FROM THE DRAMATURG

Are human beings inherently good or evil? Is compassion the ultimate ruling of our nature? Or does our first instinct to be contemptuous plague our hearts over such things? The nature of humankind has endlessly been called into question with still no definite answer. Philosophers discuss the concepts of what it means to be good and evil, and theologians debate over the concepts' origins. Whatever the case, people arrive at their own conclusions. Their answers can be influenced by their religions, cultures, atmospheres, and/or experiences.

The play, Tartuffe, questions whom among the characters is the better human and who is more reputable. Which concept will win over all: hypocrisy or compassion? All humans have issues, challenges that we must face. And one must choose the option of how to go about them, whether with sincerity or deceit. To be truthful ... or be an imposter.

— Samantha Sumler
Guest Dramaturg

The Honorable Stuart Bernstein and Wilma E. Bernstein, and the National Committee for the Performing Arts.

This production is entered in the Kennedy Center American College Theater Festival (KCACTF). The aims of this national theater education program are to identify and promote quality in college-level theater production. To this end, each production entered is eligible for a response by a regional KCACTF representative, and selected students and faculty are invited to participate in KCACTF programs involving scholarships, internships, grants and awards for actors, directors, dramaturgs, playwrights, designers, stage managers and critics at both the regional and national levels.

Productions entered on the Participating level are eligible for invitation to the KCACTF regional festival and may also be considered for national awards recognizing outstanding achievement in production, design, direction and performance.

Last year more than 1,300 productions were entered in the KCACTF involving more than 200,000 students nationwide. By entering this production, our theater department is sharing in the KCACTF goals to recognize, reward, and celebrate the exemplary work produced in college and university theaters across the nation.
