December to feature two commencements

Proposal includes faculty speakers

By Sharon Sherman
Staff Writer

The traditional commencement ceremony at Cal Poly is undergoing change.

Proposed alterations in the existing process include two graduation ceremonies each December and June, faculty and staff featured as keynote speakers, a shorter ceremony and more tickets for each graduate.

Cal Poly President Warren J. Baker has already accepted a recommendation from the Commencement Committee to have two graduation ceremonies each fall and spring, rather than one. The first time the new approach is scheduled to be instituted is December 1989.

Robert Bostrom, chair of the Commencement Committee, said, "When I was named chairman of the committee, I had some goals of looking hard at what we were doing and seeing what the problems were and how we might resolve them."

Bostrom said one of the major problems he perceived was that graduates received only five tickets each for the ceremony.

"Five tickets are really pretty restrictive."

"We have only so big a facility to hold commencement in, and in planning for future crowds and larger numbers of participants, the only way I could see for us to be able to accommodate students' needs would be to split the ceremony and perhaps be able to accommodate 10 tickets per graduate."

In order to have equal numbers of degree candidates at each ceremony, the schools of Agriculture, Engineering and Science and Mathematics will be grouped together for one of the ceremonies, while the schools of Architecture and Environmental Design, Business, Liberal Arts, and Professional Studies and Education will be combined.

Bostrom said the proposal calls for the first ceremony to run from 9 to 10:30 a.m. and the second from 10:30 to 12:00 p.m. See GRADUATION, page 8

Plans to provide future graduates with 10 tickets each for commencement ceremonies may be abandoned even before being adopted.

Cal Poly President Warren J. Baker has accepted a recommendation from the Commencement Committee to have two graduation ceremonies each December and June, beginning December 1989.

The new approach will mean half as many graduates at each ceremony, thus implying a potential for giving twice as many tickets to each graduate.

Mustang Stadium, the site of the June commencement ceremonies, had its seating capacity reduced by about 1,450 when the stadium was demolished. See TICKETS, page 7

Poly eyes summer option for fall applicant surplus

By Kathryn Brunello
Staff Writer

As enrollment growth continues to be an issue at Cal Poly, the administration has made a proposal to the Chancellor's Office to divert students who are not accepted for fall quarter to apply for summer quarter.

"It's basically a resources issue," said Frank Lebens, associate vice president for academic resources. He said there are a number of factors to consider the increase of summer quarter enrollment, such as funds, facilities and sensitivity to demographic changes in relation to the ethnic mix.

Cal Poly is among only four CSU campuses that have summer quarter funded by the state, said Cal Poly President Warren J. Baker. Pomona, Hayward and Los Angeles are the other three.

He said that Cal Poly is funded at a certain faculty level, and to increase the enrollment in summer would cost more than the state presently allocates to Cal Poly.

The basic assumption with this plan is that the state will fund the summer quarter. See SUMMER, back page

Poly linebacker drafted by Atlanta Falcons

By Terry Lightfoot
Sports Editor

After watching the National Football League draft progress through several rounds Sunday at his home in Whittier, Chris Dunn decided he needed a change of pace.

Monday morning, still hopeful about his chances of being drafted, Dunn opted to watch his favorite movie, Apocalypse Now, to pass the time. According to Webster's Dictionary, apocalypse symbolizes the triumph of good over evil.

At 10:30 a.m. Dunn received the triumphant call he had been waiting for. Christen Thomas Dunn, the Cal Poly football team's 1988 most valuable player, and unanimous Western Football Conference All-Conference linebacker, was drafted by the Atlanta Falcons in the ninth round, the 229th player picked.

Being drafted was a realization of a childhood dream for Dunn.

A little TLC planned for strays

By Marni Katz
Staff Writer

Many of the stray cats on campus will soon get help if a newly-formed animal welfare group on campus reaches its first goal.

The Student Animal League has been holding meetings since February and was officially approved as a club by ASI last week, said English major and SAL founder Tamara Kustka.

Kustka said the "group was started for the sake of taking care of any animal that needed to be taken care of."

"Our main concern right now is taking care of stray cats on campus," Kustka said. "We are going to do our best to get them spayed, neutered and vaccinated."

The club has been working with Public Safety and representatives from Action For Animal Rights (AFAR), a countywide organization based in Atascadero, to eliminate Cal Poly's stray cat problem. AFAR serves the area through such projects as spaying or neutering stray animals and creating adoption programs for wild horses.

Dwight Brouillard, a volunteer for AFAR, will work with the Student Animal League, providing them "educational and moral support."

"The problem with the cats has really come to a forefront and is just about to be addressed," he said.

"If a student adopts a Cal Poly feral (wild) cat, Cal Poly will cover the costs of shots and spaying or neutering."

— Don Vanacker,
Public Safety officer

Public Safety officer Don Vanacker, the assistant director of health and safety, estimates that there are more than 200 stray cats on campus. He said he would like to see a program created at Cal Poly that will help ease the health hazards created by the increasing numbers of feral cats being found on campus.

Feral cats are cats that have never been domesticated, but are being fed at certain feeding stations by what he called "well-meaning people on campus."

