Christmas in November

False alarm clears Admin for fifth time

By Bruce Sutherland
Staff Writer

Public Safety and campus fire officers responded to yet another false alarm at the Administration Building late Monday morning.

A smoke detector went off shortly after 11 a.m., sending all office personnel out of the building and notifying firefighters of the possible threat.

One Public Safety officer leaving the scene said, "It's just another false alarm. But we've got to treat each one like a real fire."

This is the fifth false alarm from the Administration Building this quarter.

The previous four alarms were equipment malfunctions, according to Bob Schremp, audiovisual equipment technician.

This alarm was in no way related to the four before it, Schremp said.

"The smoke detector may have had dust or something in it, which could have triggered it," he said.

Three local robberies have police stumped

By Bruce Sutherland
Staff Writer

A trio of convenience store robberies has left San Luis Obispo Police with little more than a description of the robber and three unsolved cases.

Since the first of the month, McMillan & Wife Market, Ellsworth's Market of San Luis Obispo, and J.J. Newberry's of Los Osos have been held up by suspects of similar description.

"We believe it is the same man," said Crime Prevention Coordinator Steve Seybold, "because the descriptions in all the cases are so similar."

The latest robbery, last Friday night at McMillan & Wife Market, is typical of the suspect's modus operandi.

Police report a white male between 25 and 30 years of age entered the store around 10:30 p.m. wearing a white mask over his face.

The suspect pulled a handgun on the store clerk and demanded money. Police say the robber then told the clerk to lie face down on the floor while he made his escape.

The suspect got away with an "indeterminant amount of money," said store owner Bob Clark.

A description provided by a neighboring restaurant said the suspect has a mustache. He was sighted just outside the market putting a cloth over his face, Clark said.

Police describe the man as being 5 feet 9 inches tall, 150 pounds with light brown hair. See CRIME page 7

Smokeout urges: 'Take a breather'

By Karin Holtz
Staff Writer

For those wanting to quit a nicotine habit, Thursday is a good time to start.

"Take a Breather" is the theme of the 12th annual Great American Smokeout sponsored by the American Cancer Society. The nation's smokers are encouraged to fight their cravings for tobacco for 24 hours.

Smokeout volunteers are taking a light-hearted approach to their efforts to get people to give up tobacco use, said Jeanette Leslie, Smokeout chairperson in San Luis Obispo County. They are taking the focus away from the harmful effects and directing it toward providing a supportive and positive atmosphere for smokers trying to stop or cut down for the day.

Volunteers will be handing out survival kits and information on how to quit at Farmers' Market and at local hospitals. The survival kits include balloons, headless matches and buttons that say "Non-smoker in progress — Please be patient." Posters and T-shirts will also be available.

Cal Poly is also getting involved in the spirit of the day. A table will be set up in the UU from 11 a.m. to noon to distribute materials and take blood pressure, said Carolyn Hurwitz, a Health Center education assistant.

"The purpose is to provide a lot of education and a whole lot of support," Hurwitz said.

The campaign is trying to reach two groups of people, Hurwitz said. The first group involves people who are smoking and want to quit. The other group involves people who know a smoker and want to help that person get through the day without smoking.

Non-smokers benefit from Poly policy

By Karin Holtz
Staff Writer

Cal Poly officially became a non-smoking campus in April 1987.

This policy, approved by Cal Poly President Warren Baker, outlawed smoking anywhere indoors on campus with a few exceptions, said personnel assistant Sue Georgi.

She said the policy allows smoking in a private area, such as a faculty office or a state automobile, if the person gets permission from his supervisor and the smoke doesn't bother anyone. If everyone in a private work area agrees to smoking in their area, it is allowed. But if one person doesn't want there to be smoking, "the rights of the non-smoker shall prevail."

Missing landlady may have fled to Nevada

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Federal agents joined the hunt Tuesday for the fugitive landlady of a downtown rooming house where seven bodies were found, and local investigators believe the woman may have fled to Nevada.

Detectives and shovel-wielding workers were nearly finished excavating the grounds where the bodies — all apparently elderly and all unidentified — have been unearthed since last Friday. Police Sgt. Bob Burns said the victims were apparently killed for their Social Security checks, and all had died since the beginning of the year.

