NCAA tackles PVAMU football team with probation

Former Football coach issues illegal money to player

By Ryan McGinty and

Sheleah Hughes
Editor-in-Chief

The National Collegiate Athletic Association placed Prairie View A&M on one-year probation Tuesday due to financial aid violations by former head football coach Greg Johnson.

The ruling, which is the university's first major infractions case, comes after a two-year investigation by both Prairie View and the NCAA.

The focus of the case revolved around Johnson's mishandling of funds during the 1997-98 school year.

Faced with a shortage of university athletic scholarship funds that year, Johnson opened an account at the Prairie View credit union to help finance a former student-athlete's housing and tuition.

But this penalty does not cause the team to forfeit any of its games. In fact, compared to other schools, the punishment is only minimal.

Last October, University of Nevada at Las Vegas' basketball head coach, Bill Bayno, was fired because of NCAA violations.

The strict punishment came after the team was suspected for violating rules during the recruitment of Lamar Odom in 1996 and 1997.

Odom allegedly accepted $5600 from a local dentist and UNLV booster.

In addition to probation, UNLV was banned from post-season play for a year and a half and had two scholarships taken away for two years.

Vicky Brooker, one of the owners of the farm, said the killing was an accident.

Benin appeals for world assistance

Cotonu, Benin

AP-Benin appealed Monday for help from the United Nations and Western countries in the search for a missing cargo vessel suspected of carrying child slaves off the coast of West Africa.

The decrepit Nigerian-registered vessel, MV Etireno, was refused entry at two African ports over the past week after apparently leaving Cotonu, Benin's capital, at least 10 days ago. It is believed to be carrying 100-250 impoverished children intended for sale as unpaid domestic and plantation workers.

Syracuse, New York

AP-Three firefighters suffered smoke inhalation after becoming entangled in a decorative parachute that dropped from the ceiling of a burning apartment.

The parachute material and cords held the trio "like they were attached to a bungee cord," said Syracuse Deputy Fire Chief Edward Kurtz. The trapped firefighters' colleagues had to feel for the tangled spots and then cut the cords or parachute material with their knives.

General Mills-Pillsbury to merger

Golden Valley, Minnesota

AP-General Mills has delayed the termination date for its proposed purchase of Pillsbury for three months until June 30.

In a filing with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission on Friday, General Mills said the charge allows either party to back out of the proposed merger without penalty if the deal isn't completed by June 30. General Mills has agreed to pay $10.5 billion to buy Pillsbury.

Swenson's boyfriend, Shane Doyle, also pleaded guilty on Friday to the same felonies. Doyle, 43, jailed since his arrest last year, will be sentenced on June 1.

The pair originally was charged with two first-degree felonies for aggravated sexual abuse.

The city uses cruising fees from the event, which last year drew more than 200,000 mostly black college and high school students, to offset $425,000 in expenses.

Tarrant school in debt

Dallas, Texas

AP-Treetops International School, Tarrant County's first charter school, faces the possibility of losing its charter because of serious financial woes. The school has been in operation three years. The 243-student school in Euless promised small classes, individualized instruction and a summer camp environment when it opened its doors in 1998.

Officials say they have made moves to solve some of the school's problems, which include a projected budget shortfall of $48,000, a debt of about $14,000 for unpaid taxes and an overdue audit to the state.

The SKINNY on body image

Number of overweight people increases while thin is still in

By Sheleah Hughes Editor-in-Chief

When you look in the mirror what do you see? Do you see a beautiful person with a pretty smile, large features and a great attitude to match? Or something else not so good?

Too often women focus on their thighs, hips, wrinkles, belly, 'forbidden' fat or other things that aren't considered acceptable.

Three women health professionals, Donna Brooks, Barbara Levy and Cathy Conheim, masterminded a project in hopes of decreasing the perception that many women have about themselves.

They collaborated with the Athena Foundation and created the Real women project (www.realwomen.com), a concept that asked 14 everyday women between the ages of 14 and 75 to pose nude.