"Well-meaning people who feel responsible for the cats that are left behind want to feed the animals," he said. "But what they end up doing is increasing the numbers of animals so they can reproduce and create a health hazard on campus."

Vanacker said some of the health hazards associated with these feral cats include diseases that are transmitted by fleas, sick or injured animals that crawl under buildings and often die, and injuries to staff members who are bitten or scratched while doing maintenance under buildings.

San Luis Obispo County is a designated rabies area, and, he said, there is a possibility that rabies could become a problem associated with the stray animals.

The Department of Public Safety traps the animals and sends them to Animal Regulation, where they are held for adoption for 72 hours before being put to sleep.

Vanacker would like to work with the Student Animal League and Action For Animal Rights to create awareness among the students and faculty about adoption programs for the cats.

"If a student adopts a Cal Poly feral cat," Vanacker said, "Cal Poly will cover the costs of shots and spaying or neutering."

Kustka, who is the Student Animal League's secretary-treasurer, said the group has already helped relocate two feral cats during spring break.

In addition to taking care of the stray cat problem, Kustka said the group plans to form programs to help educate people on the proper way to take care of their pets.

"There's a lot of little things that can make a difference in taking care of an animal," Kustka said, "but there's nothing hard about treating an animal right."

Kustka said they also plan to adopt more cats. See ANIMALS, page 8

Chris consistently ran under 4.6 seconds in the 40-yard dash, and was superior in the agility drills." Dunn's fastest time at Atlanta was 4.52.

But the interest of several

NFL teams was piqued, including the Kansas City Chiefs, Pittsburgh Steelers, Green Bay Packers and, of course, the Atlanta Falcons.

Dutton said that Atlanta compared Dunn to first-round pick, Derrick Thomas from Alabama. Thomas was an Division I All-American, and a winner of the Dick Butkus Award.

Dunn will report to the Falcons' mini-camp on May 3. Dutton said that Dunn will have every opportunity to make the team. See DUNN, page 4

Make it your business

In an ASI election with few charismatic candidates and no heart-stopping issues, is it any wonder only 12.5 percent of Cal Poly's student population voted last week?

Student apathy began long before the polls opened.

One senate bill, one presidential candidate and two vice-presidential candidates left little choice for an already indifferent student body.

The only senate bill asked voters to decide whether ASI should follow a corporate structure, making our president a CEO and our senate a board of directors. Were there no other issues important enough to broach?

Rumors of elitism echoed through the halls because the majority of candidates were affiliated with fraternities. For many years our senate has been inflated with greeks. But we can't find fault with them for running. We can only fault those who complain and don't participate.

It seems we learned non-participation from our parents. Witness the recent mayoral race in Los Angeles. Less than one-fourth of the electorate voted.

It has become a national trend.
 Is this what we want to teach our children?

It is time to dust off our labored motto and "learn by doing." Only then can we infuse life back into our ASI elections and set an example for future generations.

Letters to the Editor

Slashed hours irk library user

Editor — I feel ripped off. I'm paying more than $300 a quarter to go to a university, and I can't even find a place to study after 11 p.m. When I first came to Poly nearly four years ago, the reserve room in the library was open 24 hours. If I had to pull an all-nighter or even just spend a few extra hours finishing some homework, there was a place to go after the main library closed.

Now the reserve room is only open until 11 p.m. I've tried finding open classrooms or studying at home, but either the janitors or my roommates are there to keep me from getting much done.

I realize the library is broke (a good joke in itself considering this is a state university) so here's my plan: If a $2 or $3 charge is added to each quarter's registration fee, then roughly $30,000 to $45,000 could accumulate, perhaps enough to keep the reserve room open later. Hey, with the money we save from not having to study at Farm Boy Restaurant, it practically pays for itself.

Editor — Kennedy Library appreciates the recent article by Christine J. Pohan ("Kennedy's budget cuts new book orders, 200 periodicals," April 14). The article clearly and accurately discussed major problems related to the library's acquisitions budget and the difficulty of accommodating the many periodical and book requests. The photograph accompanying the article captioned "Irony of no books to reshelve," however, may lead to a misunderstanding by some. The shelves shown in the photograph are intentionally kept vacant for the purposes of sorting and reshelving. Overall library shelving is 80-plus percent full. The library also manually keeps its student assistants quite busy with as many as 15,000 items to be reshelved on a daily basis at peak periods.

Reporter's Notebook

Reflecting on life in twindom

"A double pleasure is waiting for you, doo-doo, doo-doo."

I have heard them all, believe me.

I, like one out of every 83.4 babies born, have a twin, an identical twin at that. And to create even more confusion, we both attend Cal Poly and have the same major (different concentrations) and, it gets worse, we live together. For those of you not privileged enough to have had a roomie in the womb, I'd like to clear up some misconceptions of twindom.

First of all I have never made the mistake of thinking that I was my sister or vice versa. Secondly, my sister and I do not have sixth sense communicating abilities. We do not have conversations telepathically, nor do we share our own pig-Latin language. Thirdly, we have never switched dates (if I think he's a jerk, she will probably think he's scum, too) or classes. Finally, I have never looked at my sister instead of a mirror. I could go on but it gets boring doesn't it?

