without it, many African-American and Latino kids would have felt very much out of place being here.

For Heather Saunders, it was one of the best experiences of {her} life.

Dean Nolan commends the efforts of all those who have worked hard to make this small, liberal arts college a mirror of what the world looks like.

The Bridge Program may have started out with a handful of students, but it has incrementally grown over the years, as have the amount of minorities on campus.

According to the Office of Admissions, minority enrollment at Ursinus is at 18 percent.

Each Bridge group is unique, but over the past few years, students get more involved now than before, says Professor Keita.

"I didn't have anything like that in school, but I could have used it," Professor Keita said.

"It was a lifetime experience," said Darron Harley, about his time at Bridge.

"I learned lifelong lessons, made lifelong friends, with whom I will have lifelong memories."

Many Bridge participants feel this program will hopefully continue to uplift and encourage students of color to apply and attend such a unique college.

Freshman Give Three Thumbs Up To Their So-Called "Overcrowded" Rooms"

Heather Tresgler
Grizzly Staff Writer

For returning Ursinus students, the thought of squeezing not one, not two, but three students, along with their belongings, into a double-occupancy room, may send a dreadful chill down their spines.

However, to the eighty-seven freshmen that currently reside in such rooms in both Brodbeck and Curtis halls, their so-called "overcrowded" residences are nothing short of their expectations of a humble abode.

"I really don't mind sharing a room with two other people," states freshman Valerie Schartel, Curtis Hall resident.

"The only negative experience my roommates and I have had so far has been with the network hookups for our laptops."

According to Stephanie McNulty, Director of Residence Life, such technical, and even electrical problems in the used-to-be "doubles" should be diminished.

"During the summer, the physical plant made sure that all rooms that were to be changed from double-occupancy to triple occupancy had sufficient internet hook-ups, as well as electrical outlets," says McNulty.

Aside from the addition of outlets and hook-ups, McNulty pointed out that brand new furniture, more susceptible for a triple occupancy room, was placed in Brodbeck.

"We wanted to place all of the freshman class in two residential locations," adds McNulty, "But we did not want them to be uncomfortable."

Therefore, along with the new furniture, eight bathrooms in the Brodbeck, Wilkinson, Curtis (BWC) dorm complex were renovated, adding one new shower in each to accommodate the extra students.

McNulty was not alone in the decision to triple-up freshman students.

"When we realized how big the freshman class was, we turned to the Room Lottery Selection Committee," admits McNulty. Comprised of an assortment of sophomores, juniors, and seniors who were inducted upon nomination and evaluation, the Room Lottery Selection Committee met a series of times throughout the Spring 2002 semester to discuss the issue of freshman clustering in BWC.

"We just felt that it would be better to place all of the freshman together in two locations so that there would not be scattered freshman in Reimert, or Main Street Houses, who feel ostracized from the rest of the freshman class who would have lived in the Quad," states Faith Lockner, committee member.

"I questioned the committee various times on if they were positive this was the right decision," McNulty reassures. "But they really felt strongly about this decision, and so do I."

During the Room Lottery Selection Committee meetings, the alternative did arise that perhaps several houses on Main Street could be turned into all-freshman houses, but was turned down for the same reasons Lockner suggests.

In the end, twenty-nine used-to-be-doubles, were turned into triple-occupancy rooms. However, a walk down the halls of BWC is almost identical today as what it was last year. Only now, when you peek into a room to say hello, you get not one, not two, but three thumbs up!

Dirty rooms make move-in extra Grungy!

Greg Pellish
Grizzly Staff Writer

This is a matter I believe needs to be attended to very quickly because it disgusts me to even think about it. When I move in to my new room at the beginning of the school year I don't expect much. There should be two beds, two desks, and two chairs for the use of my roommate and I. But more importantly, the room should be cleaned, both dusted and vacuumed.

This is not what I found as I returned to Ursinus College for my Junior year. As I opened the door on Sunday afternoon not only did I walk into cobwebs, but I also found my carpet with dirt on it and my desk and windowsill with layers of dust accumulated. There was also a stain on the carpet that did not look as if it had been attended to since the previous company left it there.

Is it hard for Ursinus College to hire a cleaning service a week or two before students arrive on campus to clean the rooms thoroughly? It is not my job to come in my room and clean before I am able to move my belongings in for the year. This is a service the school owes to all its working and paying students. My parents and I pay entirely too much money for me to live on campus and find my room in such a state.