The search for missing landlady Dorothea Montalvo Puente focused on Las Vegas, Burns said.

"We're still looking for the suspect. She has not been located. She may have gone to see a relative in Las Vegas. We are investigating that. The Las Vegas police have not completed their investigation."

Sacramento television station KCRA reported that Michael Montalvo, Puente's nephew, told See BODIES, page 7

Watts-raised poet to share struggles, works

By Marcus Von Engel
Contributing Reporter

An award-winning black poet and author will give a dramatic reading of some of her works Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Sandwich Plant.

Wanda Coleman has been an eyewitness to the struggles of blacks during the past 15 years. Her writings reflect her experiences growing up in the Watts district of Los Angeles.

More than 300 of her poems have been published in literary magazines and anthologies. Coleman has also written articles, essays and reviews for the Los Angeles Times, Los Angeles

Herald Examiner, Los Angeles Weekly and California Magazine.

Her latest of five books, A War of Eyes and Other Stories, was praised by a Los Angeles Times reviewer who described the "herculean effort simply To Be; to avoid the annihilation by a larger society that regards them (blacks) as so much surplus humanity."

Her work carries such titles as "Cafe Society," "Nigger Rhythm Rhymes" and "The Friday Night Shift at Taco House Blues (Wah-Wah)."

Coleman writes about workers in sweat shops, Vietnam war veterans, welfare mothers and teen-agers on the street.

"I do think I'm saying things that other people aren't talking about," Coleman said.

"I'm not interested in arousing nice, warm feelings," she said. "I'm not easy. If someone feels discomfort with my work, that's perfectly fine. That's even better."

Coleman attended Cal State Los Angeles on a partial scholarship, working to help pay her expenses, but dropped out when she became pregnant. By the time she returned to school, she had three children.

"Being the female head of a household with latchkey kids was not fashionable yet," she said.

She then worked a series of menial jobs until the mid-1970s, when she became a script writer for the daytime television series, "Days of Our Lives." She won an Emmy award for outstanding writing in a drama series for the 1975-76 season.

Coleman presently works full-time as a medical secretary and co-hosts a poetry interview program, "The Poetry Connexion" on Southern California radio station KPFK.

Coleman's performance is sponsored by Cal Poly's WriterSpeak program and the ASI Fine Arts Coffee House series.

The waiting game is over

Reporter's Notebook

By J.W. McPhail

"There was one man there, a waiter, his name was Klinger, who was a flat-footed man who always got the order wrong. No apologies, no smiling. Klinger was the kind of waiter who slams down an order of eggs in front of a customer. The customer complains, 'Don't you ever have a kind word for anyone?' The waiter says: 'You want a kind word? Don't eat the eggs.'"

— From "Cafe Crown," a New York revival of a 1942 play about Jewish waiters.

While I'm not Jewish and the restaurant I work at doesn't serve eggs, I know what Klinger was feeling. In fact, with a few changes, the words above could have been written about me. I am a waiter in a Morro Bay seafood restaurant and have been for too long.

There's a reason besides money that acting students wait on tables while they wait for their big break. It's good training. Me, I'm tired of acting and I'm tired of saying "Thank you" or "Sorry" when what I really want to say is "----- you."

I want to slap the lady's face at the table of 14 who asks for 14 separate checks "... if it's not too much trouble." I want to understand the parents who let their babies scatter crackers and other edible debris in a 10-foot circle around the high-chair and, that done, hand them a chowder spoon to bang out an ear-piercing rhythm on the tray. I dream about chasing down and blowing up the car of the pleasant family of six who said that everything was "absolutely fantastic" then left a dollar tip on a $100 check.

I realize that in Morro Bay we don't attract a high-grade blend of tourists, most of them finding their way out of the heat, chill, or boredom of the San Joaquin Valley. It's not their fault.

I realize that these people's prior experience with seafood is limited to fish-sticks and sardines. It's not their fault. It's me. I'm just pissed off. I know that for most of these folks, this is their first time in a "fancy-sit-down-type-of-eatin'-place" and tipping is a city in China. (Somebody else's joke).