No, I am not exaggerating. I have been confronted with all these inquiries more than once. Don't get me wrong, I am not complaining. In fact I get a kick out of it most of the time.

I have had my share of rather awkward moments. For instance, in high school my sister's prom date kept asking me what kind of corsage I

by Tracy
 Fowler

wanted. And there are those confused stares I get on campus from people I have never seen before because they think I am my sister. Consequently, I innocently ignore the person, or return a dumb stare loaded with an equal amount of confusion, leaving my sister with a bit of explaining to do. I, in turn, will have friends approach me who say, "What was your problem the other day? You acted like you didn't even know me."

Of course there are benefits. In sixth grade a lot of girls tried out to be the ugly stepsisters in the winter Cinderella musical, and yours truly and you-know-who-else got the parts.

Many people have offered sage advice to prevent further mix-ups. These tips include severely different hair cuts or hair colors and wearing signs that spell our names in large block letters. It has even been suggested that I get a tattoo. (If I did ever resort to that extreme my mom would probably remove the limb where it had been placed, causing future identification to be a piece of cake.)

But seriously, people will always have problems with our identities. I am glad to say I know who I am, and she knows who she is, and we are both happy with the fact that she happened to be born four minutes after me, shocking the obstetrician who exclaimed, "Oh my God, there's another one!"

Because of the tremendous response to B. Drechsler's column ("Poly date rapes linked to frats," April 20), a special section will run tomorrow to accommodate all the letters.

Commentary

Hunter S. Thompson

Two more years

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is a "Best of Hunter S. Thompson" column and was originally published in May, 1986.

"On balance, he's still doing fine," says a White House counselor, "and his problems are all fixable because it's still early."

— Newsweek memo on George Bush, 4/31/86

JIMMY CARTER WAS on TV last week, promoting his new book on the "Larry King Show" and having a bit of sport with the working people in Washington. David Stockman had already put blood in the water, and the scent was irresistible. Jimmy was in a good mood, very wise and relaxed — but if there was trouble in the Big House, he definitely wanted a piece of it.

There was not a lot of talk about his book. He was hooked up with King on a remote-feed from somewhere in Alabama, a safe distance from Washington, and as he talked you could almost hear the mind of the long-distance sniper at work.

He felt sorry for the president, he said. Reagan was not only wrong and dumb, but now his advisers had betrayed him and the rest of the world was treating him like a stuffed owl because they knew he'd be gone in two years.

Carter leaned heavily on this last point. It was nothing personal, he said, and not even partisan politics. But somebody had to say it: The president of the United States no longer has credibility anywhere in the civilized world except Santa Barbara.

All world leaders understand this, Jimmy explained. They know Mikhail Gorbachev is going to be around for a while, and they know Reagan won't. So of course they'll do business with the Soviets. They might humor Reagan, like they did at the summit meeting in Tokyo, but they will pay attention to Gorbachev because they know in their hearts they will probably have to talk to him again.

It was ominous wisdom, but nothing special. Any Southern politician can tell you about the hazards of making deals with a lame-duck governor, and Carter understands this as well as anybody. He did not get to the White House by misunderstanding politics. He was good at it, like Nixon, and they will both be worth watching for a while.

We are in for some serious politics in the next two years. The most powerful job in the world is going up for grabs, and George Bush is the only one standing in line for it. He is the heir apparent and has no choice but to run.

This has created what they call "an interesting situation" in the political community, where the current betting on George has taken a turn for the worse.

After years of dutiful hibernation as vice president, he has suddenly come out of the closet and taken a serious flogging every time he opened his mouth. People called him a fool and a wimp, and his chances of winning were openly mocked in Washington. He was like the mechanical rabbit in a greyhound race, they said — just a creature for setting the pace. Many others would soon be in line with him, and the odds were not on his side. Only one sitting vice president since Thomas Jefferson has ever been elected president. That was Martin Van Buren in 1836, a Democrat, who won more or less by default. The once-powerful Whigs were so far gone at that point they couldn't even decide on a candidate.

GEORGE BUSH WILL NOT be that lucky. Nobody is going to default in 1988: The stakes are too high, and preachers will not make the nut. The starting line, this time, is going to look like the front row at the Honolulu Marathon. There will be many candidates, but most of them are still trying to lay low.

Not even Pat Robertson has declared, despite Carter's observation that he is "drawing huge crowds" every time he appears in Iowa. Jimmy smiled the old smile when he said this. Pat Robertson is not going to win anything in 1988, and neither is George Bush. These are fast times in politics, and front-runners are swiftly discredited. Lyndon LaRouche has come and gone in the quick space of two months, and George Bush will not last much longer.

He will be gone by June, according to oil industry analysts, when the price of gasoline is up by 15 cents a gallon over May, and people are full of hate.

That will not be a good time for any front-runner to be publicly identified as The Man Who Killed Cheap Gas in America — but Bush is going to be stuck with it.

The electorate will tolerate almost anything except a sudden unexplained jump of 15 cents a gallon at the pump, in a time of world glut on the oil market.