I may be the only person on campus who feels this way but from talking with other students and being around other parents on "move-in" day I'm not so sure that that is the case. Other students on campus, who also faced similar filthy rooms when moving back into school, should voice their opinion and let it be known that they were not happy with the dirty living environments the school left for us at the beginning of this school year.

What's it like to be named Bart?

Bart Brooks
Grizzly Staff Writer

"Hey, wouldn't it be funny if your last name was Simpson?" and usually followed by a guffaw.

"No," I reply, stone faced.

Has popular culture poisoned the mind of many students that badly that a kid named Bart is automatically a distant relative of the mischievous yellow cartoon character with the same name? Those people who ask me if it would be funny if my last name were Simpson probably think that my parents named me after Bart Simpson (despite that I am nearly 19, and the Simpsons have been on air for about ten years).

And I am not the only victim to pop culture. For example, how many Will Smiths are there besides the famous rapper? After a popular Disney movie comes out in theatres, the latest slew of babies is named after them (Ariel from The Little Mermaid is the best example).

Ok, so maybe the word "poison" was a bit harsh, but the fact remains: whenever something tremendously popular comes out, anything that can be associated with it usually is—such as my name (and let me add for the record: in no way am I like Bart Simpson, and therefore, any comparisons would be useless).

Popular culture has such a profound impact on our society today, and it influences the way some people think. After all, a movie like King Kong worked well then, but how would it be accepted today? Or what about the Werewolf? Similarly, how would The Blair Witch Project have been treated five decades ago? Popular culture defines the society at the time, but not individuals (in other words, stop calling me Simpson, please).

All seriousness aside, it is quite scary to think that our culture is largely defined by a few men in suits who rarely even act in the way most of us popular cultists do. Is the way America behaves dictated by the CEOs of major movie, television, and radio networks, as well as the fashion moguls and the actors and actresses of Hollywood? It is so. The proof is in the way I explain my name:

"Hey, I'm Bart."

"Mark?"

"No." Then I sigh. "Bart, as in Bart Simpson."

"Oh."

At least we can be thankful that Frank Zappa's sons, Ahmet and Dweezil never became a part of the mainstream culture.

"Enemy Combatant" Declarations: The Wrong Policy for America

Dan Devlin
Grizzly Staff Writer

As we approach the one year anniversary of the September 11th attacks, we all will remember the innocent victims of the sweeping evil associated with international terrorism. Much has changed since then. Patriotism is arguably at an all time high, and sweeping new anti-terrorism laws and policies have been passed by our leaders in Washington. Though most of those are necessary, there is one policy that is of particular concern to many. The government is now saying it has the ability to label anyone they suspect of terrorism as an "enemy combatant." This means they have the power to hold anyone incommunicado, without access to a lawyer, the courts, or their families.

This is of particular concern when American citizens are being dealt with, like Jose Padilla and Yasser Esam Hamdi. I understand that we are fighting a war against terrorism, but we must differentiate between foreign nationals captured on a battlefield and American citizens who have inalienable constitutional rights. Both Padilla and Hamdi are American citizens who have the right to an attorney, a trial by jury, and due process, yet they are not being given these rights because they are classified as "enemy combatants" by President Bush. One of the first things you learn in American Government class about the Constitution is that it is the supreme law of the land, meaning that all other laws are subordinate to it. Therefore, their constitutional rights must take precedence over an obscure declaration that the president has placed on them. Every American citizen must be given those rights, and so should they. The fact that they are citizens with rights makes them different than foreign nationals being detained by the military. In addition, giving someone a lawyer and access to the courts is not a national security risk, as some have argued. It never has been and never will be. A lawyer does not guarantee anything except that suspects have the ability to tell their side of the story and that their rights are being protected. Serial murderers and other violent criminals are given these rights every day because the Constitution says they have them. That has not changed.

Also, unlike those foreign nationals, they are charged with federal crimes. This puts them in the criminal justice system, and when someone is charged with a crime, there are rules that must be followed, namely the fifth and sixth amendments to the constitution.

This is the same for every criminal, no matter what they're charged with. Terrorism is a federal crime and is no different than bank robbery, kidnapping or any other. Criminals have the same guaranteed constitutional rights for each.

