What are YOU doing this Summer?

Details: Attention Juniors! Would you like to spend your summer break among some of the most interesting and famous people in the world and gain valuable work experience at the same time? If so, apply to become an Aspen Institute Summer Intern and you could be headed to Aspen, Colorado in May 2013. Interns work with the Aspen Institute staff to help produce a variety of seminars, forums, and festivals attended by leaders from every corner of the globe. The Aspen Institute Internship is one of the most prestigious work experiences offered through The Mungo Center for Professional Excellence. It is highly competitive and only open to rising Seniors. Three positions are available to Wofford students. The internships are unpaid, but all expenses are covered through the generous support of Wofford Alumnus Mike Brown '76. To apply for an Aspen Institute Internship, send a cover letter and resume to Scott Cochran, Dean of The Mungo Center for Professional Excellence, by Oct. 30. You can learn more about the Aspen Institute at www.aspeninstitute.org.

Subject: MESSAGE TO FACULTY AND STAFF: New Wofford employee in the Mungo Center
Date: October 2, 2012 at 10:13 AM
To: Wofford Staff WoffordStaff@Wofford.Edu

Erin Emory recently joined The Mungo Center staff as Assistant Director of Career Services. Prior to coming to Wofford, Erin worked as an Americorps VISTA for the United Way of the Piedmont. She is a 2011 graduate of Presbyterian College with a BA in English and has, quite possibly, the most interesting collection of shoes any of us in The Mungo Center have ever seen. Please welcome Erin to Wofford when you see her.

Smartphones & Exercise

Working out may be a time to unwind and clear your head, but more consumers are turning to smartphones to stay connected while exercising, according to a new study.

Market research found that 51% of those who exercise are using smartphones during their workouts, whether for checking email (33%) or tracking their pace (43%). Listening to music is the most popular way to incorporate mobile devices into a workout (91%).

The study was conducted among 500 social media users who place a high emphasis on health and exercising.

About 33% of respondents said they use apps to track fitness and food regimens, while 31% do similar tracking on websites. Using a game console remains a popular way to do workouts, as 14% use a gaming system to exercise. About 51% who do so said they use the Wii Fit.

A high majority of consumers are also sharing their fitness progress with others (75%), with Facebook being the most popular platform to do so, followed by phone and email.

Overall, the study found that 74% consumers believe technology has made a positive impact in improving their weight loss efforts and even increases motivation (72%) to keep going.

Technology Can Improve Health Care

In 1900, an American man could expect to live on average until he was 45 years old. By 1940, that life-expectancy number had jumped to 62 years, while for women the average number increased from 51 years to 66 years. That unprecedented advance in public health was largely the result of the spread of disease-fighting technologies like vaccines, antibiotics, and improved sanitation.

A similar opportunity is upon us. This time, the potential revolution in public health will largely be led by digital technologies that enable people to live healthier lives and make better lifestyle decisions.

When it comes to living healthier lives, the digital tools that are being widely adopted are not strikingly expensive and high-tech, but ones that are useful and suddenly affordable. For example, Web sites with personal databases, smartphone and Twitter apps for logging diet and exercise routines, pedometers, tracking devices and heart-rate monitors. Studies show that constant feedback of personal information can act as an incentive to nudge people to adopt healthier habits. These digital tools offer constant self-awareness, a way to turn action into change and to do it scientifically, rigorously, and methodically.

There is an emerging “pay for prevention” health industry, led by companies that create programs for corporate clients that use digital technology and financial incentives to prompt employees to exercise more and eat wisely. These include several companies such as Buck-A-Pound, GlobalFit, Health Enhancement Services, ShapeUp, Tangerine Wellness and Virgin HealthMiles, part of Richard Branson’s Virgin Group. Money incentives do help, but the key to long-term changes in health behavior is engaging people emotionally as well as rationally.

Everyone has heard the simple health edict: Eat less, exercise more. But too few of us follow that entirely rational advice. Witness the American epidemic of obesity. Behavior change is hard. But the Web is made for information gathering and social networking – an ideal medium, it seems, for tracking activity and changing behavior. Digital tools open the door as never before to a personal path to better health, by combining a person’s data with the social support of online communities.

De-Stress at Your Desk: Office Yoga

Standing Spinal Rolls (Up & Down) release tension in the spine by creating space between the vertebrae and stretching the muscles of the back.

Step-by-Step Instructions:

- 1) Stand with your feet hip distance apart, arms by your side and your palms facing forward.
- 2) Take 5 deep breaths here, allowing your facial muscles, neck and shoulders to relax.
- 3) Inhale deeply and as you exhale, become like a rag doll as you slowly roll down your spine towards the floor.
- 4) Your head, neck and arms should be completely limp, while your legs and belly remain engaged to support you.
- 5) When you have rolled down as far as you can, slightly bend the knees to lessen the pull on the low back and hamstrings. Clasp each elbow in the opposite hand, creating a box around the head.

- 6) Hang here and breathe for as long as feels needed. Release your arms and draw the belly in and up as you slowly roll up to standing.

