Breds Down Western 74-70 In Effort To Win OVC Conference

The Murray State Thoroughbreds, playing some of the best ball of the season, defeated an accurately shooting Western squad Saturday 74-70, before a capacity crowd in the sports arena at Murray State College.

Howie Crittenden broke the all time scoring record of 1909, when he completed a jump shot with eight minutes left in the game. Crittenden ran his total to 1,914 points for his career at Murray State with 22 points for the game. He still has the rest of the season to go, to add to this staggering total of points.

In winning the game Saturday, Murray tied with Tennessee Tech for first place in the Ohio Valley Conference.

Western jumped into an early lead but were quickly tied by Murray. The lead changed hands several times in the first half, until Western built up a five

Girl Scouts Are Preparing For Girl Scout Week

Murray Girl Scout circles are making plans for observance of the annual Girl Scout Week, coming up March 11-17. Exhibits are being prepared to be put on public display locally illustrating the particular accomplishments and projects being followed out by the active local troops.

The public at large will thus have an opportunity to share with scout parents in appreciation of this world wide organization serving and training our youth.

February 22 will be set aside in Girl Scout activities as "Thinking Day". The purpose of this special day is to contemplate the true meaning of scouting, the meaning of the World Flag and of the American Flag, the part played by the Girl Scout program in other countries. There is to be a program with all troops participating at 3:00, February 22, at the scout cabin.

Girl Scout Troop 12, which aided in the preparation of materials for the March of Dimes, was busy again in public service, conducting the PTA meeting February 2, at which members of the Training School Association were guests of the Murray High PTA. The different patrols of Troop 12 also have their special days of working at the hospital as they fulfill the requirements of their current project, the Community Badge.

In answer to complaints against pseudo-solicitors, Salvation Army workers in Murray and vicinity will wear identification badges, Capt. Everett Case Jr. announced here last week.

Capt. Case is the Commander of the Paducah Corps, which has jurisdiction in seven Western Kentucky counties. The yellow badges are enclosed in plastic. Europe are watching for a possible hint of Russia's progress in guided missile development to come out of Tuesday's Communist Party congress in Moscow. They believe Soviet leaders Nikolai A. Bulganin and Nikita S. Khrushchev may say something about an intercontinental missile. Any statements the Russians make will not be laughed off.

Germany First
Insiders in Bonn, the West German capital, say Chancellor Konrad Adenauer is angling for an invitation to visit London before Bullitt and Khrushchev go there in April. Adenauer wants to get in a few words with Prime Minister Anthony Eden first. He's afraid the Russians might "sell" Eden some soft talk regarding German unification. German officials have denied reports in German newspapers that Adenauer might visit Britain. Bonn informants say these reports were planted by the government to test British reaction.

New Role For Dulles
Secretary of State John Foster Dulles may be asked to mediate the South Korean-Japanese fishing boats dispute. He visits those countries next month after the Southeast Asia conference in Pakistan. South Korea threatens to shoot if necessary to keep Japanese fishing boats outside of a 60-mile territorial limit off its coast. The bad feeling between South Korea and Japan, both American allies, has a headache for the State Department.

Trouble In Iran
Oil trouble may be coming up in Iran. The Iranian government would like to increase its output to get more royalties. When the British-Iranian oil dispute was settled, an American-British-French combine took over production. There is no market for increased Iranian production now. But Iran is a member of the shaky Middle Eastern defense alliance. It needs money badly; it might possibly threaten to pull out of the alliance.

Rich Uranium Strike Reported

LAMBERTVILLE, N. J., Feb. 13 — A Uranium rush may start in New Jersey—if the discovery claims of two New York public library geologists are true.

The New York brothers claimed Sunday to have found a "fabulously rich uranium mine about 60 miles southwest of metropolitan New York."

Alvin and Vernon Gatling, of South River, N.J., declared their strike is worth at least five million dollars and possibly 20 times that amount.

Their lawyer, former U.S. Attorney Walter Gray, of Philadelphia, said the Atomic Energy Commission has granted a license to the brothers after government geologists proved sufficient ore for processing.

Alvin, 25, and Vernon, 28, said the assay by the U.S. Department of Mines showed their 400-acre claim contained an average two per cent raw uranium.