Moreover, I understand that the government maintains that a declaration of "enemy combatant" cannot be contested in the courts. This is most worrisome. If that is the case, the government can label anyone they want an enemy combatant, hold them indefinitely, without access to a lawyer or the courts or even presenting any evidence as to why they believe this person should be labeled an enemy combatant. The courts should have a right to evaluate how the government judges someone as such. What if they're wrong? That is why we have courts in the first place; to make sure the government is doing their job the right way. That's why we have the Bill of Rights; to protect us from the government. This incontestable power the government claims they have is a very scary thought. How long until they start to do what I previously described? The courts must have some say in this so we will all be protected from the power of the federal government.

In conclusion, the ability of the government to label someone an enemy combatant must be carefully looked at. First of all, it provides them a loophole to deny Americans their inalienable constitutional rights. It is absurd to think that abiding by the guidelines in the Constitution is a threat to us and our security. It's just not true. Second of all, when the criminal justice system is being used, there are rules that need to be followed. All federal crimes are prosecuted using the same rules: every defendant gets a lawyer; every defendant has a right to due process, etc. The rules can't be changed for a few cases just because the government says so. It violates our basic principles of fairness and justice. Finally, it is dangerous to give the government power that cannot be contested in the courts. The potential for abuse is extreme. Our system relies on checks and balances and this totally dissolves that. Our founding fathers saw it fit to limit the powers of the government for good reason, as history as shown. The Constitution cannot be disregarded by men like John Ashcroft and George W. Bush simply because they are in a position of power. I understand they are doing what they may think is best, but violating the rights of the American people is never right, it's just plain wrong.

Signs: Not Just Crop Circles

Any more

Eileen Algeo
Grizzly Writer

Once again, M. Night Shyamalan proves he is a true master of suspense, spellbinding audiences with his otherworldly thriller "Signs". Mel Gibson stars as Graham Hess, a former reverend who lives in the farmlands of Pennsylvania. Together with his brother (Joaquin Phoenix) and two children (Rory Culkin and Abigail Breslin), Hess leads a quiet life. However, things become increasingly complicated when an enormous crop circle appears overnight, carved into his cornfield. Hess's family soon learns they are not the only witnesses to these bizarre events; all over the world people begin to experience the phenomenon.

Events unfold quickly and the planet prepares to brace itself against an alien invasion. As tension mounts, the story turns to focus closely on the Hess family, namely, Graham's personal struggle with faith. Audiences' eyes remain peeled on the screen, waiting to find out just how, or if, this family will escape the extraterres-trials.

This cryptic tale holds all of the elements of a good flick: suspense, drama, a little gore, humor, a few tears. Gibson, Phoenix, Culkin, and Breslin all make noteworthy performances. The characters' personal histories unfold and tie together in the type of ending only Shyamalan can deliver. That said, some viewers will be disappointed that his latest film doesn't quite live up to "The Sixth Sense". Nonetheless, "Signs" is a great film overall, one definitely worth a trip to the movies.

Mel Gibson explores a field in Signs.

Bored? Get Some Brotherly Love In Your Life

A Closer Look At the City of Excitement

Vince Possomando
Grizzly Staff Writer

Do you find yourself spending precious weekend hours cooped up in a dorm room? Maybe you take numerous trips to Wawa on a Friday night with no intention of buying anything? Or are you the student who wanders around campus on a Saturday evening with a clueless look on your face resembling that of a 75-year-old grandmother at an Eminem concert?

For those who enjoy the town of Collegeville, this journey might not be right for you. For the other 99 percent of students on campus, drop the books, find a ride and head for the city of Brotherly Love, more commonly known as Philadelphia.

Philadelphia is a great place to spend a Friday or Saturday night. Whether you're going for the food, sports, or night life, you won't be disappointed. A resident of Philly for over 18 years, I will inform you of all the hotspots in town as well as the places that I believe are just a bore.

Philly is famous for its fantastic cheese steaks, but not many people know where the best places to get one are located. Most find Geno's Steaks at Ninth Street and Passyunk Avenue are the best in town, although Jim's Steaks on South Street provides some stiff competition. One place you'll want to avoid is Pat's Steaks, which is right across from Geno's, due to their inability to keep a clean establishment. Nick's Roast Beef at 30th and Jackson is not one I recommend either. Feel free to try their food but don't say I didn't warn you.

Most students want to know where to find some excitement. For enthusiastic sports fans, the sports complex can be found at Broad Street and Pattison Avenue. The Eagles are starting in September, with the Flyers and Sixers soon to follow.