That will not be politically acceptable in a year when Americans are suddenly afraid to travel anywhere in the world except in their own country. Between the menace of terrorism and the promise of cheap gas on the highways, a lot of people figured it was better to drive to Vancouver, or even St. Louis, instead of flying off to someplace like Cairo or Greece and risk getting blown sideways out of a TWA jet at 30,000 feet above the Sea of Sardinia.

It was humiliating, but it was not a bad deal at the price. There were rumors that it might fall below 50 cents a gallon by mid-summer, if the Arabs kept flooding the market.

It was at that point that George Bush bit the bullet, on behalf of his neighbors in Houston. It was not what he wanted, but it was a thing that had to be done, for political reasons ... he took a night flight to Jidda and leaned publicly on King Fahd of Saudi Arabia to go along with an emergency price-fixing scam that would stop the slide and "stabilize the price of oil."

It had fallen to $9.70 a barrel on April 1, and at that point the joke was over. Texas was going bankrupt, and his people were on the line. They had not sent him to Washington all this time for nothing. ...

Socialized medicine: don't miss the point

By Richard M. Miller

I suppose you might be expecting some economic justification and intellectual analysis of the needs for socialized medicine in this country. Maybe you're hoping that I will defend it against the accusations of inefficiency, costliness and inhumanity that have been brought against it ... so you can write tidy little letters to the editor pointing out flaws in my argument. Well, I'm afraid you're going to be disappointed, because that's not the point at all. The nuts and bolts of health care systems are important, of course, but their importance is secondary. The real issue here is the intrinsic value of human life ... every human life.

If you don't believe in this, stop reading. If, on the other hand, you do feel this way, perhaps you'll agree with me that using the economics of a free market is a ridiculously inappropriate way to deal with health care. The "freedom" of this market means for some only the freedom to starve or die on the street. This simplistic form of economics sees the world in terms of costs and benefits, of buying low and selling high. It is a completely materialist system, based on a premise which ignores real human needs such as life and health. They say you get what you pay for, but if you can't pay (or the nearest emergency room doesn't accept your insurance plan) you're left to twist in the wind. Without money to purchase, in economic terms, no "demand" exists. Under this faceless rationale absence of needs. It is this which leaves the poverty stricken and unemployed dying at home or on the street while hospital beds lie empty.

I believe that health is a fundamental right that is and should be guaranteed for every human, not just the rich and pretty. Our constitution guarantees the rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, but right now for many people this is a painful illusion.

Efficiency and profitability may be important, but the value of human life is so much greater. The system we have, a bastard hybrid of free market economy and pseudo-socialist health subsidies, is just not working. There are innumerable examples of people who have plunged through the cracks in the system or are simply ignored. How many suffer while others get tummy-tucks? People are turned away from emergency rooms, even out of ambulances because of inability to pay. This is a situation growing worse, exacerbated by eight years of anti-poor domestic policies emanating from a rabidly conservative White House.

This cancerous injustice does not belong in what we like to think of as a country of freedom and equality. How dare you whine about the cost while people die. If each of us could stand on the outside looking in perhaps our economic perspective would be exchanged for one more humane. The United States is still the proud possessor of the most powerful economy on earth. It's bad enough that people must suffer, but even more so when the means to alleviate it openly exist. Guaranteed access to a healthy life ... isn't that what is implied in our country's Declaration of Independence? Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness: these words of idealism and optimism are cheap under our currently inequitable system.

The time is gone (if indeed it ever existed) when one could depend on the generosity of family and friends to help us through the difficult times. The structure of twentieth century capitalistic life with its loose personal/familial connections and high mobility has worked to give greater and greater personal independence but at the price of vanished traditional support networks. The vagaries and uncertainties of modern life have you at their mercy. While success or failure in the workplace or in personal fulfillment cannot be guaranteed, it is time, in fact long overdue, that support be given by our whole society to its less fortunate members. There is really no great distance that separates "us" from "them" ... we are really all "us." This is no time to lay blame — compassion is the essence of civilization. If our government, allegedly composed of all of us, does not provide protection from injustice equally for all of us, then it is a failure.

In the face of even one human dying because their Medicare ran out, because insurance wouldn't pay or wasn't affordable, because the emergency room was understaffed, guaranteed access to medical care must be our highest priority. That's right, even higher than that shiny new missile system.

All that I ask for is social justice ... people must get the care that they need. This objective must be idealized. Perhaps the perfect system cannot be achieved, but without aiming at the stars we cannot do other than to land in the gutter. There will be problems initially with implementing a system of social justice in medical care, but with patience and cooperation, these flaws can be removed. On the other hand, no one can be brought back from the grave. This is a question for mind and conscience — not for the pocket-book.

Soviet Georgian says uprising is 'nothing new'

By Kimberly Patraw
Staff Writer

The United Soviet Socialist Republics has been shaken recently by overt nationalism in the non-Russian republics. The Baltic States — Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia — and their liberation movements promoted Soviet military response.

The Ukraine region is pushing for the right to revive its language and culture, including lifting a ban on the Ukrainian Catholic Church. Armenians and Muslims continue to disagree over the fate of Nagorno-Karabakh, a mainly Armenian area inside Muslim Azerbaijan.

For two Cal Poly students, the most recent uprising in the Georgian Soviet Socialist Republic strikes close to home.

