

Cedarville Review

---

Volume 6

Article 6

---

2003

Wabash Drive

Whitney Johnson
Cedarville University

DigitalCommons@Cedarville provides a publication platform for fully open access journals, which means that all articles are available on the Internet to all users immediately upon publication. However, the opinions and sentiments expressed by the authors of articles published in our journals do not necessarily indicate the endorsement or reflect the views of DigitalCommons@Cedarville, the Centennial Library, or Cedarville University and its employees. The authors are solely responsible for the content of their work. Please address questions to dc@cedarville.edu.

---

Recommended Citation

Johnson, Whitney (2003) "Wabash Drive," Cedarville Review: Vol. 6 , Article 6.
Available at: <https://digitalcommons.cedarville.edu/cedarvillereview/vol6/iss1/6>

---

Wabash Drive

Browse the contents of this issue of Cedarville Review.

Keywords

Poetry

Creative Commons License

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution-Noncommercial-No Derivative Works 4.0 License.

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.cedarville.edu/cedarvillereview>

Part of the Poetry Commons

Whitney Johnson
Wabash Drive

If a Nissan took to the Wabash rather than the Interstate,
    sloshing past trees and towns,
    yet gargling the same metronomic engine sputter.
If furious wipers must panic to float this makeshift boat.
If the whizz of wheels on wet highway wasn't enough,
    ripple-waves lapping against too-thin tin panels,
    aspirations of buoyancy.
If a car just knew the Wabash was the way to go,
    to plunge to green depths,
    headlights blinking goodbye to cruise control.
If steel kept company with new driftwood and silt.

From the milky black of Down River, a muffled horn
    bemoans this absence from I-65,
And the Nissan keeps driving.