

Samuel DiLandro
Kendra Fetty
Bryana Woodson
Lauren Zion

Why Peer Tutoring is Essential in the Classroom

Abstract

For Longwood University's 2020 Spring Showcase, we chose to present on why Peer Tutoring is essential in the classroom environment. Each of us has participated in a Classroom Management course this semester, taught by Dr. Katherine Matthews, that informed us about what Peer Tutoring means for both students and teachers. In our presentation, we look at various sources that explain what Peer Tutoring is and offer scientific studies that show its direct results. In addition to exploring what it is and how it benefits the classroom, we also look into potential setbacks as well as which content areas are best suited for Peer Tutoring. We hope you enjoy our presentation and we encourage everyone to ask questions or make comments in the Digital Commons space; one of our team members will answer in a timely fashion. Thank you in advance for viewing our presentation on Peer Tutoring.