Alyse and Yan Rozenon emigrated to the United States from the Georgian Republic in 1979. Most of their relatives still reside in the republic, which lies east of the Black Sea.

Georgian S.S.R. made world headlines April 10 when representatives from the republic's universities read a list of demands and then went on a hunger strike. When police tried to take the students to the hospital, the public stepped in and a riot ensued in which at least 19 people were killed and about 200 arrested.

Georgians asked for the removal of some local officials, the right to their language and culture, and their independence from the Soviet Union. The Russians gave in to all but the secession demand.

"I don't know what they were thinking," Yan said of the Georgians' demands to become a separate country, adding that the Russians would never allow a secession, any more than the United States would.

Yan said he could see the Baltic States getting their independence, partly because they have only been a part of the U.S.S.R. since World War II, but Georgia has been part of the Soviet Union since 1921, and affiliated with Russia since it signed a protection treaty with Catharine the Great in 1783. Yan said he cannot see Georgia being independent. "There's no way, I don't think ever."

Alyse said her aunt told them there were tanks in the streets and a curfew was imposed on Tbilisi, the capitol. Her mother was supposed to visit Georgia this week, but was denied a visa because the republic has been closed to tourism. However, Yan said everything is getting back to normal now. Martial law has ended and the tanks have left.

Yan said he believes that the uprising is nothing new. He recalled that when he was in high school in Georgia in 1978, he was sent home from school because students were marching in the streets. They were fighting to keep the Georgian language in the schools, rather than having it replaced by Russian. Yan said that Georgia is like a country within a country and that Georgians have always disliked Russians. He is not sure why, except that Georgians are locally patriotic, free-spirited and old fashioned; they do not like being told what to do.

Georgians are descendants of the ancient inhabitants of the Caucasian isthmus and comprise 65 percent of the republic's population. They are not historically related to the Russians, who constitute only 12 percent, and have their own language, constitution, flag, and anthem.

Yan pointed out that the U.S.S.R. is freer now than it was when he lived there. Perestroika and glasnost, which have become household words in the United States, have changed the southern republic.

"I don't see how they could be any freer," said Yan.

Inhabitants are allowed to travel more and freedom of religion is increasing. The majority of Georgians are Christians and in the past, they were not allowed to practice their religion.

The younger people seem happy with the changes, but the older generation is still skeptical. Yan said they have dealt with secrecy in the years before Gorbachev, and now they are slow to accept the new changes. For example, his aunt will answer questions such as, "Are there tanks?," but she will not volunteer the information.

His uncle is also worried about the changes. The U.S.S.R. has started with a new policy of allowing unemployment. Before, everyone had a job, but now people can be fired from their positions for poor work. Yan's uncle is a manager faced with the possibility of firing people who are not accustomed to such practices. He has been threatened by workers, and says that he will retire before he will fire anyone.

Yan is optimistic about the changes, saying that if the same conditions had existed when he was living there, his family may not have emigrated.

"If the changes continue it's going to be a wonderful country to live in," he said.

His mother visited Georgia last year and liked the changes, said Yan, but he believes his parents are still skeptical of Gorbachev — although they would like to believe him. Yan thinks that Perestroika and glasnost will continue.

Yan said of the changes, "People have a taste of them; they like them, ... It will be harder to go back."

DA says LA courts need big reforms to avoid 'gridlock'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The nation's largest court system is "approaching gridlock," and only major reforms will stop trials from reaching the marathon length of the McMartin Pre-School molestation trial, District Attorney Ira Reiner said Monday.

Without major changes, Reiner said, the system will be so overloaded that police will have to stop arresting criminals and prosecutors will be forced to make plea bargains on drastically reduced charges.

"That," he said, "is not acceptable."

Reiner was asked to comment on the McMartin case's duration during his monthly meeting with reporters. He said he supports efforts by Superior Court Judge William Pounders to limit evidence in an effort to speed up the two-year-old proceedings.

The case against Raymond Buckley, 30, and his mother, Peggy McMartin Buckley, 62, involving 65 molestation charges, is not expected to end until 1990. Pounders recently eliminated eight defense witnesses to speed things up.

"But it isn't a problem of one case," Reiner said. "It's a problem that permeates the entire system."

Reiner said he and other justice system officials are considering such extreme remedies as eliminating preliminary hearings, turning all jury selection questioning over to judges and giving judges wider powers to control scheduling as well as "the quality and quantity of evidence presented."

"We are really approaching gridlock," said Reiner. "It's going to be a disaster if something isn't done."

Although Reiner said he has no specific plans for implementing changes, he proposed four general reforms which would copy procedures used in the federal court system.

"We have to examine whether we should eliminate preliminary hearings," he said. "The federal system doesn't have preliminary hearings and it works quite well indeed."

The preliminary hearing gives a judge a preview of evidence against a defendant to determine if the person should stand trial. In California, it has all but replaced the grand jury hearing and indictment.

Most preliminary hearings are concluded in days. But in the McMartin case, the preliminary hearing dragged on for 18 months and ended with dismissal of charges against five defendants.

"We should also examine whether judges should be given vastly greater authority in controlling scheduling and the pace of litigation," Reiner said.

