Dear Mr. Muir

I write a few lines on the off chance of your being home again. Since I wrote last my plans have been altered, I am compelled to return to Australia earlier than expected. I go down to Honolulu next Saturday (25th), and shall be glad to have a line from you saying how you are. I fear I shall not be able to get time to visit your home, which I sincerely regret. Perhaps you will be here before I leave next Saturday? A line to this address will find me.

I shall long remember our pleasant trip together, and will try to send you some fossils from our Colliery on return.

With very kind regards

Believe me

Yours sincerely
I. Chapman