The project uses sculpture, poetry and music to challenge the cultural perceptions of the female body image and celebrate the natural physique of a woman.

Projects like this counteract a growing disease common among many young adults - "thin anxiety."

This occurs while young women in particular, look to the media for role models rather than accept themselves naturally.

Supermodels like Tyra Banks, Naomi Campbell and actress Calista Flockhart are usually blamed for teen-age girls' wishing for an ultrathin shape.

And as long as women look to these people for a sense of beauty, they will never consider themselves beautiful or maybe even presentable.

Approximately 50 percent of African American women are overweight yet the reported ideal figure of a women is nearly 110 pounds, which is considerably thin for adult women.

This in turn allows the weight loss industry to profit about $30 million per year.

Just think The Commodores had a song named "Brick House" where they praised women for their curvaceous bodies.

The Commodores proclaimed "36-24-36" to be in, but yet there are still women who wear a size two and consider themselves to be overweight.

Beauty is something that can not be defined by the images of celebrities, athletes or politicians, only the individual person can determine if they are proud of their own image.

Corrections

In last week's issue of The Panther, in the article titled "'Lobby Day' participants rock the capital," Mrs. Willie Mae Bolár was quoted as having said, "I have never received a raise." The quotation should have read, "I have never received a merit raise."

On the last page of last week's issue of The Panther, the spring fest schedule was incorrect. The correct schedule is printed this week. Also the fieldhouse was labeled incorrectly.

Study abroad program changes requirements to address more interest

By Yauna Estes
Panther Staff

Due to increased interest, the University's international studies program criteria has now been changed.

"You can see the increase in student interest. So far this semester, 25 students have visited the international studies center here at Prairie View, and seven slots will be filled," Dr. Fredoline Anunobi, head of the Division of Social Work, Behavioral and Political Science, said.

Dr. Anunobi was responsible for creating the International Studies program at Prairie View A&M, and he also acts as its director.

The program was created in 1998 to encourage students to study abroad, broaden their education, and enable them to better compete in the job market.

According to Dr. Anunobi, the number of students sent abroad has increased a great deal.

"We are currently preparing to send students to Guatemala to gain Spanish credits," he said.

The University has already sent students to England, Morocco, Spain, Mexico and Africa.

Students who now want to participate in the international studies program must have a 2.8 gpa, submit two letters of recommendation, an official university transcript, and pay a fee.

Previously, the university students were required to have a 2.5 gpa.

Although some requirements have changed, students are still required to take part in a personal interview conducted by several board members and staff members of Prairie View A&M University.

In December 2000, scholarships given to students chosen to study abroad in Spain, covered all tuition, living expenses, travel arrangements, food and lodging.

According to Dr. Anunobi, University President Charles Hines said he will continue to support such programs at Prairie View.

"In many ways, our society has become global. Prairie View is taking a positive step toward making international linkages. If students are not exposed, they will not be able to compete effectively in the global market," Dr.

Anunobi said. "We can also minimize the cost of sending students abroad if we make these direct linkages with universities abroad."

Dr. Anunobi said he feels all areas of the university are now embracing global education.

"It is important to understand and learn about other cultures, opportunities, and how they conduct business," said Anunobi.

For more information, students should visit the Center for International and Area Studies, room 234 in W.R. Banks.

Pershing rifles team soars

Have you ever wondered who the gentlemen in military uniforms that provide escort services in campus pageants and programs are?

In some cases, it is Prairie View students in the National Honor Society of Pershing Rifles.

The society is a fraternal organization of students (some are not in Army ROTC) who participate in drill meets year round. Drill team members use actual rifles as props.

The PVAMU chapter of Pershing Rifles won first place in a Florida A&M drill meet in March.

"Being a part of Pershing Rifles prepares you for life not only in the military, but in the civilian world," Ryan Sims, a drill team commander, said.

The history of the society dates back to 1891 when John J. Pershing named a drill team the Varsity Rifles. The name later changed to the Pershing Rifles, and has been active on Prairie View's campus since the early 1970s.