To be fair I have to say that I wait on other types of customers too. Some know that filet mignon is beef and not fish. Some people are fun to work with. It's still acting, but it's not as hard. These are not the people responsible for my ulcer or my high blood pressure. This story is not about them. This story is about the nature of the beast called waiting.

Don't tell me that waiting isn't acting. Who in their right mind really feels like smiling through a six-hour shift and asking each table about their health? And when confronted by a furious, red-faced drunk, who says his extra-well-done steak is burnt, is "sorry" the first word that comes to one's lips?

I have a good day now and then when I genuinely feel like smiling and can handle the red-faced drunk. And I suppose there are those from the Mother Theresa school of waiting who were born to suffer anyhow and have found their calling. But it's not natural.

I possess a wide array of emotions that I am no longer able to hide behind a stiff smile. Yes I'm cynical. Do you think people care that besides working 30 hours a week, I'm taking 18 units including senior project and have an emotionally-needy girlfriend?

If I don't feel like smiling, dammit, I won't. And for all of you who are about to write letters to the paper saying "Jeff if you don't like your job then quiit!" save it. I have one quarter left and then I'm out of there. In the meantime, if you're ever at my restaurant, ask for my section. I dare you.

Letters to the Editor

Men's studies lacking at Poly

Editor — According to your article of Nov. 10, Cal Poly is considering adding a women's studies minor to its curriculum. I am distressed that Cal Poly may join the large number of universities with a women's studies program and no equivalent men's studies program. Already, Cal Poly has a number of women's classes, and only one, infrequently offered, "Psychology of Men" class.

Columnist Asa Baber did some research on women's studies in American universities. The findings were that "Men's studies simply do not exist in any meaningful fashion in the academic environment of this country... Sexism takes many forms, and today's academic feminism is one of the most virulent. Equal and independent men's studies programs are verboten ...

"There is no freedom of inquiry concerning men's issues today in our colleges and universities. This nation's curriculum is skewed in favor of women's issues alone — and as long as it has that bias, it will continue to remain captive."

There are legitimate men's issues that need to be addressed in American universities. I would hope that Cal Poly could take the lead and establish equal programs for men's and women's studies.

Diversity theme one to think on Editor — I applaud A.J. Schuermann for his column "Unity through diversity?" He does what we hope all students will do with the new Poly Royal theme — raise it as a question.

When this theme was chosen, it was not intended to be a definitive statement on the current state of the university. It was intended to start people thinking.

Some, like Mr. Schuermann, may think that diversity is grossly lacking. Perhaps diversity does surround us. After all, it takes keen sight to recognize it. So keep looking.

However, there is definitely room for improvement. That requires change, and Team Poly Royal (the Poly Royal Board) wants to be a part of that change.

Education affects the mind but also the character. You should learn as much from clubs and special events as you do from books and homework. You should learn as much from the person next to you in class as the person standing in front of the classroom. Therefore, shouldn't you want to sit next to the person from whom you can learn the most (whose experiences, interests, and background differ from yours)?

Poly Royal encourages everyone to look at the Cal Poly education. Most importantly, it challenges Cal Poly students to look at their own education. If you feel that something is lacking in your education, perhaps diversity, then do something.

Finally, let's not ignore the rest of the theme. It is through diversity or openness to varied subjects, cultures, experiences and points of view that we achieve completeness and unity. I hope we will see that "Unity through Diversity" itself captures the essential paradox of university life.

Poly not a wimp until this year

Editor — Our football coach was quoted recently in the Telegram-Tribune as saying "Cal Poly is no longer a wimp. We may lose, but we'll get after some people."

That's ridiculous. Cal Poly never was a wimp. At least not until now. We have had some outstanding players and coaches in the past. For the most part, they played entertaining, hard-hitting football against tough competition. And they played to win, which they did. They also did it in a period of decreased funding and rising costs. The school and community were proud of them.

And this year? Against Sacramento State, Setencich came out for the second half of the game with his tail between his legs. With only a narrow lead over one of the nation's most prolific offensive teams, he went into a stall. The Poly offense generated only 80 yards and a field goal after the intermission and had no third down conversions.

"I WANT A KINDER, GENTLER NATION."