For those who like to party, Delaware Avenue is an excellent place to start. Egypt Night Club and Penn's Landing are great places to go; I recommend Friday nights at Egypt for students under 21 and Saturday nights for everyone else. Shampoo at Ninth and Callowhill Streets might pose an interest, as well as Maui on Delaware Avenue. South Street is always a popular spot for tourists, but other than Condom Kingdom, you might not find anything worth a look.

Music lovers flock to the Electric Factory at Eighth and Callowhill where bands like Sum 41 and Sugarcult make numerous appearances. Fairmount Park is also a popular host for underground bands. For those whose passion is shopping, the Gallery at Eighth and Market Streets is the place to spend some dollars. If you've got energy leftover, Liberty Plaza is a larger mall, located on Chestnut Street.

South Philadelphia and certain parts of Center City are unfairly given the reputation of being crime infested. My advice is to just stay in town and avoid the West and North Philadelphia areas. When in doubt, if you start to see houses with missing doors that have a slight resemblance to Freddy Kreuger's, get a cab!

Philadelphia has many sights and sounds that will interest you. The best way to find out what the city holds for you is to explore it for yourself.

GRIZZLY GUIDE

Comparative Pricing Report: Snack Foods

Jen Brink
GrizzlyGuide Editor

As college students we all know that if there's anything we're going to learn to do here it'll be how to save money wherever possible, so that we can blow it on the lesser necessities elsewhere.

However, with the help of The Grizzly, and a little investigation done by myself, you can have the benefit of knowing the place to shop in search of what every college attendee needs—snack foods! As far as proximity to campus goes, we've got prices from Acme, Wawa, Clemens, and CVS (Yes, you can actually buy food at CVS). It seems that most of the prices run pretty similar no matter where you go, but you can save a few cents here and there if you care to, but for a better chance at catching some sales, the supermarkets (Clemens and Acme) are your best bets.

Soda, being one of the most popular caffeine kicks before your 8:00

Bio class, is usually almost always on sale somewhere. Wawa runs a little bit higher than the other stores charging $1.79 for their two liter bottles. CVS is the next highest where Coke runs $1.49 and Pepsi is $1.39. Now, depending on your preference to Coke or Pepsi products may determine which grocery store you want to hit up. Normally both stores sell their two liter bottles for $1.29, but this week holds some pretty decent sales if you're looking. Clemens, with your bonus card, of course, has Coke on promotion for eighty cents through September 5th. Acme is selling Pepsi, buy one at $1.29 get one free, through September 6th. For those who choose to not wash any dishes, and who prefer cans over bottles, a twelve pack of cans will run you about $3.99 at Wawa and CVS, and $4.39 and $4.49 at Clemens and Acme respectively.

Anyone who's searching for some carbs in their diets, whatever their individual need may be, will find that all the stores are the same in price. Potato chips run $2.99 for a 12 ounce bag. Doritos bump the bag up an ounce and the price up to $3.29 (Again, Acme is running the Buy one Get one on this as well through 9/6). Pretzels all hang out around $1.99 for a fifteen ounce bag. If you're looking for any variety in your selection, my suggestion would be to hit up any store but CVS for this one. They've got some scattered bags of this and that, here and there, but if you're in search of some flavor you'll want to look elsewhere.

It seems that price wise you're best off hitting up a store better suited for food shopping purposes. Wawa isn't a bad deal, but if you're looking for, again, a bigger and better selection, and a better shot at catching a deal you'll want to stick with either Acme or Clemens. Stop in, sign up for one of the bonus cards, and get some bargains. It's really not a bad deal. Happy shopping!

Field Hockey Makes a Move to Centennial Conference

Lindsey Fund
Grizzly Sports Writer

After eighty-three years of competing in the Division I Patriot League, the women's field hockey team here at Ursinus College has moved to the Centennial Conference in Division III along with the other intercollegiate sports here at the school.

Because of this, the field hockey team isn't playing for a championship or even a bid to nationals this year, but only to feel their way through Division III, in hopes of making a bigger, better, and stronger impact against colleges in the Centennial Conference next season.

"Initially, I was a bit upset," said four-year head coach Laura Moliken. "But in the long run, it's going to be the best thing for the program. We were working so hard every day to play teams like Duke—teams that win championships all of the time. And the best we'd ever be was .500.

"We always attacked with a positive attitude, though. We never really talked about the wins and losses, but how our efforts looked in the game."

The Patriot League stated their reason for dropping Ursinus was that "it was attempting to become more visible and identifiable as a league, and that a national liberal arts college associated with the league in one women's sport would not have a place in the new configuration."

