Seen & Heard Around MURRAY

Two Saturday morning callers... Mrs. Linville is the correspondent for Murray route five...

Our friends are welcome to come in and visit with us at any time.

A dog chasing a rabbit caused a lot of commotion at our house last week.

The scared rabbit had full steam, and the dog in hot pursuit.

They made a mad scramble right through the middle of the yard filled with kids of all ages.

The kids all yelled at the dog to stop chasing the rabbit, but the dog was either deaf, or too busy to listen, anyway he kept right on.

The last we saw of them they were skidding around the corner of the next house and disappearing over the brow of a nearby hill.

This date last year: President Truman authorized the dismissal of federal employees if there was a "reasonable doubt" about their loyalty.

Dr. H. C. Chiles made a statement in his sermon yesterday that hit the nail on the head.

When he said that it brought to mind something we have been thinking about recently and that is people who get puffed up when they get a promotion of some kind.

They don't realize that it could go the other way just as quickly, with resulting embarrassment.

BILL SPIVEY INDICTED BY GRAND JURY TODAY

Another sordid chapter in the basketball scandal story was unfolded in New York today.

This one involves seven-foot Bill Spivey, Kentucky's All-American center who has insisted for months he's innocent of any bribe-taking.

A New York grand jury indictment of four alleged "fixers" says Spivey did it. It names dates and names.

This superevident indictment against Joe Bernierende, Jack, West, Jack Rubenstein and Eli Kay, accused Spivey of taking bribes in four games. Spivey is not under indictment since he's not within New York jurisdiction, but the indictment accuses him of taking bribes in two Sugar Bowl tournament games in December of 1950.

Rain And Darkness Holds Down Excitement Mounts In Derby Town Play In Major Leagues Sunday

By United Press
Things are looking up for the Detroit Tigers—but they're getting blacker for the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Tigers beat the Cleveland Indians 1-0 to record their second win of the year in two days, both over Cleveland and both by shutouts.

White Sox took the first game of a double-header from St. Louis, 7-6, in 14 innings. The second game was called at the end of five because of darkness, with the White Sox leading 3-1. It will be completed on July 3rd. A Philadelphia, double-header between Boston and the A's was washed out and New York at Washington was postponed by rain.

LOUISVILLE April 28—(UP)—The Derby Week at Churchill Downs and the excitement is mounting rapidly.

Another California candidate, Mission Stable's "Alate," is slated to get his final test today, but in a race at Golden Gate Fields in California. The word is that Alate will be flown to Louisville at once if he impresses today.

"Hard Luck" People Mostly Absent, Said

By United Press
 It's the "hard luck" people who are most frequently absent from their jobs. They get sick because they find it too tough to face up to the stresses of life.
 Two Cornell scientists, Dr. Laurence Hinkle, Jr., and Dr. Norman Plummer, told the industrial health conference in Cincinnati that surveys show the employees with worst attendance records are those who become ill recurrently and who, at the same time, show a pattern of childhood hardships that have left psychological scars, marital difficulties, unusual financial responsibilities or deprivations.
 At the same meeting, Dr. Charles McGill of Tacoma and Dr. Sherman Pinto of Denver urged the rapid extension of prepaid medical insurance plans in every city of the country. They said it was the only

Geiger Counter Used To Detect Disease

LOS ANGELES (UP)—A super-sensitive Geiger counter that actually draws a picture of a thyroid gland now is in active hospital use to detect many hard to find thyroid diseases, including cancer.
 The instrument, known as the beta scintillation counter, has diagnosed approximately 100 patients since it first was put into diagnostic use last September, said Dr. Thomas F. Barrett, clinical professor of medicine at the University of California at Los Angeles.
 "We have found the scintillation counter extremely valuable—in picking up many thyroid problems that have been missed by all other diagnostic means," Dr. Barrett said.
 It also can be used to test engineering projects, to determine whether a proposed new line will stand up to the load expected for it, and how to meet overload problems.