Notice the calm in your body.

The Best Apps to Monitor & Improve Health

Are you counting your calories? Cooking healthier meals? Mapping out your next daily run? There are apps for that. Actually, at least 10,000 aim to help with diet and exercise. If you're trying to get in shape, or stay that way, here are some of the best.

Calorie Counter & Diet Tracker: MyFitnessPal LLC

Cost: Free

Runs On: Android, iPhone, iPad

This app takes your diet public. Users link their account to either their Facebook profile or a defined circle of online friends. For better or worse, each weigh-in is broadcast to perhaps hundreds of "friends." The daily counter also tracks nutritional intake. That way, you can see if you are getting enough of the recommended daily allowance of fiber or calcium, or overdoing it on sodium and sugar.

Calorie Tracker: Livestrong.com

Cost: $2.99

Runs On: BlackBerry, iPhone, iPad

Developed by Lance Armstrong's team of doctors and athletes, this app focuses on fitness first and diet second. Like the others, the app offers a streamlined food diary. But, when it comes to logging in daily exercise, this app has a calories-burned breakdown for 2,000 fitness activities—far more than the other tracking apps. Users' accounts are linked to the Livestrong website, which offers a rich database of information, instruction, and inspiration.

Nutrition: Fooducate

Cost: Free

Runs On: iPhone, iPad

Use the app's bar-code scanning feature in your own kitchen or at the grocery store to recognize more than 200,000 food items. Each item is graded according to its nutritional value. There are warnings about trans fats, sugar, and controversial additives. The app will also compare two items and offer healthier alternatives from its database.

Exercise: iMapMyFitness

Cost: Free

Runs On: BlackBerry, Android, iPhone, iPad

Ideal for runners who travel and already use the popular MapMyFitness website to map routes and find runs in unfamiliar cities. This app uploads and integrates your workout with your profile and has a database of searchable routes from more than two million other fitness-meets-tech fans.

Healthy Cooking: Good Food Health Recipes

Cost: $2.99

Runs On: iPhone, iPad

When it comes to trying to cook healthier, this app has it all: photos, clear instructions, nutritional breakdown, and a shopping list that can be organized by meal and checked off as purchased. The app comes with only 175 recipes. But more can be purchased within the program, from BBC Worldwide, the commercial arm of British Broadcasting Corp.

This Month's Q&A: Ask the Expert

Q: What is Health Information Technology?

Health information technology (Health IT) makes it possible for health care providers to better manage patient care through secure use and sharing of health information. Health IT includes the use of electronic health records (EHRs) instead of paper medical records to maintain people's health information.

Widespread use of health IT within the health care industry is hoped to improve the quality of health care, prevent medical errors, reduce health care costs, decrease paperwork, and expand access to information needed for appropriate health care. At the same time, it is imperative that the privacy and security of electronic health information be ensured as this information is maintained and transmitted electronically and laws are in place to ensure this privacy. www.hhs.gov

The Power of Social Media

Giving People a Voice

For people who are experiencing a serious health condition or trying to make a significant lifestyle change to improve health, it is easy to feel isolated and alone. As a result, it's no surprise that people who are living with a chronic disease are more likely to reach out for support online.

Even people who have the support of family and friends can benefit from interacting with people who are going through a similar experience. For these people, online social networking tools can provide a support system and allow:

- One voice to be heard: For people in the midst of health changes, discussing thoughts and feelings can create a sense of control and can actually be therapeutic. After people regain a sense of control, it is easier to take action and make changes necessary to improve personal health. Whether the medium is a blog, an online forum or some other online social channel, asking questions and expressing thoughts and fears can help people find important information and realize that they have access to support.
- Many voices to be heard: Groups of people are often smarter than the smartest people in them. When patients with the same chronic condition share observations with one another, their collective wisdom can yield clinical insights well beyond any single patient or physician. This is the idea behind crowd sourcing. Allowing users to rate everything from the helpfulness of user-provided answers to the quality of products.

Although many people believe that social media use is only for young people, the reality is quite different. Social networking among Internet users ages 50 and older has nearly doubled — from 22% to 42% over the past year.

Nearly half (47%) of Internet users ages 50-64 and one in four (26%) users age 65 and older now use social networking sites.

For young and old, these social networks can be powerful secret weapons to enable good health. Social networks enable virtual support networks that can combine virtual and real-world communities to provide a powerful support system. For example, a smoker who is fighting to quit may not have someone in the office to turn to for support, but online, entire communities exist to offer encouragement and tips.

Two activities stand out among people living with chronic disease: blogging and participating in online health discussions. Studies show that having a chronic disease significantly increases an Internet user's likelihood to say they work on a blog or contribute to an online discussion, a listserv, or other forum that helps with personal issues or health problems. As one person told the Pew Research Center's Internet and American Life Project: "[An] online support group helped me learn about the disease and provided comfort in knowing that my symptoms were not 'just in my head,' and helped me take steps to adjust to living with a chronic condition."

For many people, these online interactions offer real-world benefits.