Currently, judges are guided by the statute of limitations for bringing a case to trial, he said, and have little leeway to speed up the process.

In addition, Reiner suggested that judges take over from attorneys the "voir dire" or questioning of prospective jurors during jury selection. In most federal trials, he noted, judges conduct the inquiry, not attorneys.

"We also ought to examine whether judges have the authority to control the overall quality and quantity of evidence presented in criminal cases," he added.

President is pleased with first 100 days

CHICAGO (AP) — President Bush on Monday said he is "pleased with the progress we've made" in 100 days in office and said he will soon make key arms control and foreign policy decisions that will chart a course for the future.

"In three short months we've made a good start coming to grips with issues demanding urgent attention and decisive action," he told newspaper publishers attending the Associated Press annual luncheon.

Some of these include savings and loan legislation, ethics proposals, the war on drugs and agreements with Congress on the federal budget and Contra aid.

He said defense and foreign policy reviews, environmental legislation and a program to deal with homelessness "are all on the near horizon."

Bush spoke at the luncheon a short while after Vice President Dan Quayle told those in attendance that the biggest surprise of his first 100 days in office is the enjoyment he receives from foreign travel.

Quayle, setting out on a trip to Australia and Asia, also said he had an opportunity to work closely with the president every day "to see how he formulates his policies."

The Bush-Quayle team took office on Jan. 20 and marks 100 days on Saturday.

Before reciting his own report card, Bush pledged to "follow every intelligence lead in the effort to win freedom for Terry Anderson. The AP's chief Middle East correspondent has been held hostage since disappearing in Beirut more than four years ago. The president said he was not able to provide any good news on Anderson's prospects for freedom, but said, "We will go the extra mile and do what we can."

Chicago was a brief stop and a long day for both Quayle and the president. Bush started in Norfolk, Va., where he attended a ceremony marking the deaths of 47 sailors killed in a gun turret explosion aboard the USS Iowa last week. From Chicago he was flying to Bismarck, N.D., and then on to California.

"We made a good start in these first three months and there's more to come," Bush said.

On his list of accomplishments, he touted the agreement with Congress to provide non-lethal aid to the Contra rebels as well as the broad-brush budget agreement that he said would reduce the deficit while leaving his no-tax pledge intact.

He urged the House to follow the Senate's lead in enacting his legislation to bail out the savings and loan industry and recommended stronger ethics legislation.

bleachers on the west side were removed last summer after a structural analysis showed them to be unsafe.

A lack of funding may keep the bleachers from ever being permanently replaced.

Douglas Gerard, executive dean of facilities administration, said temporary bleachers to accommodate the guests at the graduation ceremony this June are being leased from a Pasadena firm.

Those bleachers have a capacity of 2,100 and will be kept in place until the end of the 1989-90 football season in November, Gerard said. The lease-fee for the bleachers is $14,000.

Gerard said the state does not provide funding for facilities used for competitive athletics.

"They'll provide the instructional space, the field and so on," Gerard said. "But when it comes to seating and lighting and other similar things normally associated with competition, that comes from some source other than state funding."

"So in my judgment, there's very little chance of ever getting state funding to replace the seats."

Estimates for replacing the bleachers range from $200,830 to $314,820 depending on the number of seats and whether or not the grandstands would be constructed from metal or wood.

Gerard said he doubts permanent bleachers will ever be built since the potential for raising enough funds is limited. "I don't know where the money would come from."

Robert Bostrom, chair of the commencement committee, agreed that the problem is money, but disagrees with the eventual resolution.

"I don't know what the plans are for the west side of the stadium," he said, "but I expect someday there will be permanent seats built there."

"It's my vision that as we move forward in the next three, four or five years we will see as big a crowd at both commencements as we have in the past."

About 2,500 graduates participate in the June ceremonies each year. Each participant receives tickets for five guests.

In the past, bleachers were rented for the south end of the stadium, and the field was filled with folding chairs for the graduates and some guests. The bleachers on the east side of the stadium hold about 6,000 people.

In the end the stadium was able to accommodate about 16,000 people.

"This is the last year we'll have a single commencement exercise," said Gerard. "We'll have two, and that will decrease substantially the demand for spectator seating."

Gerard said the alternatives for replacing the bleachers are being considered now. "Quite frankly, we don't know what we're going to do on a permanent basis."

Other than for the commencement ceremonies each June, Gerard said, the stadium is used for large crowds only during the football season.

"Last year we could have gotten away without having the seating on the west side," Gerard said.

One possibility for getting the money to build permanent bleachers would be for the athletics department to raise it.

Gerard said, "My feeling is that there's not sufficient money, or potential for money, out of a surcharge on football tickets, for example, to pay for the seats."

Chavez leads protest march in Phoenix

PHOENIX (AP) — Activist Cesar Chavez led about 350 supporters on a police-escorted march through Phoenix Sunday to publicize his opposition to agricultural pesticide use and to highlight other issues.

The United Farm Workers of America leader also called unconstitutional the Arizona law prohibiting the boycott of stores that sell boycotted produce.

Chavez's attack on pesticide use focused on Captan, a fungicide used on California grapes.