"IF YOU CAN'T STAND THE HEAT, GET OUT OF THE KITCHEN!"

The Hornets fought hard all the way, overtaking the Mustangs to win in the last minute. It was ugly. To me, if you lose, you should go down with your guns blazing, not retreating in cowardice.

After that game, we still had some hopes of getting into the playoffs, but we needed to win all of our remaining games. But in the game against UC Davis, with the Mustang offense at the Davis five-yard line with eight seconds to play, Setencich opted for a game-tying field goal instead of going for the win and the playoffs.

Is it any wonder that attendance for the last three home games has been pathetic? Who wants to see that kind of garbage? I don't think that this is what most of us had in mind when we voted to increase our student fees for the benefit of the football program.

Farmers pay for people's wildlife

Editor — To the naive people writing about the deer: Mr. Carl's idea of relocating deer has already been tried, unsuccessfully. The deer always come back.

As for Mr. Carl's remorse for the dead deer, it was stronger than mine would have been. When I go hunting all I see is deer meat just as when I see a cow all I see is steak. This idea of marking the roads is also absurd because most deer stand alongside the road until they see a car get close, then when the car spooks them they dart across the road. This tactic is not very successful on the open road.

I am speaking from experience because I hit a deer once and I had one hit me. The one that hit me jumped off an embankment onto the top of my car causing the top to cave in and all of the windows to shatter (poor deer).

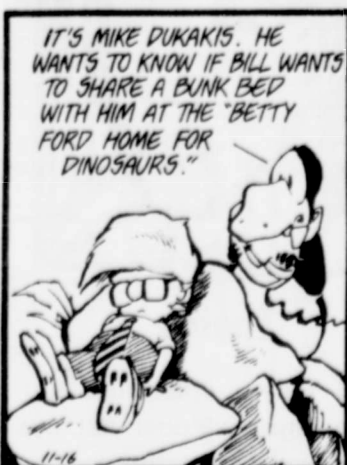

Every year California farmers lose about $350 million through destruction by wildlife. Yet wild animals are "owned" by the people, so farmers can't fight back.

Why is it when the people's wildlife kills more than $55 million of livestock a year the farmer, not the people, must pay the price?

The Smokeout may not help everyone who participates to quit for good, but it can be a good start for many.

Twenty percent of people who try to quit for the first time are successful, according to American Cancer Society statistics.

"And the more times you try to quit the better chance you have of success," Hurwitz said.

Last year 19.6 million smokers participated in the Smokeout, approximately two-fifths of all smokers, Leslie said. In the United States, about one-third of the population still smokes.

Leslie said that in the long-term the Smokeout can help prevent deaths.

Although smoking is on the decline, it is still a very serious problem, she said. "About 320,000 people die per year in America from tobacco-related diseases."

The Smokeout is appropriately timely in that it comes on the heels of the passage of Proposition 99, the cigarette tax bill.

Leslie said that 45 percent of the proceeds from the increased cigarette tax will go toward the treatment of illness caused by tobacco use, 20 percent will go directly toward education and prevention of tobacco abuse and 5 percent will go to research.

Postseason play a Mustang goal

Young Cal Poly women's team to battle with no seniors, 9 freshmen

By B. Raines
Special to the Daily

The Cal Poly women's basketball team, after a disappointing 1987 season, is geared up and ready to compete for the 1988 season.

With only four players returning from last year's team, the Lady Mustangs have a brand new look — several new faces, some new recruits and even a few walk-ons.

Along with that new look comes a new weapon — the three-point shot.

"We've strengthened as a team in our shooting ability," said Head Coach Jill Orrock. "We have several ladies who can make the three-point shot."

Leading the three-point barrage will be junior guard Jody Hasselfield who averaged 15 points, three rebounds and 3.4 assists per game last year.

"Jody is probably the second best guard in the league," Orrock said. "We will look to her for leadership and scoring."

Because of the acquisition of junior college transfers, Deborah Vettel and Gina Cardinet, Hasselfield won't have to provide all the scoring punch. Orrock said both players have the ability to go to the basket and score.

"With that depth Hasselfield may be free to play even better," she said.

Vettel averaged 15 points and four assists, and Cardinet 18 points and seven rebounds a game last year for DeAnza Junior College.