Uranium is purchased by the government by the ton on a sliding scale starting at a test of one-tenth of one per cent. Ore testing at five per cent would sell for about $1,000 per ton.

The Gatlings said samples taken from their mine have tested as high as seven per cent and that the site contains 100,000 tons of high grade ore.

They are graduates of the New York Library of Geology. Vernon said "Both of us spent hours reading all available information on rock formations, uranium prospecting and any booklets we could lay our hands on."

A magazine article was responsible for their uranium bug. They read an article in Life magazine on a Charles Steen who found one of the richest mines in the world in Utah.

"If he could do it," Alvin said, "we decided, 'Why not us?'"

The brothers quit their jobs and headed west. Vernon had been a 335-a-week law clerk. Alvin a pre-medical student. They returned to Murray, Route 3, one daughter, geiger counter and AEC mineral searchers.

Their company has spent about $25,000 so far developing the mine. They set up a South River carpenter, mortgaged his home to keep the prospecting going. About 100 other persons, including doctors, families and immediate friends, form the company.

Cash, Equipment, Supplies And Services Are Great Aid

Murray Hospital Association received an account today of the donations received during the past year which indicates that over $13,000 in cash, equipment, supplies, and services have been received so far.

Most of the credit for these gifts goes to the Murray Hospital Auxiliary, Karl Warming, the hospital's administrator said.

The Murray Hospital Auxiliary was organized last summer under the sponsorship of the Murray Women's Club by Mrs. H. T. Waldrop, the club president.

The Auxiliary was organized to raise funds and to get the community interested in the hospital when it became apparent that the hospital physical plant and equipment was deteriorating because of lack of funds. The hospital, in reducing the first mortgage on the hospital from the original $60,000 in 1948 to the present amount of only $4,000 has had insufficient funds for the usual painting and repair work and for purchasing new equipment and supplies.

Cash contributions 1955, $9,012.81. The above amount was spent as follows:
Applied on new x-ray equipment, $500.00.
Outside painting, $1,787.20.
Nursery basins, $2,236.74.
Suction unit, $97.50.
Inside painting and repairs, $1,160.60.
Plastering, $707.84.
Linen, $300.00.
Tile for floors, $221.76.

A. B. Austin Memorial, $821.48.
Applied on kitchen sink, $70.00.
Pressure cooker, $10.00.
Total spent to date, $7,913.12.
Balance of contributions, $1,099.69, to be spent as follows:
Repainting private room, $25.
To be applied on fire doors and exit lights, $1,074.69. Total to be spent, $1,099.69.

The eight fire doors have been ordered at a cost $1,160.60. Installation of the doors will cost several hundred dollars.

In addition to the above contributions, $3,278.52 was received for the Hal Houston Memorial Library and Conference Room. The entire cost of remodeling and furnishing this room has been paid by the Hal Houston Memorial Fund.

The room is complete now except for the drapes which have been ordered.

The hospital has also just received an oxygen tent at a cost of $50 which will be paid for by the Lion's Club.

Many donations were made to the hospital as a result of the efforts by the Hospital Auxiliary; in addition, the Auxiliary has collected $6,750 which was in turn paid to the hospital and applied as follows:
Outside painting, $1,787.20.
Basins, $2,236.74.
Suction unit, $97.50.
Inside painting, $526.86.
Plastering, $707.84.
Tile for floors, $221.76.
A. B. Austin Memorial, $122.41.
Total spent, $5,675.31.

Balance to be applied on cost of exit lights and fire doors, $1,074.69. Some of the largest cash donations sent directly to the hospital during the year were as follows:
Calloway County Heart Fund, $500.00, used to help pay for x-ray.
Calloway County Medical Society, $200.00 used to purchase linen.
Calloway County Red Cross, $100.00 used to purchase linen.
Bank of Murray, $125.00 used on Austin Memorial.
Murray Wholesale, $100.00 used on kitchen sink and Austin Memorial.
V. C. Stubblefield, $50.00 used on Austin Memorial.

Home Department, Woman's Club, $50.00, painted rooms 223 and 306.
George Hart, $50.00, used on Austin Memorial.

There is also a long list of gifts of cleaning supplies, linen, food, paint and supplies donated by many people, clubs and businesses. All of the Calloway County Homemakers Club contributed such items as listed above.