EXERCISE TIP

Zumba is a dance fitness method based on salsa and other Latin dance moves, performed to Latin and world music beats, and then it is choreographed to allow people of any fitness or dance experience level to enjoy a fantastic workout.

Zumba classes are intended to provide a large calorie burn through aerobic activity done with interval training in mind. Depending on body weight, sex, fitness level and other common physical factors, the number of calories you burn in a typical Zumba class will equal that of any fast social dancing hour, such as salsa, disco or jitterbug. For most people, that can add up to 400 to 600 calories burned per hour. With the classes choreographed to provide intervals of intensity in both pace of music and type of movements, class members' energy expenditure is maximized for fat-burning benefits. Fitness moves are also incorporated within Zumba dances, so don't be surprised if you find yourself moving from a fast merengue beat to a long, slow set of push-ups on the wall, or doing several sets of squats followed by plyometric jumps.

Raspberry Rewards

Fragrantly sweet with a subtly tart overtone and almost melt-in-your-mouth texture, raspberries are wonderfully delicious and are usually in limited supply. Most cultivated varieties of raspberries are grown in California from June through October.

Raspberries possess almost 50% higher antioxidant activity than strawberries, three times that of kiwis, and ten times the antioxidant activity of tomatoes.

The biggest contribution to raspberries' antioxidant capacity is their ellagitannins, a family of compounds almost exclusive to the raspberry, which have been reported to have anti-cancer activity. As a food containing the antioxidant ellagic acid, raspberries may help prevent damage to cell membranes and other structures in the body by neutralizing free radicals.

Raspberries are also an excellent source of manganese and vitamin C. They also qualify as a good source of folate, and the minerals magnesium, potassium and copper. Coupled with this, raspberries earn an "excellent" in terms of dietary fiber. This combination of nutrients makes raspberries a great fruit choice for having minimal impact on blood sugars.

Raspberry Bars

Tart raspberry filling is swirled into a low-fat cream filling in these beautiful bars. They're a festive treat for an end of summer picnic or party. View more tasty dessert recipes at www.eatingwell.com.

Ingredients

Crust

- 3/4 cup white whole-wheat flour
- 1/2 cup chopped pecans
- 2 tablespoons granulated sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 3 tablespoons cold butter, cut into small pieces
- 2 tablespoons ice water
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract

Raspberry Filling

- 2 teaspoons unflavored gelatin
- 2 tablespoons water
- 3 cups fresh raspberries, divided
- 1/2 cup granulated sugar
- 4 tablespoons nonfat cream cheese, softened
- 2 tablespoons low-fat milk
- 1 tablespoon confectioners' sugar

Directions

1. To prepare crust: Preheat oven to 400°F. Coat an 8-inch-square baking pan with cooking spray. Bake the crust until it looks set, but not browned, about 15 minutes. Let cool on a wire rack..
2. Place flour, pecans, 2 tablespoons sugar and salt in a food processor; process until nuts are finely ground. Add butter one piece at a time until incorporated. Add ice water and vanilla and pulse just until the dough starts to come together. Transfer to the prepared pan. Press firmly into the pan to form a bottom crust.
3. To prepare raspberry filling: Sprinkle gelatin over 2 tablespoons of water in a small bowl; let stand, stirring once or twice, while you prepare the rest of the filling.
4. Reserve 16 raspberries. Puree the remaining raspberries in a food processor until smooth. Transfer to a medium saucepan and stir in 1/2 cup sugar. Cook over medium heat until bubbling. Stir in the gelatin mixture and cook, stirring, until the gelatin is melted, about 1 minute.
5. Fill a large bowl with ice water. Pour the raspberry mixture into a medium bowl and set it in the bowl of ice water. Refrigerate, stirring occasionally with a rubber spatula, until the mixture thickens to the consistency of loose jam and is beginning to set around the edges, about 30 minutes.
6. Meanwhile, beat cream cheese, milk, and confectioners' sugar in a medium bowl with an electric mixer until smooth.
7. Spread the raspberry filling over the crust. Dollop the cream cheese mixture over the filling. Draw the tip of a sharp knife or skewer through the two fillings to create a swirled effect. Nestle the reserved berries into the filling, evenly spacing them so each bar will be topped with a berry when cut. Refrigerate for at least 3 hours.

Hazards of Pessimism

Pessimism refers to the mental state of seeing the worst aspect of things or believing that the worst is going to happen. It signifies lack of hope or confidence in the future. Studies show pessimistic people are prone to get physical and mental problems and they are susceptible to chronic pains and illnesses.

The effects of pessimism are greater than the development of negative outlook and lack of hope. It can contribute to cases of depression. The feeling that things will go wrong or nothing good will ever happen often triggers depressive thoughts, and these can lead to more serious problems like chronic pain, anger, insomnia, poor diet, and other mental and emotional problems.

Aside from depression and other emotional issues, pessimism can also result in physical ailments. This is due to lack of mindful attention to their health. Tobacco use, lack of physical activity, obesity, high blood pressure and high cholesterol are some outcomes often related to a negative outlook on life.