Because of this, NCAA rules place Ursinus in a probationary period, which is usually a two-year time where colleges sort of rotate their players that were used to playing in the former league. The Bears, however, were able to drop the probation period down to only one year, making them ineligible for this year's post season, but able to challenge next year.

"It's hard to convince our recruits and such that we are a full member of the Centennial Conference," said Moliken. "Since we're not really built into the schedule, sometimes people are confused as to what we're doing. The changeover just really hurt our recruiting. We recruited players with the understanding that they would be playing in Division I, and when we were dropped, it was hard to back-pedal and get that target group of kids back."

So this season they just feel things out. While they are not actually on the schedule for the Centennial Conference, the Bears were fortunate enough to schedule eight out of the ten teams in the conference on their schedule. Eight teams on their schedule were in the Top 20 of Division III last season, and two finished in the Final Four of the Division III NCAA tournament.

Moliken returns senior captains Amy Transue, Sandy Fetterman, and Nicole Monatesti. All three will add valuable time and skill to the team, along with junior Jess Shellaway who lead the team in points last year with fourteen.

There were only four freshman added to the team this year, but Moliken seems happy with the new players.

"I'm very pleased in their attitudes. They are going to be pleasant additions to the team," said Moliken.

The Bears opened play on Tuesday at York College and have another away game today against the College of New Jersey.

"I don't know what people are expecting. Some think we are going to be good because we were Division I. Others don't know what to think. We're absolutely not going to win every game. We have a lot of learning to do before that," Moliken said.

Senior captain Amy Transue will look to help the Bears prove they belong.

X-Country Boys and Girls Ranked 8th in Conference

Lindsey Fund
Grizzly Sports Writer

The Ursinus cross-country team opened up its season last Saturday at the Ursinus Early Bird Meet being ranked eighth by coaches around the Centennial Conference.

Head Coach Neil Schafer wants more. "We want to improve on our performances. These are just predictions," said Schafer, "and we can do better than that."

Kate Dougherty returns for the girls in true national class form. Dougherty finished in the top twenty in every race that she ran in the 2001 season, giving her a bid to the national tournament. She placed 123rd out of 213 runners at the tourney with a time of 18:49.

Kacie Meyer is a first-time junior to the team after running track for the Bears for the last two years.

"She's going to surprise some people out there this year," said Schafer.

Schafer also has high hopes in freshman Liz Goudie who shows promise this year and in the future. "The girls will be better than eighth place. We lost some girls to graduation that just brought so much experience and so much maturity to this team between them. It just adds something to a team when you have that," said Schafer.

"They leave some shoes to be filled. Our new runners are freshman, and they are just like freshman on campus. They walk into a classroom, expecting a high school class, and it's not. The same thing happens in cross-country. It's so different than high school," continued Schafer.

For the guys, Schafer has some concerns. With a mandatory five runners who need to place in the races, Ursinus brings only five male runners to the starting line.

Eric Wickersham and Joe Szymanski, two new freshmen to the Bears' roster this season, have worked their way to the number one and two spots on the team.

"They really show a lot of promise, and I'm hoping for a lot out of them," said Schafer. "They are very soft-spoken people, but I really think that their actions are going to speak louder than words."

Schafer lost his number one runner in Brian Penderghast and senior Dan Reimold who is studying abroad this semester in England.

"He was just starting to come around," said Schafer. "That wasn't a shock, as much as a body blow."

Haverford, Muhlenberg, and Dickinson will be the team's toughest opponents this year, but nonetheless, Schafer is confident that his runners will place no lower than eighth place in any of those completions.

Bearcock's Rugby Returns for Second Season

Josh Rucci
Grizzly Sports Writer

The screams, the yelling, the crushing hits, the blood and the revelry.

Yes, Rugby season is here again. The Ursinus's Men's team started with their first organizational meeting at the beginning of last week, picking up where they left off last spring.

In their inaugural season, the Bearcocks went 0-3 against the likes of Swarthmore, The College of New Jersey and Albright. These games, however, were remarkably close considering the age of the team.

With one season under the belt, a distinct rivalry has already formed. Swarthmore College played the Bearcocks at home last season resulting in a Swarthmore victory. During the post game celebration at the late New Road Brew house, Swarthmore did the unthinkable.

The men in maroon ordered food and "beverages" with quite high price tags but left only sixty dollars to help cover the tab. After sticking the Bearcocks with their substantial tab, Swarthmore left the Brew House nowhere to be found.