Stevenson was awarded a $3,000 scholarship and $1,200 competition wardrobe. She was also the winner of the swimsuit and talent competitions.

Davis was awarded a $2,000 scholarship, official pageant pin, and the winner of the best interview award.

"I think the pageant was excellent. The lights and special effects were great. I think that the best man and woman were chosen," said Monique Collins, student.

All seven contestants, Yuava Henery, Shemeya Grant, Sonceria Doylewon, Erin Stevenson, Charles Phillips, Roshon George and Michael Davis were scored on a scale of 100 percent.

The six judges were scoring the contestants in the categories of swimsuit/sports active wear worth 10 percent; personal interview, worth 30 percent; talent, worth 35 percent; evening gown/formal wear, worth 10 percent; and impromptu interview, worth 15 percent.

First runner-ups were Sonceria Doyle who also won best evening gown and top ad winner, and Charles Phillips who also won an award for the most ads sold.

In addition to the prescribed penalties, the committee also imposed several other penalties on the school. They include: the institution being publicly reprimanded and censured, as well as the institution being placed on one-year probation from April 17, 2001.

While on probation, the institution shall develop an educational program on NCAA legislation and submit several reports that describe the progress of the university's compliance and educational program. Once the probationary period ends, the institution's president shall provide a letter to the committee affirming that the university's current athletic policies and practices conform to all requirements of NCAA regulations.

Most people agree with the stipulations.

Eric Wilson, who played football during 1991-1994 and served as graduate assistant in 1999, feels that the sanctions won't really affect the program negatively overall.

"This probation will only make the coaches think about things before they do them. But as far as winning games or strengthening the current program, it won't actually be affected," Wilson said. "It is already hard for PVAMU to get the top-notch athletes that all other schools have no problem getting, because of (PVAMU) limited amount of scholarships and winning percentage, so to get over this blemish on their public record, they just have to come up with a different approach.

"We have very few scholarships as it is, any little or big problem will hurt us. I've been here four years under four different head coaches, and who knows they (NCAA) are watching us maybe -- anything that goes wrong and we could lose the program and be back in that same rut," Kenric Harvey, senior defensive end, said.

Wilson plans to spend his summer volunteering to help athletes with strengthening and conditioning.

If a case similar to this one happens in the future, President Hines ensures that Prairie View will correct the matter immediately.

"As always, any violation discovered or reported to the university, as in this case, will be rapidly self-reported, investigated and resolved in an appropriate and prompt manner," said President Hines through a university issued press release.

"Our university history demonstrates our 'zero tolerance' for rules violations. We will continue to improve and to stress strict adherence to all rules and regulations," said current football coach

Larry Dorsey, whose inaugural coaching season earned the team a 1-9 record. "The penalties will not have an effect on the football program or university-sponsored groups such as the marching band in the upcoming 2001 season. We're going on with our business as usual."

Prairie View's first internal investigation, which dates back to April 1999, stemmed from an anonymous letter that was sent to interim athletic director Walter Redd and compliance officer Dr. Clinnon Harvey.

As a result of the letter, Vice President for University Operations, Larry Raab, formed an investigative committee with included several campus administrators and faculty members one month later.

After reviewing the report of the investigative committee in June 1999, President Hines decided a more in-depth investigation was needed due to supporting evidence found in the investigation.

The next month, Johnson was placed on administrative leave while the investigation continued.

When the committee concluded the investigation in October 1999, Johnson was fired from the university due to sufficient evidence to support violations of NCAA regulations and other acts of misconduct.

The NCAA intervened

in the investigation during May 2000 once the school reported the results of its investigation to the enforcement staff.

After an exchange of correspondence and phone calls between the NCAA, President Hines, Johnson and a former graduate assistant throughout 2000, the school and the coaches appeared before the Division I Committee on infractions on Feb. 10, 2001.

The committee, which is chaired by Jack H. Friedenthal, found that Johnson violated several NCAA rules. However, he did not believe his actions violated NCAA ethical conduct legislation since Johnson was unaware of the NCAA bylaws that prohibited Johnson's account.