The Lady Mustangs are a young team with no seniors and nine freshmen on the team. The youth is most evident inside where freshman will have to fill the void. Helping out inside will be Russia Madden who averaged 12.4 points and 9.7 rebounds for the Mustangs last year.

"The girls are beginning to take the game more seriously at younger ages and by the time they reach high school, they are specializing in specific areas of basketball," said Orrock when asked about some of the differences between the women's basketball today and when she played for Cal Poly from 1976 through 1978. "They have better attitudes and they realize that academics are important because after college they have no opportunities to play basketball on a professional level.

"My ladies are involved in a weight training program because basketball is a physical game and we need to be strong," Orrock said.

When asked how much fan support affects the game, Orrock said, "We need good, loyal fans all of the time — win or lose. If a team feels it's cared about, it will usually perform well."

The Lady Mustangs are looking to make the post season playoffs, something they didn't do last year. That lack of success may have a lot to do with the small turn-outs for the Lady Mustangs games, Orrock said.

"San Luis Obispo is a fair weather community, if you win you get support, if not you don't," she said.

The favorite to win the conference this year is Cal Poly Pomona.

"Without a doubt Pomona is the favorite," Orrock said. Cal State Northridge and Cal State Los Angeles will be tough, she said.

"Our goal is to finish second this year and I think it is a very realistic goal," Orrock said. "Even though we lost our final six games last year, we were very competitive. With the added depth and shooting ability, we will be even more competitive this year."

Cal Poly begins the season Friday at Mott Gym.

Top Mustang returners

Jody Hasselfield, 5-foot-5-inch junior guard, averaged 14.9 points per game and 3.4 assists in running the Mustang offense.

Russia Madden, 6-foot junior forward will anchor an inexperienced front court. Madden averaged 12.4 points per game and 9.7 rebounds.

Liz Oman, 5-foot-7-inch junior guard will work the backcourt with Hasselfield. Oman averaged 7.1 points per game and 3.6 rebounds.

The dawning of choice window art

Dawn Sherry has made an art of doing windows. The Cal Poly architecture student designs abstract window displays for Choice clothing store on Garden Street. Every two weeks she crawls into the window after hours and creates "something out of context, out of the ordinary."

Her latest window features a woman with a lobster on her head and a man's head peering out of a lobster trap. Red clothing draped on various mannequin body parts echoes the lobster theme.

"I think San Luis Obispo stores need to have more fun," Sherry said Monday, sipping a frothy drink in a coffee house across the street from her artwork. "They're too stuffy."

She strives, however, to match the tone of the display to the merchandise and the owner's outlook.

"The window should reflect the personality of the store," she said. "It should make you look at the window when you go by. Then, hopefully, you'll notice the clothes."

Sherry's displays do more than sell clothes. Each one tells a story.

"A lot of the windows have some kind of an undertone," she said. "At least they make you think about what you're looking at."

A recent Choice window displayed a dangling light bulb just out of a mannequin's reach, symbolizing, Sherry said, the biblical story of God withholding knowledge from Man.

And she shied away from the traditional Halloween display. Her window featured a witch on a vacuum: "The witch of the 80s," she said.

Many windows involve a man and a woman, because Choice owner Joan Heitz wants customers to know the store caters to both sexes. But Sherry said when she uses a man and a woman, it is as if they have personalities of their own.

"There's always a conflict," she said. "When I put them together, they always seem to oppose each other." That is why the man's head ended up in a lobster trap.

Window displays provide Sherry with a creative outlet and a chance to apply architecture principles at the same time.

"It's small-scale architecture," she said. "They're compositional problems."

She tackles the practical problems of structure, balance and form while carrying out her theme.

Once, she coiled an unwieldy extension cord into the shape of a mannequin's head, she said. A creative answer to a mechanical problem.

She began designing windows in September when she bought several mannequins, some dating as far back as the 1950s, from a San Luis Obispo store owner.