Angered and anxious for revenge, the team awaits their meeting with Swarthmore this season. Practices began on August 28th under the tutelage of coaches Dr. Chris Cellucci, and outside coaches Shane Flynn and John.

During the first practice many new faces looked eager to join the veteran ruggers of Ursinus.

Returning players include, Josh Roesener, John Ramsey, Eddie Vedder, Bob Lemma, Chris Long, Adam Molineux, Dean Edwards, Goody, Alex Campbell, Zach Stewart, Josh Rucci, and Shane Borer.

Second semester will see the return of veterans from abroad and other sports including Tim D'Andrea, Don McIrish, and Daniel Iwaniuk.

The team will miss Dan McGovern and James who will be playing lacrosse for the Ursinus Men's squad.

Also not returning, graduate Mike Sock, the fabulous fullback, has moved onto bigger and better things.

Coach Cellucci proudly stated, "In all my years of coaching the men's team, this has to be the most talented group of young men yet."

With the first home game on Sept. 14th against Widner University, the campus pines for its dose of true contact sporting entertainment.

Widner shall prove to be a difficult opponent. The Division II squad placed first last season. Despite all these dismal facts, one fact remains bright. Widner has lost more than 10 starters this season.

Freshmen player Cris Mathew said, "I am very excited for the rugby season to begin."

Sophomore Ben Okulski stated his reason for joining the team this year as, "I just wanna hit people."

Who doesn't just want to hit people?

If you would rather watch others get bloody, come to the football practice field on Saturday, September 14th.

Come join the fun. Ursinus Bearcock's Rugby: because if you can't take the hits, keep off the grass.

The rugby team invites all men of Ursinus College to come out to practices and join the team. Email Josh Rucci at jorucci@ursinus.edu if you are interested.

Women's Soccer Go 2-0 in First Weekend of Play

Lindsey Fund
Grizzly Sports Writer

The women's soccer team started off on the right foot for the 2002 with two wins over Wilkes and Mt. Saint Mary's over this past weekend in the Ursinus Women's Soccer Invitational.

In the first game against Wilkes on Saturday, the Bears were lead by Senior Courtney Barth and freshman Megan McGuire who each scored two goals in the 6-2 win.

With the two goals, Barth became the record leader in goals here at Ursinus with 26 now for her career.

Senior teammate Jess Troutman also took to the record books on Saturday. Scoring one goal, and assisting on two others, Troutman broke the record for assists. Freshman goaltender Emily LaFevre made eight saves to give herself her first collegiate win and shutout, and Ursinus their first win of the season.

In the championship game against Mt. Saint Mary's on Sunday, senior Abbey Smith scored three goals to lead Ursinus to a 5-0 shutout over their opponenets.

Troutman and Barth also scored for the Bears who outshot the Blue Knights 25-3.

Junior Goaltender Cara Goldberg and freshman Jaime McCormick split the shutout for the Bears.

Ursinus will take on Arcadia in the Drew Classic Saturday at 3:00pm

Men's Soccer Regroup with New Coach

Lindsey Fund
Sports Writer

The men's soccer team will look to regroup this season under a strong group of returning players and new head coach Tom Quintois.

Quintois comes to Ursinus after coaching both the girls' and the boys' teams for five years at Souderton High School. During that time, he won seven Suburban American Division Championships.

Ursinus returned nine seniors to the field when they came back in August, including Mike Papenberg who led the team in scoring in the 2001 season.

In seventeen games last year, Papenberg scored five goals and eight assists for a combined eighteen points.

Both goaltenders also return for the Bears, who combined for a 2.08 GAA last season.

B.J Callaghan took 12 starting appearances, allowing 24 goals in 12 games. Tim McDonald allowed 14 goals on eight games, finishing with a GAA of 1.91.

The men opened their season last Saturday at the LaRoche Tournament ending the weekend with a 1-0-1 record.

In the first game of the tourney, Ursinus battled LaRoche to a 0-0 overtime tie. While Ursinus outshot the hosts 17-2, they were unable to score on the opposing goaltender.

On Sunday, Ursinus, however, was able to put a couple in the back of the net as Kevin Murphy lead the Bears to a 2-0 win over Waynesburg.

Scoring his first two goals of the season, Murphy was assisted by senior Jon Miller.

For the second consecutive game, goaltenders Callaghan and McDonald split the shutout for the Bears.