There is "a terrible cloud of deadly pesticides that hangs over all of us, the farm workers and the consumers," Chavez, 61, told a cheering audience at a rally in the Immaculate Heart Catholic Church auditorium. "The whole atmosphere is permeated with pesticides. It's in the water, the food and in the public parks."

"Pretty soon, the growers will have to deal with the use of pesticides and ban all that are causing cancer and birth defects," Chavez said.

Other issues include increasing Hispanic voter registration, creating an FM radio station on the west side to provide news and information to farm workers, and establishing of a community center to assist farm workers, rally spokeswoman Guadalupe Sosa said. She said a licensing request to operate the radio station is pending.

“There is a terrible cloud of deadly pesticides that hangs over all of us, the farm workers and the consumers.”

cond ceremony to go from 3:30 to 5 p.m.

"Every school will be in an afternoon and a morning ceremony in one year and then reversed the next year," Bostrom said.

In order to reduce the length of the ceremony from the current two-hour standard to 90 minutes, Bostrom said redundancies and other unnecessary components are being eliminated from the traditional schedule.

"The committee has made a recommendation to remove some of the things from the commencement ceremony that just didn't seem to fit," Bostrom said. "The fewer people that have to be introduced and go up to the podium, the shorter the ceremony will be."

The proposed time-saving changes include:

•Having President Baker present the greeting from the alumni instead of a separate speaker being introduced to do it.

•Acknowledging faculty members in attendance at one time instead of having the seven school deans individually present the faculty from their respective school.

•Presenting the degrees to each school at one time instead of by department. Bostrom said the 58 departments at Cal Poly will be listed in the commencement booklet.

The committee is currently discussing the impact of two ceremonies on the need for speakers.

"We see a problem with inviting outside speakers to come and give two speeches," Bostrom said. "And we also see a problem with having different commencement speakers at the two ceremonies."

"There's bound to be one group that thinks they got the best or they got the poorest one."

Bostrom said inviting either Baker or one of the three student-selected outstanding faculty members to speak at the ceremonies could solve the problem.

"There's been some resistance expressed by the student members of the committee," Bostrom said. "So we're going to examine it some more."

An outside speaker was invited to speak at the commencement ceremony this June, but Bostrom said the committee learned in March that the invitation was not accepted.

Bostrom said the name of the person who was invited is "confidential." Because there is not enough time to schedule another outside speaker, Bostrom said Baker or an outstanding faculty member will give the keynote address in June.

Bostrom said another change beginning this June will be the sale of refreshments, such as juice, coffee, soda and other snacks, before the ceremony begins. Hats and sunscreen will also be sold.

"We're trying to keep it from becoming more carnival-like," Bostrom said. "So we're not going to sell popcorn or beach balls."

"I think a year from now it will be a lot better," he said.

Bush, ship captain honor Iowa's dead

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Thousands of grieving friends and relatives of the fallen 47 crewmen from the battleship USS Iowa gathered quietly Monday and heard President Bush praise their loved ones as "brothers in eternity."

"We join today in mourning for the 47 who perished, and in fact, for the 11 who survived," the president told a packed memorial service at Norfolk Naval Air Station. "They all were, in the words of a poet, 'the men behind the guns.'"

"They came from Hidalgo, Texas; Cleveland, Ohio; Tampa, Florida; Costa Mesa, California. They came to the Navy as strangers, served the Navy as shipmates and friends, and left the Navy as brothers in eternity. In the finest Navy tradition, they served proudly on a great battleship, the USS Iowa."

The president, a World War II Navy pilot, said he was proud to recommission the Iowa in 1984 and said it had earned 11 battle stars in two wars.

But with the still-unexplained fire and explosion last Wednesday in the battleship's No. 2 gun turret, he said, "Fate has written a sorrowful chapter in the history of this great ship."

Victims' relatives and hundreds of sailors and officers in dress blues were among the 6,000 people crowded into a hangar for the service. Bouquets of red roses were placed in front of the podium; behind were an American flag and the battleship's banners. Outside, another 2,000 people listened to the service on loudspeakers.

The service came a day after the World War II-era battleship eased into its home port, its gun barrels scorched and its 1,500 crewmen at the rails in white uniforms and black armbands in memory of their dead shipmates.

Capt. Fred P. Moosally, commander of the Iowa, told the crowd of mourners that he remembered the men of turret two.

"I remember their faces as they toiled at their guns, sweating an honest sweat that comes from young men dedicated to a great cause," he said.

Students boycott in Beijing, demand reforms

BEIJING (AP) — Students at most Beijing colleges exuberantly began a class boycott Monday to press for sweeping democratic reforms, and they tried through speeches and posters to enlist workers in the cause.

Authorities took no open steps to interfere, but sources said more than 10,000 soldiers from outlying counties moved into Beijing over the weekend in preparation for an eventual crackdown.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the troops had been used in the past to quash civil unrest. Some student leaders said they feared imminent arrest.

The exact number of participants in the boycott was not known, but students at a dozen schools with total enrollment of more than 50,000 said virtually all their classmates were striking.

The boycott was the largest in 40 years of communist rule, even though there were no reports of students joining in other cities as the student activists hoped.