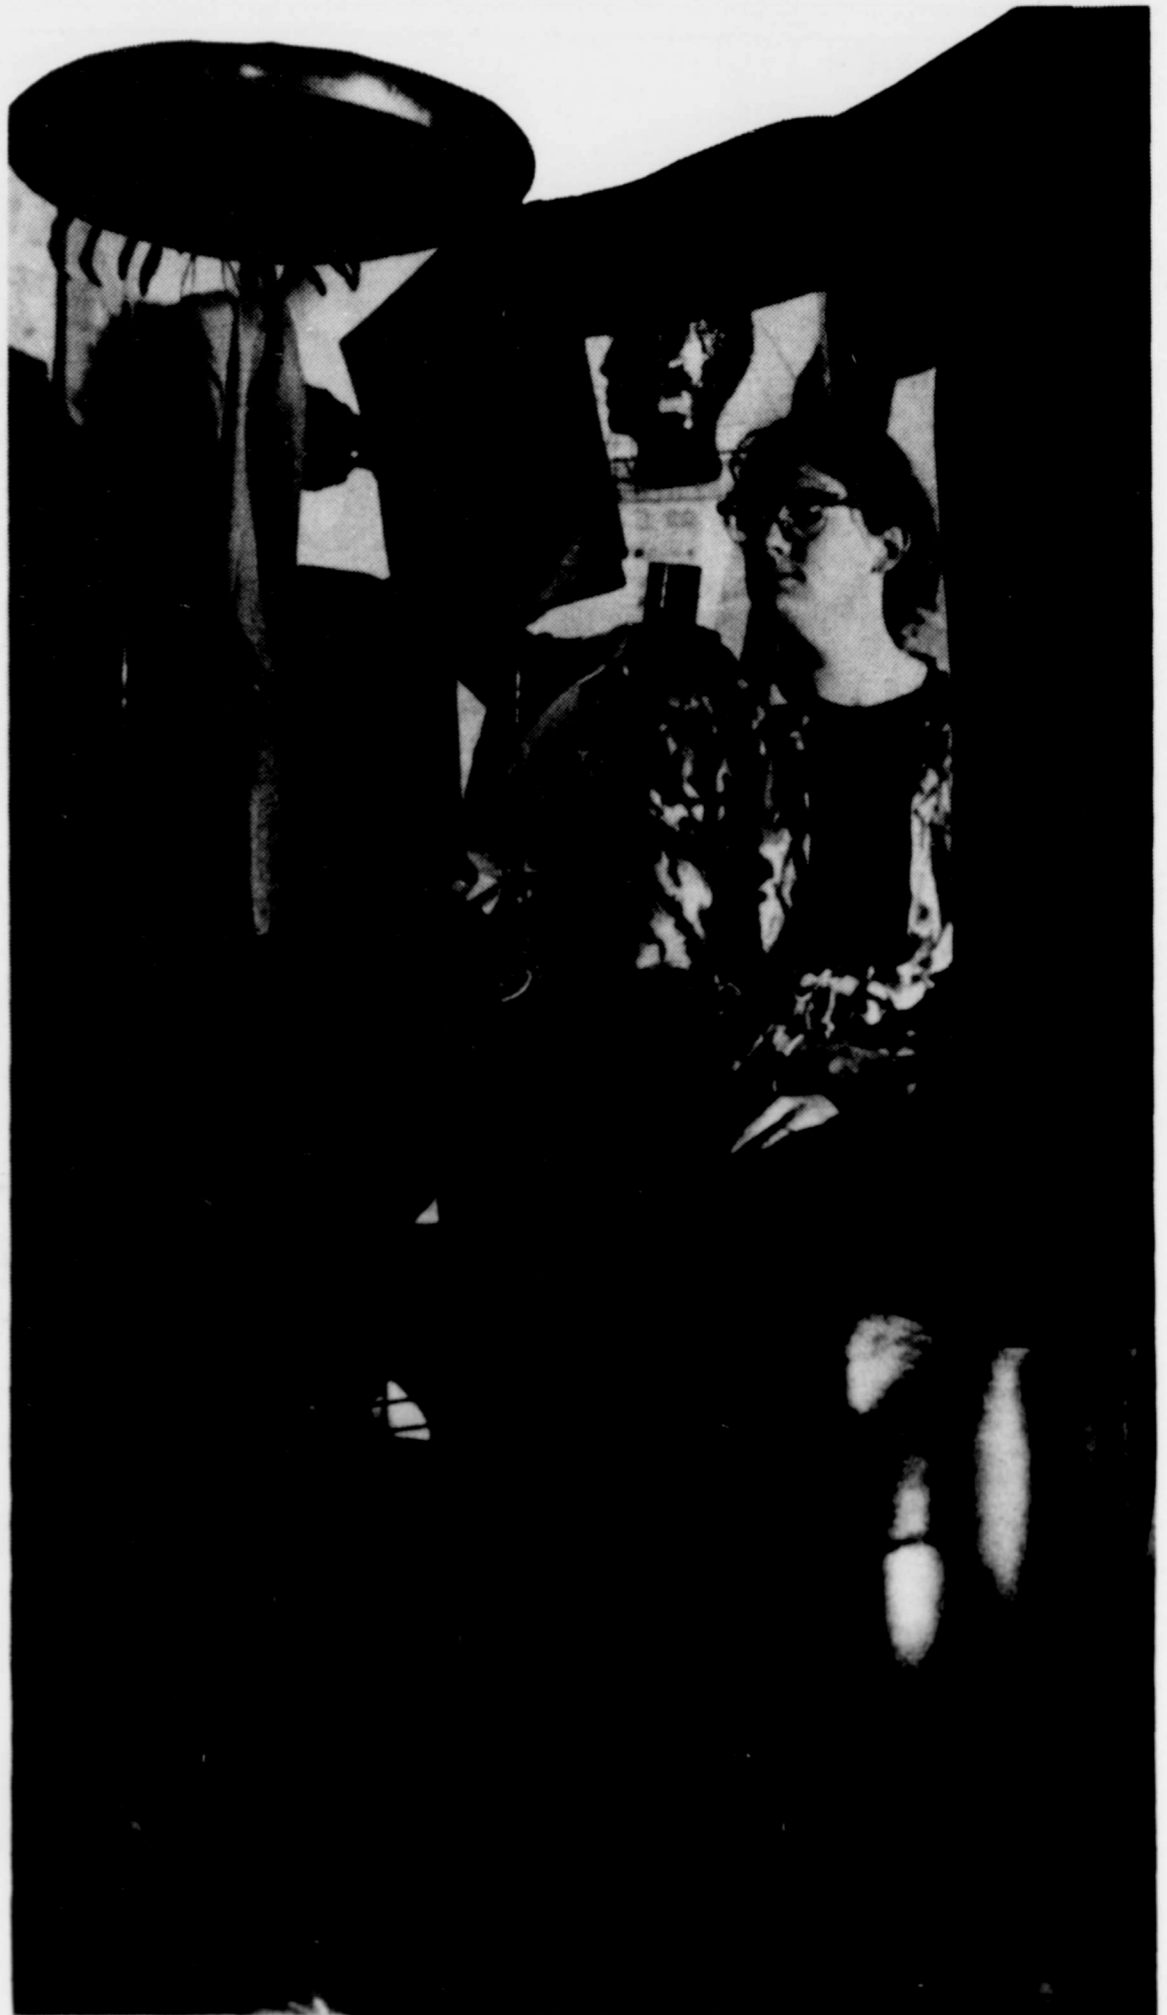

Heitz saw her hauling the mannequins down the street and asked to use them in her window. Sherry has designed five windows for Heitz since then.

She hopes to continue designing windows in her spare time after graduation next quarter.

Until then, Choice is a window on a revolving art show, a peek into Sherry's interpretation of form, function and harmony. After all, she said, "art and architecture go hand in hand."

Part of the A-V department's job is to maintain communication devices on campus. This includes the fire alarms.

Each time the alarms have gone off before, about 250 people have been forced to leave their desks and evacuate the building. This has usually been a 15 to 25 minute diversion.

Schrempp said he hopes the malfunctions from the first four alarms are over and that this time it was just a fluke.

Las Vegas police that he picked up Puente at the airport Monday morning.

Both Burns and Las Vegas police declined comment on that report, but Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Detective Augie Knudson said his department had issued an all-points bulletin for Puente. He said his department had no idea where she might be.