Volleyball Jumps Out to Positive Start

Greg Pellish
Grizzly Sports Writer

The Ursinus Women's Volleyball team started their season on the road this past weekend as they performed in the Oneonta State Tournament in New York.

Although they did not win first place overall, the team was able to pull many positives from their first weekend.

They played in the upper bracket, known as the Gold bracket, and finished 2nd out of the four teams in the bracket.

Overall Ursinus College finished 2-2 winning their opening match against Russell Sage College 3-2.

In the second match of the tournament Ursinus faced national power Nazareth College, who according to some of the ladies on the Bears is ranked 15th overall in the nation.

Ursinus lost this match 3-0 and later lost to the University of Rochester 3-1, before rebounding and ending on a positive note, by defeating Hunter College and finishing in 6th place overall out of the 12 teams present.

Laura Dougherty and Marie DiFelicantonio, both juniors on this year's team, felt the team played consistent in every match they played.

Each has high hopes for this year's team and hopes they can carry some momentum from this tournament on to the rest of the season.

The Bears returned to action for their first home match of the season on Wednesday September 4, at 7:00pm against Albright College from Reading, PA.

Senior Abbey Smith scored three goals against Mount Saint Mary's to lead Ursinus to 5-0 victory.

Dougherty Sets Course Record in Brian Dennis Memorial X-Country Meet

Neil Schafer
Cross Country Coach

Katie Dougherty cruised to a twenty second victory and set a course record at the 1st Annual Brian Dennis Memorial 5K Cross-country Meet held on Saturday, August 31st at Hunsberger Woods.

Dougherty, a national qualifier in 2001, led from start to finish and was pleased with her time of 19:50.9.

Also running for Ursinus were freshman Liz Goudie (46th place) 24:25.3, Kacie Meyer (60th place) 25:57, and Kate Hennessy (68th place) 33:07.

The women did not score in the meet. Haverford led all teams with 30 points.

The Ursinus men were led by freshman Joe Szymanski. Joe's time of 18:55 was good enough for 23rd place.

Also running for Ursinus was freshman Eric Wickersham (39th place) in 20:07, sophomore Andy Breuninger (47th place) in 22:47, freshman Chris Harris (52nd place) 27:59, and sophomore Aziz Shaikh (53rd place) 29:20.

Ursinus placed fourth out of five scoring teams. Dickinson's men team led the way with Tom Rhodes leading the Red Devils in a course record time of 17:05.4.

The meet was named after Brian M. Dennis; a 1991 graduate of Ursinus College.

Dennis was a Mid-Atlantic Conference steeplechase medalist in 1991.

He was diagnosed with cancer in the mid-1990's and eventually lost his battle in June of 1997.

Jeff Baroody of Dickinson College won the LIKE BRIAN Award.

Senior Katie Dougherty continues to be strong for the Women's cross-country team this season.

Roller Hockey Club to Play in PCRHL

Mike Romeo
Grizzly Sports Writer

One of the fastest growing sports on the East coast has come to Collegeville, PA, in the form of the Ursinus College Roller Hockey Club Team.

The Roller Hockey Club was started last year by two freshmen, Adam Almallah and Mike Romeo, in the hopes of playing competitively this academic year.

In the beginning, the club consisted of a few people who liked to go out and play hockey, but with the help of some hard work (and an AFAC allocation), the Roller Hockey Club will be playing its inaugural season in the Philadelphia Collegiate Roller Hockey League (PCRHL) this fall.

The season starts in early October, and, depending on Ursinus' performance this year, runs until the end of April when the League Championship game is held.

The games take place in the evenings, every Sunday and every other Thursday, at the Marple Sports Arena.

In addition, Action Sports in Pottstown has been providing assistance to the Ursinus Roller Hockey Club team in the form of uniforms and practice time at their rink.

All things considered, there is a lot to look forward to this season for the Roller Hockey club.

With between 15 and 20 members, the club has the depth and talent to be a solid competitor in the PCRHL.

That being said, the club would like to extend the invitation to anyone who would be interested in joining the team, and helping set the precedent for roller hockey at Ursinus College.

Simply send an email to miromeo@ursinus.edu or omalmallah@ursinus.edu if you want to join, and we hope to see you out there!

Football Team Prepares for Big Season Opener Against Washington & Jefferson

Lindsey Fund
Grizzly Sports Writer

While the Ursinus football team graduated two All-Americans last season in Sherod Duncan and Mike Dale, second-year head coach Pete Gallagher claims that winning the Conference is never out of reach.

