A META-SYNTHESIS ON NURSING STUDENTS' PERCEPTION OF PROBLEM-BASED LEARNING

Problem based learning is an option of the teaching methods. PBL has been introduced in the nursing education in the late sixties. Later, PBL has been adopted by many nursing schools to produce nursing graduates who can explore options, are articulate and have the capacity for developing appropriate strategies based on reflective decision making and competent to practice. A meta-synthesis on nursing students' perception of problem-based learning, serves the best available evidences for preparing educational practice guidelines in nursing curriculum, informing decision making and identify areas for further research.

Azlina Daud, a lecturer as Assistant Professor at Kulliyah of Nursing, International Islamic University Malaysia.