"Now is the time for all students in Beijing and nationwide to united to fight for democracy!" a student speaker at Qinghua University yelled from a banner-strewn dormitory balcony to about 1,500 wildly cheering listeners. He proclaimed the balcony a "free speech platform" and invited orators with all views.

Students from several schools marched around campus and on nearby streets, gave speeches on street corners and plastered copies of the first edition of their own newspaper on lampposts and trees to publicize their demands for press freedom, an end to official privileges and corruption, and respect for human rights.

The boycott marks a new phase in the campaign after a week in which the students, mourning the death of former reformist party chief Hu Yaobang, tried to confront the leadership directly. They marched repeatedly to central Beijing's Tiananmen Square and tried to storm Communist Party headquarters.

Top officials, who have begun market-style economic reforms but insist China is not ready for democracy, refused to meet with them.

Student leaders stressed Monday they wanted their protest to be peaceful and legal, and that they were not seeking to overthrow the government or party.

However, many students said they want Premier Li Peng to resign, along with other officials they consider inept or too old. Several posters even called for the complete retirement of senior leader Deng Xiaoping, 84, who still wields power from behind the scenes.

"We haven't really thought about who would take their places," said an English student at Beijing Normal University.

Several posters attacked nepotism, listing the names of relatives of top leaders who have been given government jobs. One referred to Deng's son, head of the China Welfare Fund for the disabled, as "Prince" Deng Pufang.

At Qinghua University, known as a training ground for China's technocrats, a school announcement carried over loudspeakers said officials opposed the boycott and wanted students "to calm down." It added: "We want to make clear that the school has always cherished the students even though some are engaging in activities of which it does not approve."

The state-run Xinhua News Agency sought to minimize the strike, saying: "teaching and studying at most of the city's colleges and universities remained normal." It did not mention the reason for the boycott.

However, the neighborhood in northwestern Beijing where the largest universities are located was turned Monday into a huge debating ground, with clusters of students distributing leaflets and earnestly telling passersby about police beatings of student protesters last week.

Efforts to enlist the support of workers, begun Sunday, were stepped up.

"Workers, listen to us," shouted one philosophy student to a crowd of about 500 people. "We are fighting for the rights of all Chinese."

At the People's University, one student put a tape player in his dormitory window overlooking the street and played political speeches made in recent days, including one criticizing Li Peng as inept. A crowd of nearly 1,000 people formed to listen, blocking traffic.

About 1,000 students from the Beijing Foreign Languages College marched from school to school to encourage fellow strikers. More than 1,200 students from the Central College of Minorities marched to nearby People's University to read posters there.

Chen Mingyuan, a well-known researcher at the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, spoke at Qinghua and Beijing universities to encourage the students.

"Maybe there are some plainclothes police here," he told a Qinghua crowd. "If they are trying to take down the names of all of us, then their lot is hard indeed." The crowd roared with laughter.

Most students said they planned to boycott classes until May 4, the 70th anniversary of China's first student movement. That campaign also fought for democracy while galvanizing the entire nation in opposition to Japanese encroachments on Chinese soil.

There were no reports of new student activities in other cities Monday. Foreign sources reported new looting Sunday night in the central city of Changsha in Hunan province, where young toughs mixed in with a student protest Saturday and went on a rampage.

KCPR to feature supervisor debate

County supervisors David Blakely and Harry Ovit will discuss county growth on KCPR's public affairs show tonight.

Topics will include the state water project, housing and the Cambria and Santa Margarita Ranch projects. Blakely, who is anti-growth, and Ovit, pro-growth, will face off tonight on 91.3 FM from 7 to 9.

Blakely's upcoming recall election will also be discussed.

SUMMER

plan to divert students to summer is that once a student begins in summer, he or she will continue through the rest of the year.

"This is a pilot program," said Baker. "We want to see what we can learn from it and what other campuses can learn from us."

Baker and Chancellor W. Ann Reynolds will meet May 5 to discuss the proposal.

"Money is not the only question here," said Anthony Moye, CSU deputy vice chancellor for academic affairs. "Changing the whole formula for the way the summer quarter is funded is also under discussion."

No decision has been reached yet — Reynolds and Baker need to specifically analyze the present resource level.

"There's a very slim chance that we will see any enrollment growth before 1990," said Moye. It takes about 18 months for funds to be allotted for an enrollment growth program such as this, said Moye.

Reynolds has asked the 19 campuses to estimate enrollment numbers for the year 2005. She is looking to accommodate the population increase in California by several methods, including the addition of the San Marcos campus in northern San Diego County.

THOMPSON

And George understood, like a champion. By the time he got back from Jidda, the price of oil was rising sharply. It was up another 53 cents a barrel on Thursday, and the chairman of Mobil Corp. said it could stabilize at $20 very soon "if OPEC finally agrees to a new production policy this year."

King Fahd shrugged it off; but he let George get out of the country before he denounced him as a dumb brute ... and by the time Bush got back to the White House he was looking at a personal tragedy. Texas was saved, but he was not. At 15 cents a gallon, he was doomed to a fate like the Ancient Mariner. The albatross was on him, and he will be better off out of the race. Others will come and go before he dies in a fog like George Romney. We will march on a road of bones, he said, and he disappeared.