In contrast, people with an optimistic viewpoint are usually in better physical, emotional, and mental condition, and are more likely to remain gainfully employed. This is because they take care of themselves, they exercise, they eat to stay healthy, and they believe in working for better things in the future.

Optimism and the Power of Positive Thinking

Optimism comes from the Latin word optimus, meaning "best," which describes how an optimistic person is always looking for the best in any situation and expecting good things to happen. Optimism is the tendency to believe, expect or hope that things will turn out well. Even if something bad happens, like the loss of a job, an optimist sees the silver lining. The emerging field of positive psychology studies the positive impact that optimism has on mental health. Other research shows that optimism may be good for physical health too—optimists are sick less and live longer than pessimists. Apparently, a positive outlook on life strengthens the immune system (and the body's defenses against illness), cardiovascular system (optimists have fewer heart attacks), and the body's ability to handle stress.

Optimists believe that their own actions result in positive things happening, that they are responsible for their own happiness, and that they can expect more good things to happen in the future. Optimists don't blame themselves when bad things happen. They view bad events as results of something outside of themselves. Optimists tend to share several other positive characteristics that increase overall happiness and promote health, while reducing depression and chronic stress:

- They think about, reflect on, and emphasize the good things in life.
- They are grateful and thankful for all their blessings.

- They don't complain when something bad happens.
- They feel that nothing can hold them back from achieving success and reaching their goals.
- They believe in abundance.
- They are confident that the world offers plenty of opportunities for everyone to succeed.

Luckily, you can change your thinking patterns over time. Even a pessimist can become an optimist with enough practice! All you need to do is to re-frame how you define events. Instead of dwelling on the bad experience, analyze it to figure out what good can come of it. Even if a project at work is deemed a failure, think about what you learned during the process. What strengths did you discover within yourself, and when can you use those talents again? Virtually any failure can be turned into a learning experience, which increases your potential for success in the future.

Optimism is a skill of emotional intelligence, which translates to a better career and greater success in life. Life is too short to be miserable, so start turning your thinking around! Positive thoughts, an optimistic outlook, and overall happiness can advance your prospects for work, relationships, and other life experiences.

Maintain Your Mental Flexibility

Learn to Roll with the Punches

When you first start making room for healthy habits in your busy life, being a stickler can be beneficial—setting a workout schedule, planning your meals in advance, saying no to things that get in the way of your goals. Without giving yourself some rules—and being a little inflexible—at the beginning, you'll be likely to fall off the wagon much more quickly. As you build your habits, you'll eventually discover that things don't always go according to your plan. There will undoubtedly be speed bumps (your favorite exercise class is cancelled), detours (an unexpectedly long work day), and setbacks (birthday cake)! If you rigidly follow your plan instead of being a little flexible once in a while, you could do more harm than good. If you feel like you've become a bit of a stickler about strict schedules and perfect plans, it may be time to loosen up and become more flexible. Here's how:

Accept Your Behavioral History

People often talk about Type-A characteristics as if they are inherent personality traits. But most people didn't become inflexible and a perfectionist overnight. There have probably been many times in your past when your perfectionism paid off. The science of behavior holds that we will continue doing those things that get recognized, revered, and rewarded. The reason that you've developed so many take-charge tendencies may be because throughout your life, you've received lots of powerful praise for taking the reins.

Identify Places Where You Can Compromise

Perhaps you're always the first to speak your mind in important meetings or you have a habit of jumping to point errors in company communications. In order to become more flexible, it helps to first recognize and record situations where you most frequently try to steer the ship. Observing your own inflexible behavior lets you notice those situations where you could sometimes stand back a bit and let others take the lead. At this point, you're not trying to change your behavior; you're simply becoming aware of the points in your day where you could opt to be less rigid. Jot down these situations for future reference.

Practice Flexible Actions

In yoga, if you want to really get a good stretch and build strength, you've got to come to class regularly and practice your postures, continuously pushing yourself a little further. Similarly, if you want to maintain a mellow attitude, you've got to practice stretching beyond the normal limits of your mental flexibility. Each time you stretch and try a new way of interacting with your environment, you become more flexible and it becomes easier to let go.

Set Small Goals For Mental Stretching

Once you've spent some time observing and tracking your inflexible behaviors and you've started to practice being flexible in certain situations throughout your day, the next step is to set small goals for mental stretching. Successful dieters set reasonable targets for steady weight loss each week. If you want to keep up your motivation and see change quickly, choose how many times you'll be flexible throughout your day or week, write down your goal and post it where you can see it. Be sure to track your practice. As you see your behaviors moving toward that goal line each week, you'll know that you're moving toward a lasting change.