"It's a goal of anyone's who plays in a conference. We're a very young team who a very good chance to be good, and that's all that you can ask for," said Gallagher.

"The Centennial Conference's competition is going nowhere but up," continues Gallagher. "Recruiting is very difficult. There are many very, very good football teams. We'll have some stiff competition."

"W.J. McDaniel (formerly Western Maryland) is in the Top 20 in Division III. Johns Hopkins has had fine football success. Muhlenberg always comes out strong, and Dickinson is very soundly coached. At any time, one top team can beat any of the others."

To be competitive, the Bears will look to some key returning players after the loss of Duncan and Dale will leave them a bit weaker.

Duncan rushed for 1,747 yards last season, more than anyone else in Division III. He scored a school and conference record 23 touchdowns, finishing up his career with 11 school and conference records. He was named Offensive Player of the Week of the conference four times and took ECAC Player of the Week honors two times.

"Anytime you lose a weapon like that, it's going to hurt you a little," said Gallagher. "It was a great feat for everyone involved last year when he (Duncan) rushed for so many yards. It's going to be hard to fit those shoes."

The Bears will look to counter that loss, however, with the return of senior quarterback Chris Rahill. He was third in passing last year, and shows maturity in his second year in the offensive system. Gallagher has been impressed with his leadership skills and his ability to move.

Ursinus will also count on junior Gary Sheffield and newcomer Lion Nealy. And senior Chris Glowacki will be an important threat to opponents as he led the team in reception and reception yards last year.

"Offensively, we have the ability to control the football, which means we can control the clock. We need to keep the opponents off the field. It's not easy to put together long drives, but if we can get inside the 25-30 yard line, we have a kicker who's going to get us out of there with three points," said Gallagher.

Defensively, senior captain John Craig returns from an injury he sustained in the last couple of games last season.

"I really feel that held him back from post-season honors," said Gallagher. "He's hungry, and he's ready to go."

Gallagher expects junior Tom Reilly and senior Andy Paulet to lead the defense.

"Our run defense is again very good. If we can force people into long situations, we can then make the decision to blitz or not. At this level, we're at the advantage," says Gallagher.

As much on the field, the football team is also doing its part off of it. When the freshmen arrived on campus this year, they were greeted by the football team, who helped the underclassmen move into their dorm rooms.

"Part of my philosophy as a football coach is that we need support from everybody, and that support comes in many different ways," said Gallagher. "It's real easy to ask for things, but it's more difficult to give those things. So if we support you, then I'm hoping you support us. That's how we want this football program to operate."

What is Swappin' Suites?

It's the Ursinus College version of a popular television program that gives two sets of friends the chance to re-decorate each others' rooms with the help of two designers, a carpenter, and a miniscule budget.

How do I apply?

Swappers: Roommates from two different rooms fill out one of the applications in The Grizzly and send it in to Dr. Edwards (Ritter 107) or drop it off in the Swappin' Suites box in Wismer Lobby.

Carpenters and Designers: Fill out the application in The Grizzly and send it to Dr. Edwards (Ritter 107) or drop it off in the Swappin' Suites box in Wismer Lobby.

How are contestants chosen?

The campus will vote for the contestants they want to see swap suites.

What happens if I am not picked?

Don't sweat it! We will be doing this again next semester, based on reader response.

What's the deadline?

The deadline for applications is Friday, September 20 by 12 noon. The campus will vote on the following Thursday, September 26th. Contestants will be announced in the October 3rd Grizzly and the swap will take place during Fall Break, October 19-21.

What are the rules?

1. All roommates from both teams must agree to participate and will agree to follow all contest rules.
2. All contestants who are chosen to participate must agree to remain on campus during the entire Fall Break
3. All contestants agree to be photographed for and quoted in The Grizzly during the contest.
4. All contestants agree to abide by the housing contract:

- No halogen lamps.
- No heat generating electrical equipment (i.e. space heaters).
- Nothing can be pasted, glued, nailed, tacked or secured in any way on the walls, ceilings, or furniture.
- No student shall (a) remove from the room any furniture, equipment or property belonging to the College, (b) remove furniture from lounges for room use, (c) alter or tamper with the installed heating or electrical systems, or (d) alter the floor, walls, ceilings, or furniture.
- Pets, except for small fish in aquariums, are prohibited.

You can redo your single, double, triple, or common room!