In addition, the committee did not cause the university to exceed the permissible grants-in-aid limit in football and no expenses were provided beyond the value of the full grant-in-aid.

However, the committee did not condone or excuse Johnson's failure to know and adhere to NCAA legislation.

The committee found that Johnson failed to live up to NCAA Bylaw 19.01.2 which states that a coach is a teacher of students and has an obligation to be a positive role model for them.

Johnson has not coached on the collegiate level since his termination.

Campus athletic facilities need immediate attention

By Ryan McGinty
Sports Editor

This week during my series on campus athletic facilities, I will focus on the Babydome and the tennis courts.

The basketball court, which is used by the basketball teams and physical education classes, looks like it has not been painted since Coach Plummer's first stint as head coach in the early 80s. In addition to the paint, I have heard from several individuals that the court needs another wax job so the players will not slip and slide like ice skaters during games.

Have you seen the scoreboard lately?

The scoreboard is always lacking several light bulbs which makes it hard for fans to read the numbers. When Texas A&M-Corpus Christi scored 100 points on us this past season, I was worried that the scoreboard would not show that many points.

The tennis courts, which has previously ranked among the SWAC's best, needs to be refurbished immediately.

There are cracks in the middle of several courts and a lot of the nets are torn. Several weeks ago, a team member had to kill a snake which was hiding in the cracks.

During a match with Texas Southern and Alabama A&M weekends ago, several team members had to wait long periods of time to play because of the lack of adequate courts. Due to the long period, the players who waited had to forfeit the matches because the weather became too bad during their court time.

Do campus facilities have any impact on whether Prairie View receives Tier I funding?

Texas Southern names local standout new men's basketball coach

By Ryan McGinty
Sports Editor

Texas Southern University's search for a men's basketball coach ended last week with the hiring of the USA Today "Coach of the Year," Ronnie Courtney.

Courtney, head coach at Houston's Willowridge High School, replaces longtime men's coach Robert Moreland.

Coach Courtney arrives at Texas Southern with an impressive resume.

In addition to winning two consecutive Texas 5A state titles, he has coached two McDonald's All-American basketball players and has posted a 75-1 record the past two seasons.

His success over the last two years has led to his being named the top 5A coach in Texas and the 2001 USA Today's National Coach of the Year.

Courtney plans to recruit the top players in the Houston area in addition to top players from around the state of Texas.

"We're extremely pleased to introduce Ronnie Courtney as our new head men's basketball coach," said TSU athletic director Alois Blackwell.

"Expect a change."

Ruff Ryders' first lady continues to sting

First Eve gave a touch of estrogen on the Ruff Ryders debut compilation Ryde or Die. Months later she followed the compilation with her first solo project titled Ruff Ryders First Lady which was an instant hit among hip-hoppers everywhere and had the whole world dazzled with her calm, precise tracks produced by Swizz Beats on "Cowboy" to the rough and thuggish sounds that make you bounce on "Gangsta B*tches" with the help of Da Brat and Trina.

Eve also talks about how life is difficult but one still has to press on in "Life is So Hard" featuring Teena including the likes of Dr. Dre, the Marley reggae dynasty, as well as her fellow Ruff Ryder family and her boyfriend, R&B singer Stevie J.

Eve admits that her increased involvement in production was the reason that the album took so long.

"Something needs to be changed. The mixes aren't right. I could say this better," said Eve. "I had to make it so when it comes out, I'm not regretting anything."

The title of her CD actually came from Hip-Hop superstar Q-Tip.

"I really didn't like that name, but it would be really hot since I am a Scorpio in every aspect."

The CD lives up to every aspect of Eve with great and sexy voice that laid over the tracks.

Now the den mother of the Ruff Ryders returns once again with her sophomore album entitled Scorpion.

Born Evelyn Jihan Jeffers, this twentytwo-year-old Philadelphia diva hooked up with numerous artists to help her on her second album

Marie.

This CD gets four out of five panthers and is worth buying, especially if you are a Ruff Ryders fan. Once you listen to this CD, you would swear that a scorpion's sting never felt this good.