Learn that Failure Is Functional

Becoming more flexible is a great wellness goal. It takes time to learn to let go and to share some of your burdens with others. As you attempt more flexible actions each day, notice some of the stress being lifted from your life. Sure, there will be days when that pesky perfectionism bug comes back to sting you. When you fail to be flexible, you can come to realize your most menacing triggers. The next time you're faced with a similar situation, you can try to manipulate the circumstances in your favor (e.g., ask for extra time on big projects or recruit someone to help make travel plans). Just remember that falling into inflexible habits for a little while is OK, because now you've got the strategies to go back and stretch those mental muscles!

www.sparkpeople.com

Exercise during the workday improves job performance, research has shown. Studies show that after exercising, participants returned to work more tolerant of themselves and more forgiving of their colleagues. Their work performance was also consistently higher, as shown by better time management and improved mental sharpness.

If your employer offers onsite exercise facilities, start using them as often as you can. If you don't have a gym at your office, join a local fitness club. At the very least, bring along your walking shoes and take a heart-pumping FREE walk instead of going out for a high-calorie lunch. After all, taking time to exercise could translate into higher pay if your job performance improves as a result.

De-Stress at Your Desk: Office Yoga

Downward Facing Dog is one of the most well known and widely practiced Yoga poses. It stretches the entire back of the body, helping to relieve tension and fatigue. For the office, a modified version is depicted below .

Step-by-Step Instructions:

- 1) Keep your weight supported by your feet and then stand behind your chair with your hands on the back of the chair, about shoulder-width apart.
- 2) Take a few steps back until your back and legs are at a 90 degree angle with each other and you are looking straight down at the floor.

- 3) Inhale deeply and as you exhale, drive your hips and sitting bones back towards the wall behind you.
- 4) Draw your abdominal muscles in and feel your spine lengthening.
- 5) Relax your shoulders and roll them out and away from your ears. The base of the neck will soften and the head will drop.
- 6) Stay here for 5 deep breaths, then slowly walk your feet forward and stand up straight.
- 7) Relax your arms by your side, standing tall.

Enjoy the newfound freedom in your body.

Sharing is Achieving To Succeed, Tell Others About Your Goals

Whether you're looking to eat healthier, increase your energy, lose a few pounds, or build up those "almost there" muscles—it's good to find a fitness friend, maybe even several! In fact, experts say sharing your goals with others is vital to achieving them. Outside support can give you important tools—knowledge, insight, moral support, and even humor—to help you get results.

Don't be afraid to share your goals with family and friends. Having those closest to you in on your plans can mean daily, invaluable support and assistance. You may even find that they're willing to modify their own lives, at least temporarily, to help out—giving up soft drinks or helping plan healthy meals, for example. What's more, just the fact that you've confided in them is a powerful motivator for helping you remain consistent and persistent.

Avoid naysayers. For whatever reason, some folks just have the habit of belittling or ridiculing the goals of others, whether because they feel inadequate and threatened, or are simply mean! You're under no obligation to discuss your goals or action plan with anyone. If you know upfront that someone will be negative—or even if you discover it after the fact—steer conversation away from personal topics.

Demonstrate encouragement for the goals your friends and family want to accomplish. Even better, come up with some common goals that you can work on together. There's strength in numbers.

The simple act of one person saying no to a dessert can spark someone else to think hard about whether they really want to indulge.

Don't expect one fitness buddy to be all things. Instead, enlist a diverse group of people who can share your various interests in small ways, whether swapping healthy recipes, exercising with enthusiasm, or confiding weight loss secrets. Not only will that keep you from relying too heavily on one resource, but it will expand your circle of friends and keep things fresh as well.

Fit your weight loss needs into your life in small and varied ways: a healthy pot-luck lunch with co-workers, an evening walk with your spouse, or a brief morning chat with your online fitness buddies. You'll be helping others while you help yourself.

Remember the old adage that to make a friend you have to be a friend. Make your fitness friendships win-win situations by making sure to give something back.

Sharing your goals with others is a powerful step towards both clarifying and fulfilling them. Not only are you more likely to follow through once you've voiced them—you're more likely to have fun along the way!

This Month's Q&A: Ask the Expert

Q: What time of day should I weigh myself?

When you're trying to lose, maintain, or gain weight, you need to weigh yourself regularly to check your progress. It doesn't matter what time of day you weigh yourself but it is important to be consistent with the time. You will often weigh more at night than in the morning because in the morning, after you've gone to the bathroom, you will have very little undigested or digested food "waiting to leave your body." If one day you weigh yourself in the morning and the next day you check at night, it'll seem like you gained weight when you really haven't. The time of day when your weight will be most accurate is in the morning after you've gone to the bathroom. If you have a scale at home, weigh yourself then. It is also important to note that since body weight fluctuates daily, it's important to keep a long term record of your body weight. That way, short-term trends can easily be put into perspective. During weight loss attempts, this can help avoid negative and pessimistic thoughts and unnecessary mental anguish or guilt, which can often lead to counter-productive behaviors, even in the middle of a successful weight management program!

Pumpkin Seed Power

Subtly sweet and nutty with a malleable, chewy texture, the roasted seeds from inside your Halloween pumpkin are one of the most nutritious and flavorful seeds around. While pumpkin seeds are available year round, they are the freshest in the fall when pumpkins are in season.