CHAPTER THIRTY-SEVEN
 THE first minor crisis was Henri's discovery of Leonie's absence. He looked blankly at the two-place setting of the table. "Where is Leonie?" he demanded. "She went fishing," Heloise said. "Fishing?" "Yes, Lincoln Calvert got hold of a launch belonging to some friend of his and they went out in the river." Henri was dumfounded. "I can't turn my back," he growled, "with-out that fellow coming and taking her somewhere. That settles it. I'm going to send her to Virginia right away. Have those people repeated their invitation?" "Not that I know of. But it was a standing invitation. She can go whenever she wants." "I'll see right off about getting the tickets," Henri said. "And you and Leonie can decide about the things she'll need." "Brother," Heloise said, "don't you think your rushing things a little? Leonie ought to be consulted, and she has to make the arrangements with those people. She just can't take the train up there without a single thing about it." "I don't see any reason for delay," Henri said. "Every day counts in a situation like this." As for consulting Leonie, he added, "she's going, whether she likes it or not." "You won't hurry things by bolting your food," Heloise told him. Henri frowned. "I don't need overeating." "It was just a caution," Heloise said. "You need a calm, cool nerve." "How can I be calm with this fate hanging over my only niece?" Heloise regarded him appraisingly. "No doubt," she said, "you're perfectly sure that having Leonie away for three weeks or a month will mend matters completely?" "I'm counting on something like that. Out of sight's out of mind." "That wasn't what happened when she went to the mountains." "You've forgotten," Henri said triumphantly, "that they had a quarrel after that trip. It might happen again." "Where will you send her when she comes back from Virginia, if your idea doesn't work?" "One thing at a time," Henri said, as if that were his rule in life. "I'll think of something if this situation continues." "Of course, you'll do as you think fit," Heloise said. "But, for goodness' sake, don't thrust this trip down Leonie's throat. Don't let her feel that you're determined to see her go. She'll see that right away and then wild horses won't get her away from here." "She'll do as I say," Henri said. "I want her to go immediately. That young man has a car, don't forget, and I wouldn't be surprised if he and Leonie are planning to elope." "This was too much for Heloise, accustomed as she was to his flights of fancy. "Why, he's getting silly," she thought. Leonie was in a radiant mood. She had come home crusted with salt and bearing a string of fish which Lincoln had helped her to catch, and after her bath and a nap she sat down and played popular songs on the piano. "That's only the second time she's touched it since she came home," Heloise thought. "I guess there's no doubt that she's in love. It's terrible to be so dependent on one person for your happiness." She waited apprehensively for Henri to begin his Virginia campaign, as she called it. She thought of warning him that Leonie was in a very good humor and that perhaps he would do better to wait until some signs of dissatisfaction were apparent. But years of experience had taught her that trying to alter Henri's course was likely to lead only to trouble. Henri was prepared to be canny. He welcomed Leonie warmly and remarked that he had missed her at dinner. "But I caught you a nice breakfast," Leonie told him. "Four bread and a chunk." "You might go into the business," Henri said. "It must be dull for you here." "Oh, it's not so dull," Leonie said. Henri ignored this evidence of a better outlook. "Your aunt and I have been talking things over," he said, "and it seems to us that you ought to have a little change. I'm prepared to send you up to visit those people in Virginia." "Uncle, that's nice of you," Leonie said unenthusiastically. "Oh, we're only too glad to do anything to make our little gyri happy." "The trouble is, Uncle," Leonie said, "that while I have a standing invitation, I am not getting on and there's a very little we need or want." "I know," Henri said. "All you need to do is write them and say you find it possible to come." Leonie glanced at him doubtfully. "I will take a lot of clothes," she said. "They dress up a good deal, even in their summer place." "We'll take care of that," Henri said confidently. "I don't think I ought to call on you and Auntie for more sacrifices." "Never worry your pretty little head about that," Henri said. "You just go ahead. You're only young once. Your Aunt and I are getting on and there's a very little we need or want." He thought Heloise made a mocking face at a moment when Leonie wasn't looking up, and just for an instant he thought of the plumber's and roofer's bills, the Morris Plan payment, the interest on notes, and Mr. Pineau. . . . But there was his insurance. He had never borrowed against it, but this was a very special circumstance and he must be prepared to make any sacrifice. "I'll write to them," Leonie said, slowly, "and see what they say. But, Uncle, are you sure you want to spend all this money?" "I tell you that doesn't enter into it at all," Henri said. "If you've really set your heart on going—" "Leonie said, still more slowly, "Of course, I'd have a good time. But I feel a lot more satisfied now that I've got kind of settled." "We think you ought to go," Henri insisted. "There's nothing to keep you here, after all. Anything you leave will be here when you come back. Charleston doesn't change that fast." "I still don't feel right about it," Leonie said. "You leave that to us," Henri said. "Now go write that letter." Leonie rose and went upstairs. "She couldn't resist it," Henri said triumphantly. But Heloise knew that Leonie didn't want to go. "And," she said to herself, "I'll bet anything she won't."

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. Peter James van Amringen of New Kensington, Pa., are the parents of a son, weighing six pounds, born Sunday, April 27. Mrs. van Amringen is the former Jo Anne Hendon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Graves Hendon of Murray.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Doherty of Bowling Green were the weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Doherty.

Mrs. Vernon Jackson, Mrs. Carl Rowland and Mrs. Cameron Pool were in Paducah Thursday shopping.

Sid Bogess has returned to his home on North Sixth Street after having undergone an operation at the Thornton-Minor Hospital in Kansas City, Mo.

Mr. and Mrs. Tony Bogess were Sunday guests of Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Bogess.

Mrs. Marshall Berry of Arlington, Va., visited her mother, Mrs. B. F. Schroeder and her sister, Mrs. Jack Farmer, last week. Her son, Dick Berry, returned to Murray with her to resume his studies at Murray State College following the KEA holidays.

Murray Training PTA Group Holds Meeting At School

The Murray Training School Parent-Teacher association met Wednesday afternoon at two-forty-five o'clock at the school.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. Orval Austin, Miss Margaret Campbell presided over the business session.

Committee reports were given including a report on the White Elephant Sale held on April 19. Further plans were made for the sales on April 26 and May 3. The sales are being held for the purpose of swilling the PTA's contribution to the new Health Center.