Of the $6,750 donated by the Auxiliary, $1,000 of it was donated by the Murray Women's Club. This sponsoring organization pledged another $500 to be paid this year.

A nursery bassin can be purchased for $25, thus releasing it from other projects in a sponsored.

The hospital is purchasing about $400 worth of drapery material. Practically none of the rooms has drapes. It is planned for the Sewing Circle of the Hospital Auxiliary to help make the drapes. A pair of drapes for one window is then made for about $10.00.

Hundreds of dollars worth of services have also been contributed to the hospital during the year. Last summer the J. C. painted the kitchen and dining room. At present, the Murray Manufacturing Foreman's Club volunteered 320 man-hours of work this quarter. The entire kitchen hallway, sewing room, a large bed ward and a semi-private room have been painted by a group of men. A tile floor was laid in the sewing room. Other paint, tile floor and repair projects are soon to be completed by the men from the stone plant.

Mr. Warming said that the Hospital Board of Directors, Medical Staff and employees are all highly pleased and thankful for the interest shown in the hospital this past year.

None of the $26,100 Ford Foundation grant has been spent yet. Most of this grant will be spent for major remodeling which badly needed to help make Murray Hospital a modern up-to-date institution capable of giving better service to its patients, administrator said.

Wrong If You Have It Say Have Nots

By GLORIA SWANSON
Written For United Press

ROME — More and more there are those persons who want what you've got — but can see no other way of getting it except by making it wrong for you to have it.

Recently there were some Italian actors who complained to parliament that foreigners were taking their jobs—and that the salaries of stars were too high.

The first complaint has some justification, if they were referring to unknown foreign actors making work from unknown Italian actors. If true, this problem must be solved.

But the complaint, I was told, mostly referred to well-known names, and especially me and my salary. Of this group who complained, I am whom did I take the part of Agrippina?

Stars Are Trade Marks
Of course, she could have been played by dozens of Italian actresses. But they weren't remembered. If they know it, stars are like trade marks with the public, possessing various levels of selling power. If I can sell more tickets at the box office than an unknown Italian, is the producer not entitled to insure his investment?

Also, am I not entitled to a large salary? Even the door-to-door brush salesman gets paid on this basis—the more he sells, the more he earns. Further, isn't a producer supposed to be a businessman? Stars long ago would have been done away with if the producers could have found another way of selling their products.

I know the heartaches of aspiring artists—especially when he sees someone up there on the screen whose talent can't hold a candle to his.

Of course, it's hard to swallow another's success when he has achieved it through some vulgar publicity stunt—and you have real talent that only needs a chance.

Professional Failure
Because my success was interrupted by 17 years of professional failure, I feel qualified to say that my Italian colleagues are wasting precious energy and time, and making a mistake in trying to stop others from doing what they want to do themselves. Plus

Meet the man who performs hundreds of "weddings" a day...

BILL BAKER
Bill is just one of about 1,300 Southern Bell cable splicers. Been with the Company almost 10 years. He's active in PTA work, likes to bowl, and is as handy with tools around the house as on the job. Was "topkick" to his National Guard pals for years.

Meet Bill Baker, cable splicer for Southern Bell. In his day's work he "joins together" the hundreds of tiny wires in the telephone cables which carry your calls.

Cable splicing is just one of many jobs it takes to fill your telephone needs. And Bill is typical of some 65,000 Southern Bell people who work as a well-coached team. Keeping intricate equipment in top shape. Putting your calls through. Giving you the kind of service you want.

Because you can depend on the people behind the lines, you can depend on your telephone — 24 hours a day.

A Doctor in the Family

By ELIZABETH SEIFERT

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE

THE operation upon Fern Blake was a success. Alan knew that it was over. He had ever finished in the operating room, before the anesthetic had complimented him and before the patient had had a chance to show the first signs of recovery.

Twenty-four hours after the operation, he could take Fred Blake to his wife's room, and point to Fern's hand as it lay upon the white spread. The thumb, he explained, was strong—it no longer lay collapsed within the fingers in what was medically called the baby position.

"Then she is—cured?" asked Captain Blake.