Pumpkin seeds provide a wide range of traditional nutrients. They are a very good source of the minerals magnesium, manganese, and phosphorus, and a good source of iron, copper, protein, and zinc. Snack on a quarter-cup of pumpkin seeds and you will receive over 46% of the daily value for magnesium, 28% of the DV for iron, 52% of the DV for manganese, 24% of the DV for copper, 16% of the DV for protein, and 17% of the DV for zinc.

The fact that pumpkin seeds serve as a good source of zinc may contribute to the role of pumpkin seeds in support of the prostate health for men. In addition to maintaining prostate health, another reason for older men to make zinc-rich foods, such as pumpkin seeds, a regular part of their healthy way of eating is bone mineral density. Although osteoporosis is often thought to be a disease for which postmenopausal women are at highest risk, it is also a potential problem for older men.

Pumpkin seeds should be stored in an airtight container in the refrigerator. While they may stay edible for several months, they seem to lose their peak freshness after about one to two months.

Recipe Corner

Pumpkin Bread

Canned pumpkin puree and whole-wheat flour come together in this healthy homemade pumpkin bread. The canned pumpkin helps keep the bread moist and tender. Depending on your preference, feel free to add a pinch or two of cinnamon, all spice, and/or nutmeg to season the bread. View more pumpkin recipes at www.eatingwell.com.

Ingredients

- 2 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 2 cups whole-wheat flour, preferably white whole-wheat
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- 2 teaspoons baking soda
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 2 large eggs
- 2 large egg whites
- 2 cups packed light brown sugar
- 3 cups canned unseasoned pumpkin puree
- 1/2 cup canola oil

Directions

1. Preheat oven to 350°F. Coat two 9-by-5-inch loaf pans with cooking spray.
2. Stir all-purpose flour, whole-wheat flour, baking powder, baking soda, and salt in a large bowl (add other spices, if desired). Whisk eggs, egg whites, brown sugar, pumpkin, and oil in another large bowl. Add the pumpkin mixture to the dry ingredients and mix until just combined. Scrape the batter into the prepared pans and smooth the tops.
3. Bake the loaves until the tops are golden brown and a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean, 50 to 60 minutes. Cool in the pans for 10 minutes. Turn the loaves out onto a wire rack to cool completely.

Subject: MESSAGE TO WOFFORD STAFF: Spectrum's Petition to Change the College's Non-Discrimination Statement
Date: October 4, 2012 at 12:22 PM
To:

Dear Wofford Staff,

Over the past decade, many colleges and universities have updated their statements of non-discrimination to include sexual orientation in order to show that their campuses are safe, accepting places for all students. By changing their non-discrimination policies to include sexual orientation, these institutions have made it clear that while LGBT individuals are a minority, their presence is important and they will be respected by the campus community. Such policy changes also speak to the many ally students, faculty, and staff members, especially those with LGBT friends and family members, for whom the issue of equality is important. To prospective students, faculty, and staff, an inclusive non-discrimination policy implies that the campus atmosphere is open, respectful, safe, and friendly.

After conducting a survey of the Wofford community, Spectrum believes that Wofford College is ready to include sexual orientation in its non-discrimination policy. The results of the survey suggest that a majority of the Wofford community are accepting and supportive of LGBT individuals. However, the survey results suggest that Wofford College as an institution is perceived as being exclusive towards and unsupportive of LGBT individuals. Spectrum proposes that updating the college's statement of non-discrimination to include sexual orientation is one way Wofford can change this perception.

If you feel that the college should include sexual orientation in its non-discrimination policy, Spectrum asks that you sign the petition by following this link: <http://vovici.com/wsb.dll/s/a381g51340>. Further, if you feel strongly for this change, please encourage others to sign this as well. The link to the petition will close Monday, October 8 at 3:00pm.

Best,
Alex Hubbard and Jonathan Foster

Location: Olin 116

Cost: Free

Details: Join the French Club in viewing "La Délicatesse" on Oct. 10. Pizza from Venus Pie at 6 p.m., viewing at 7 p.m. The movie is in French with English subtitles. In this film, Audrey Tautou (of "Amélie" and "Coco Before Chanel") is Nathalie, a beautiful, happy, and successful Parisian business executive who finds herself suddenly widowed after a three-year marriage to her soul mate. To cope with her loss, she buries herself and her emotions in her work to the dismay of her friends, family and co-workers. One day, inexplicably, her zest for life and love is rekindled by a most unlikely source, her seemingly unexceptional, gauche, and average looking office subordinate, Markus (comic star Francois Damiens). At first stunned by Nathalie's unexpected attention, Markus comes to gradually believe in her feelings and shifts into romantic high gear. As their relationship goes from awkward to genuinely loving, Nathalie and Markus will have to overcome a host of obstacles including everyone else's judgmental perceptions as well as their own self-doubts. Please email Dr. Schmitz schmitzcl@wofford.edu or Jessi Fuller fullerjb@email.wofford.edu by 3 p.m. on the 10th to help with the food order.

