EXCELLENCE DAY

Each year, students, faculty and staff gather for a celebration of research, clinical and community service achievements at the Dugoni School. Excellence Day is a long-standing tradition that allows the school community to share their projects with colleagues, friends, alumni and special guests. The event features poster presentations, case presentations with patients, a keynote speaker, reception and awards ceremony.

PACIFIC LIBRARIES SCHOLARLY COMMUNICATION TALKS

Pacific Libraries are offering a series of Scholarly Communication Talks that are intended to assist faculty and students in realizing their scholarly goals. These talks will cover various topics such as citation metrics, creating and maintaining an online identity, staying up to date on research in your field, finding the right journal for publication, advocating for Open Access publishing, and the institutional repository Scholarly Commons.

We invite faculty and graduate students to attend in person, either in the person (locations listed for each talk) or online via WebEx.

GENDER & RACE STUDENT RESEARCH CONFERENCE

The Gender Studies and Ethnic Studies Programs at University of the Pacific have a biennial student research conference. Previous conferences have included "Gender, Race, and Physical Cultures" and "Gender, Race, and Space." Each conference includes student research panels where students present their research related to the conference topic. Each conference also includes a keynote speaker who is considered an expert in the field relating to the chosen topic. Along with presenting work, students are also involved in marketing and organizing the event.

The Pacific Undergraduate Research Conference (PURC) was started in 2001 as a way to highlight and celebrate the outstanding research being done by undergraduates at Pacific. The range of disciplines participating has increased each year. In 2005, in an effort to recognize and celebrate students engaged in a broader range of scholarly activities, the conference was renamed the Pacific Undergraduate Research and Creativity Conference (PURCC).