The doctor smiled. "To the point where she will be in control of herself and her emotions. I should strongly advise moving her, when she's ready, to a good convalescent home. She is weak now, of course, from surgery. And she may continue to be weak. I removed a considerable body tissue which had been pressing upon her brain. There were clots as well, and one cyst. I am afraid she hasn't much in the way of life-expectancy. A year—perhaps longer. But she will soon regain consciousness, and you must face that possibility—or if she doesn't remember you, she may herself wish to be freed of marriage. But at least she is going to be able to decide such things for herself."

"Doctor—"

Alan pressed his shoulder. "I know. You love Margaret. Don't be ashamed of wanting her. But nothing, not even Margaret, was worth getting 'at all costs.' That phrase—" He shrugged, and turned toward the door. Fred Blake stood looking gravely down at Fern. Her head was turbaned in bandages, she seemed asleep. Before he left the room, he lifted her open hand, as Alan had done, dropped it and patted it gently. "Poor girl," he said softly.

That afternoon Alan sauntered along between the white fences at the pasture of the Green. He'd stopped at the house long enough to pick up a leather jacket. Now he filled his pipe and leaned on the top rail to watch a young colt kick up his heels. Yes, spring was nigh. And here came Jasper, across the fields, the white mane and tail of his buckskin like banners in the wind. The big man rode as if he were a part of his big horse. Alan watched them come closer, a smile crinkling his eye.

Jasper greeted him and turned that way, spurring his son loudly and affectionately. Alan went along the fence to open the pasture gate and restrained his impulse to give his father a hand down from the saddle. Jasper's twinkle acknowledged that he'd kicked the dead grass under the fence rail.

They talked for a minute or two, both tall men leaning on the fence rail, the buckskin tied at the gate. Jasper hooked a thumb up the frisking colt. "Linda named him Quill," he told Alan. "He's going to make a good horse. Look at the strength of those hind quarters."

"What will you name the new foal?"

"Makes no difference," declared Jasper, "as long as he's a good one."

"You can tell that already?"

"I bred this one by the book. Sire and dam both read good—should-a stuck to Feathers." He meant that he'd bred his mare from another line.

"You're not to get new blood now and then, str."

"I do. But I should give thought to how that blood shows up—not just rely on its being blood."

Alan smiled, and Jasper acknowledged the implication. "Marilyn's mother of this one. She's pretty near all bloodline herself. I took a chance in breeding her to more blood, and the result is a pretty horse that'll read like Burke's Pezage on the book, and not be much else at all."

"You see, son, it does work out that way. Horses and people. Us. Our family. The Thomtons. We've got good blood, but mainly we're line for strength and endurance. Now you take your mother—she very strongly believes that blood—just what's set down in the stud book—strength of the family. It's not. That's where she's wrong. She could look at her own family—Seretha, your Ma'am, is herself the strongest of the Merritt line, but her main strength is the way she rules this family. Though—But d'you ever notice, Alan, that the left hand, which is generally the weaker, is better suited to hold the reins than the right one?"

Alan regarded his father with awe.

"Ma'am knows that," Jasper continued. "She knows where her strength lies. Why else, d'you suppose, she's look out after Linda lately? She has, you know. First, convincin' the girl that she had failed you and the family by not givin' you children, naggin' at her to let you have another chance."

Alan stared at his father, white-faced. He'd known that Seretha was somewhat in the picture, but—"All because," the old man swept on, "she knew that there was real strength in Linda. Ma'am can't rule her, and she knows, too, that it'll be Linda who will supersede her, with a strength that's quite different from Ma'am's strength—that rein-holdin' I mentioned."

Alan looked away now, but still stared, white-lipped. After a bit, the old man put his hand on the leather jacket sleeve. "Why don't you say some of these things to Linda, Father?" asked Alan.

"I do a power o' talkin' to Linda. Been able to. She knows what she needs to know. Now—she knows," Alan kicked his shoe into the dead grass under the fence rail.

They talked for a minute or two,

IKE REGISTERS AS 'EX-SOLDIER

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER, who jokingly gave his occupation as "ex-soldier," laughs as he displays his card after registering at historic Adams County Courthouse, Gettysburg, Pa., to vote in the November elections. Equally amused is Mrs. Eisenhower who registered as "a housewife." In center is Francis Werley, Republican representative to the Pennsylvania State Senate. When asked the color of his hair, the President laughingly replied: "Brown—what I have." It was the first time they registered as citizens of Pennsylvania, which became their legal residence when they moved to their farm.