What are YOU doing this Summer?Details: Attention Juniors! Would you like to spend your summer break among some of the most interesting and famous people in the world and gain valuable work experience at the same time? If so, apply to become an Aspen Institute Summer Intern and you could be headed to Aspen, Colorado in May 2013. Interns work with the Aspen Institute staff to help produce a variety of seminars, forums, and festivals attended by leaders from every corner of the globe. The Aspen Institute Internship is one of the most prestigious work experiences offered through The Mungo Center for Professional Excellence.

It is highly competitive and only open to rising Seniors. Three positions are available to Wofford students. The internships are unpaid, but all expenses are covered through the generous support of Wofford Alumnus Mike Brown '76. To apply for an Aspen Institute Internship, send a cover letter and resume to Scott Cochran, Dean of The Mungo Center for Professional Excellence, by Oct. 30. You can learn more about the Aspen Institute at www.aspeninstitute.org.

Re: Parking Permits

Classes for the 2012-2013 academic year officially began Monday, Sept. 3. Therefore, everyone has had ample time to register their vehicles with Campus Safety. Beginning tomorrow, Wednesday, Oct. 10, any vehicle parked on campus without a Wofford parking permit is subject to towing. If you have your parking permit, but forgot to apply it to your vehicle, do so now.

Admission and Development Officers: Please know that we will check with you and your visitors first.

Pizza from Venus Pie at 6 p.m., viewing at 7 p.m. The movie is in French with English subtitles. In this film, Audrey Tautou (of "Amélie" and "Coco Before Chanel") is Nathalie, a beautiful, happy, and successful Parisian business executive who finds herself suddenly widowed after a three-year marriage to her soul mate. To cope with her loss, she buries herself and her emotions in her work to the dismay of her friends, family and co-workers. One day, inexplicably, her zest for life and love is rekindled by a most unlikely source, her seemingly unexceptional, gauche, and average looking office subordinate, Markus (comic star Francois Damiens). At first stunned by Nathalie's unexpected attention, Markus comes to gradually believe in her feelings and shifts into romantic high gear. As their relationship goes from awkward to genuinely loving, Nathalie and Markus will have to overcome a host of obstacles including everyone else's judgmental perceptions as well as their own self-doubts. Please email Dr. Schmitz schmitzcl@wofford.edu or Jessi Fuller fullerjb@email.wofford.edu by 3 p.m. TODAY to help with the food order.

Subject: Important Message from President Dunlap
Date: October 11, 2012 at 9:03 AM
To: Wofford Staff WoffordStaff@Wofford.Edu, Wofford Students WoffordStudents@Wofford.Edu

To: The Wofford Community
From: President Dunlap

Since the announcement made on September 21 that the trustees of Wofford College and Converse College had voted, respectively, to initiate a process to study a heightened level of collaboration and cooperation between the two institutions, Presidents Benjamin B. Dunlap of Wofford and Elizabeth A. Fleming of Converse are pleased to announce the formation of a Joint Study Committee. The committee is comprised of 18 individuals representing both colleges. They are:

Elizabeth A. Fleming, President of Converse College
Benjamin B. Dunlap, President of Wofford College
Betsy Crane Griffith, Chair, Converse Board of Trustees
J. Harold Chandler, Chair, Wofford Board of Trustees
William Barnet, III, At Large representative
Joab M. Lesesne, Jr., At Large representative
Benjamin Wall, Converse Trustee
Corry W. Oakes, Wofford Trustee
Harriet Smith O'Neill, Converse Trustee
Daniel B. Morrison, Wofford Trustee
Melissa Walker, George D. Johnson Professor of History, Converse
Angela Shiflet, Larry Hearn McCalla Professor of Computer Science, Wofford
Ann Pletcher, Professor of Accounting, Converse
Karen Goodchild, Associate Professor of Art History, Wofford
Jeff Barker, Vice President for Academic Affairs, Converse
David Beacham, Senior Vice President for Administration, Wofford
Bobby Stewart, Vice President for Institutional Advancement, Converse
Jenni Lister, Director of Admission, Wofford

The committee's charge will be to brainstorm, investigate, and identify potential avenues for collaboration between both colleges, seizing opportunities to capitalize on each institution's strengths for the maximum benefit of current and future students. This committee is designed to be both a source and a conduit for ideas, and opportunities to receive input from constituents of both colleges will be provided in the course of the committee's deliberations. It will operate with an open timetable and with no foregone conclusions, and will provide regular updates to the respective Boards of Trustees at each college. It is anticipated that, in the course of their work, the committee will jointly determine a time for final recommendations to the trustees.

Date/Time: 10/15/2012 4:00:00 PM

Location: Leonard Auditorium

Cost: Free

Details: David Warren grew up in the shadow of the Manhattan Project, in a community bound together by a common purpose and a common devotion to the life of the mind. That happy accident of belonging, those early habits of mind, and that deep love of learning: all of these provided a lens through which Warren has made sense of and reflected upon subsequent life choices, from teach-ins in Selma, to life on an ashram, to the "Life in the Model City" project at Yale University. Currently president of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, Warren will talk about the importance of the community of the liberal arts, both the physical community of the residential liberal arts college and the ideal community of the mind.