Burns said the FBI joined the search for Puente after the arrest warrant was issued. Terry Knowles, special agent in charge of the FBI office, was not immediately available for comment.

"Our first priority is to get her into custody," Burns said, adding that there is evidence, which he refused to discuss, "that leads us to believe she is responsible for their deaths."

Burns said that detectives were "down to their last 60 square feet to be uncovered at this location," a neatly-maintained, baby-blue Victorian with white trim on a tree-lined downtown street eight blocks from the state Capitol building.

Detectives, armed with a warrant, removed furniture from inside the house, stacking a mattress, coffee cans, cardboard boxes, a desk and chairs against the wall. "We have not found any evidence that indicates there are any bodies inside," Burns said.

Burns said a decision on whether to dig in two other locations — one a nearby care home formerly operated by the fugitive landlady in the 1970s and an adjacent property where she was seen digging — had not yet been made.

Local and federal authorities were searching for Puente, 59, who disappeared last week after being interviewed for several hours by police detectives following discovery of the first body, and released for lack of evidence.

Authorities were led to the house by neighbors and a social worker, who said that some tenants of the home had been missing for weeks.

Puente was convicted in 1982 and served two and a half years in prison for drugging and robbing people she met in bars.

According to sworn statements police filed to obtain the warrant, Puente twice denied killing her missing tenants. "Sir, I have never killed anybody," she said.

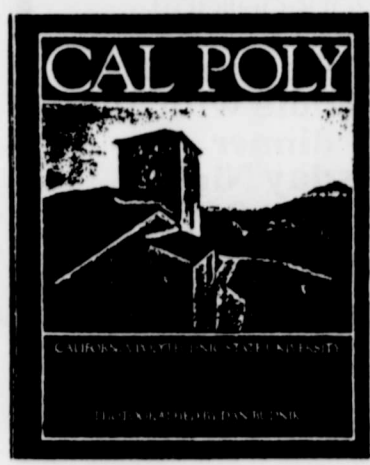

Police previously had estimated that "seven or eight" victims may be buried at the home, but they have received numerous inquiries from people who say they also have relatives who were once tenants at the rooming house and have since disappeared.

One former tenant told the San Francisco Examiner that Puente mixed him a drugged drink in 1986, then stole $200 in cash and some blank checks from his

Registration deadline for ELM test is Friday

The deadline to register for the Dec. 3 Entry Level Math test is this Friday.

Registration packets can be obtained at the math department office or the Test Office, in the Counseling Service Building, up until 5 p.m. Friday.

The ELM fee is $9 and is paid at the time of the test. Students may not take any math courses before satisfying the ELM requirement. Those who are unsure whether or not they have completed the requirement should register by Friday to receive the information packet where exemptions and requirements are explained. No fee is required for this much of the process.

Merchants adopt plan for free parking Downtown shoppers can now park free in the Palm Street parking structure, courtesy of local merchants.

Merchants who participate in the new parking-validation program will be giving away special stamps to be attached to parking stubs from the Palm Street parking structure.

Each stamp is worth one hour of free parking in the structure when affixed to a current parking stub.

Orange and blue parking-stamp decals and signs at downtown stores will identify the participating merchants.

Merchants who wish to purchase stamps at discount prices may get order forms from the BIA, Chamber of Commerce and the City Public Works department.

Nominate your most outstanding and inspiring professor before Dec. 2, 1988.

Any full-time student, faculty or staff member may submit one or more nominations, which includes the professor's name, department and a supporting statement* containing evidence of merit, based upon criteria below for this year's

Distinguished Teacher Award

Criteria for the award:

- techniques that show excellence in teaching
- a high degree of interaction with students, faculty and staff
- high personal and professional standards
- well-organized activities, lectures or labs
- teaching procedures that contribute to student interest, enthusiasm and achievement
- concern for students as individuals
- fair yet rigorous methods for evaluating students' progress
- evidence of significant professional development as it relates to teaching excellence

Only full-time, tenured faculty members teaching during this academic year who have not previously won the award are eligible. Nomination forms may be submitted at the University Union Information Desk or the Information Desk at the Kennedy Library.

* The supporting statement is essential for the nomination to be considered seriously. Please state clearly why you believe this professor deserves such an award.