The eighth grade presented a $44.00 check to the PTA with the request that it all be applied to the Health Center fund.

Mrs. Ollie Barnett, assistant chairman, announced that the Summer Round-Up would be held at the Training School on May 9 at 1:30 p.m.

Mrs. Orvil Austin was elected delegate to the State Convention to be held in Louisville May 13-14. An interesting discussion on "Activities Outside of School" was given by Mrs. Virginia Anderson. A panel composed of seven high school boys and girls from Mrs. C. S. Lowry's psychology class discussed "Dating—Big Business of Youth." Members of the panel were Russell Outland, Shirley Cross, Ruth Rowland, Shirley Julie Hawkins, Jean Zeek, Marlene Swann and Hal Shipley. Following the room count the meeting adjourned.

Charles E. English, 16, of Warren county has 32 Southdown sheep and 20 registered Jersey cows he has raised. As state sheep champion in 1951, he attended National 4-H Club Congress. He has won more than $600 in prizes. He has been local and county 4-H club president and has been active in high school glee club, debating and public speaking.

Miss Claudette Moss, 17, of Shelby county has been Junior project leader for the past two years in home-making and clothing. She represents the youth of Kentucky on the "Governor's Conference on Children and Youth." She has carried projects in eight fields of home-making and was state winner in clothing, enabling her to attend 4-H Club Congress in Chicago.

better permanent health center. So they are working faithfully.

We almost forgot, we were collecting opinion and went to collecting antiques. It's an old habit of ours anyway so the slip of attention was easily made. We stopped to talk to Mr. and Mrs. Louie Burt but only caught Mrs. Burt and her son at home. We especially liked the hanging lamp in the dining room. We did get back to our main purpose before too long. She explained that they were just back from Florida and were not very well informed about the project but the venture "of course it's going to be an advantage for the county. We are looking forward to it and it is badly needed."

Decided it might be a good thing to check up with Mrs. Hanford Doran while out, even though she did live away over in the other corner of the district, round her at home too, but just by luck she was getting ready to go work at another road on her list. If you are a violet enthusiast you should pay her a call in her north window she has 63 potted violets. Blue, violet, white, pink and one of those lovely double blues. They were lovely. When we drove our attention from the violets we saw that Mrs. Doran was feeling a little blue-violet herself. She expressed disappointment that her morning people were taking it seriously enough to work harder. She had her own "violet" of course you know I'm up to my ears in this thing. I worked yesterday but had trouble finding people at home. I'm about to go out again today. I feel sure that we can raise the needed $10,000 but if everyone would give their share I think it would make it easier for the ones that are working hard to reach the goal. I hope to goodness that the budget will be amply subscribed; this year to make full use of the new center when we get it. I feel the county people will recognize the need and demand that the old budget problem will be handled in a better way from now on. Mrs. Doran's son was awfully anxious for her to finish his ball suit and so we left so that she could finish it up before she took off again to see people about giving to the Health Building fund.

On our way back to Murray, whom should we see out the garden scarecrow I've ever seen. Suddenly I realized that it had stopped raining because a breeze came blowing and with his help she waved and wished us well.

We discussed all sorts of things in the ride back into town. What we should do next and how we should do what needs to be done. We do have great faith in the people of Lynn Grove community, and so we will leave the matter of reaching their goal up to them. We are sure they can handle that. Yours until we say-forty again.

Oysters grow on mountain slopes in the Philippines, on Fraile Island at the mouth of Manila Bay. The oyster is found thriving as high as 20 to 25 feet above sea level. During high tides the waves wet the rocks for long periods, making it possible for oysters to grow.

In the remote town of Malauog, Cagayan, Philippines, a widow of widower must not leave the mat where his or her spouse died until after the ninth day. The superstition is that the spirit of the dead spouse will become angry if it returns to find the bereaved mate away.

As a result of the home management program, 1,993 families were assisted in house planning or remodeling problems, 3,957 improved storage facilities, and 4,074 made major step saving changes in kitchens.

Plans were made for the display of some of the things made by the members in Lerman's window this week. National Home Demonstration Week began Sunday so watch the store windows for display.

The May meeting will be held at the Murray City Park. The lesson will be on making picnic baskets.

Mrs. Ina Nesbitt Hostess For Paris Road Club Meeting

The importance of meat in the diet was stressed by Mrs. Ina Nesbitt, hostess for the Paris Road, Homemakers Club.

The club met Thursday, April 24, in the home of Mrs. Ina Nesbitt with fourteen members present.

The leaders pointed out that liver is one of the best sources of protein and that housewives should know the cuts of meat and the most suitable ways to prepare them.

Mrs. Clifton Barrett presided at the business meeting held in the afternoon.

Mrs. Pat Thompson gave a lesson on "Safe Driving." Mrs. Alice Stealy gave gardening points for April and Mrs. Wylie Parker discussed landscaping and shrubs that can be set now.

Plans were made for the display of some of the things made by the members in Lerman's window this week. National Home Demonstration Week began Sunday so watch the store windows for display.

The May meeting will be held at the Murray City Park. The lesson will be on making picnic baskets.