Subject: REMINDER: Dr. David Warren to speak TODAY at 4 in Leonard Auditorium
Date: October 15, 2012 at 1:05 PM
To: Wofford Staff WoffordStaff@Wofford.Edu, Wofford Students WoffordStudents@Wofford.Edu

The campus community is encouraged to attend the 4 p.m. talk TODAY by Dr. David Warren, president of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, on “Child of the Manhattan Atomic Project: Life Chances, Life Choices, and the Liberal Arts.”

The event will be in Leonard Auditorium.

David Warren grew up in the shadow of the Manhattan Project, in a community bound together by a common purpose and a common devotion to the life of the mind. That happy accident of belonging, those early habits of mind, and that deep love of learning: all of these provided a lens through which Warren has made sense of and reflected upon subsequent life choices, from teach-ins in Selma, to life on an ashram, to the “Life in the Model City” project at Yale University. He will talk about the importance of the community of the liberal arts, both the physical community of the residential liberal arts college and the ideal community of the mind.

This presentation is part of the “Re:Thinking Education” initiative focusing on the liberal arts, higher education and Wofford College.

Office managers/supervisors are encouraged to allow as many staff members as possible to attend this important event, while keeping your office open and staffed.

Date: October 16, 2012 at 1:41 PM
To: Wofford Staff WoffordStaff@Wofford.Edu, Wofford Students WoffordStudents@Wofford.Edu

To: Wofford Campus Community

The Wofford College Board of Trustees today voted to add “sexual orientation” to its policy on non-discrimination.

The policy now reads:

It is the policy of Wofford College to provide equal opportunities and reasonable accommodation to all persons regardless of race, color, creed, religion, sex, age, national origin, disability, veteran status, sexual orientation or other legally protected status in accordance with applicable federal and state laws.

“The board’s decision revises an institutional statement to conform to the long-standing practice of non-discrimination in all offices and programs of the college,” says President Benjamin B. Dunlap.

Details: Dr. David Efurd, Art History "How to Carve a Buddhist Cave: Techniques of Rock-cut Architecture." In ancient India, pious Buddhists carved artificial cave monasteries directly into cliffs of stone. Populated by Buddhist monks and then abandoned temporarily, these remote caves persist due to their unusual method of manufacture. This talk will discuss the unique features of these rock-cut monuments, their manufacture, and how these fascinating monuments remain relevant to religious communities even today.

Are you a member of the Spartanburg YMCA? Are you interested in becoming a member?

We are exploring the possibility of getting a discounted rate for Wofford faculty and staff, but we need to know how many of you already are members. That will help us determine whether we already qualify for a discount, or whether we need to encourage more members to be eligible for a discount.

If you are a member of the Spartanburg YMCA or are interested in becoming a member, please email Faith Morris (morrisfh@wofford.edu) or call her at x4020.

Re: Corporate membership at Spartanburg YMCA

See the memo below and the attachments regarding membership to the Spartanburg YMCA.

Wofford's "trial period" has begun, so when you visit or join the Y, please let them know you are a Wofford employee (and see the note about taking a paycheck stub with you as verification of employment here).

Thanks.

morrisfh@wofford.edu

I am excited to see that the faculty and staff of Wofford are interested in starting a corporate partnership with the Y! The financial benefit of a corporate membership does include a 10% reduction on the monthly membership dues on all membership types, except for the upstate membership. As a partner, there are also lots of other benefits such as the Y participating in events at Wofford, volunteer opportunities at the Y for Wofford, "Corporate Days" at the Y, health assessments for employees, onsite Y classes at Wofford, and much more. We really try to make each partnership unique to enhance the health and wellness initiatives already set forth by the company.

To start a corporate partnership, we would set up a trial enrollment period. During that 2 week time frame, employees would either come join the Y or stop by the member service desk to let us know they are employed with Wofford. If at the end of that time frame, there are a minimum of 10 employees that have been added to the Wofford group, then the corporate partnership goes into effect. It will stay in effect as long as a minimum of 10 employees remain active. We verify employment by a recent paycheck stub, so all employees would need to bring that with them. The corporate partnership would be offered to all current staff and faculty.

If there is anything else I can do for you, please let me know. If you would like to move forward with establishing this relationship, I will be more than happy to help set an enrollment period that will work best for you all!

Have a great day,

Jennifer Wilson

All Saints Day Tolling of the College Bell

Details: The Wofford Community is invited to gather on the College Seal in front of Old Main for our annual All Saints Remembrance on Thursday, Nov. 1 at 11 a.m. It is a tradition of the college to toll the bell when new students arrive, when they graduate, and at the end of their life. Faculty, staff and friends of the college are included in the latter tolling which is held on All Saints Day. Chaplain Robinson will be joined by members of Campus Union, Panhellenic Council, Inter-fraternity Council, independent students, faculty and staff as we read the names and toll the bell. The gathering is a brief, but meaningful tradition uniting the Wofford community through the years.
