MACRO-ECONOMIC OVERVIEW

During the second quarter of 2020, the scale of the economic crisis created by the Covid-19 pandemic has started to become clear. Assumptions we may have made before about economic trends and policy levers to influence them have been completely overturned by events and the economy globally, nationally and locally is in completely uncharted waters. The scale of the crisis in the UK nationally can be seen in the most recent economic indicators. It has now been confirmed that in the first quarter of 2020 (January to March), GDP fell by -2.2% on the previous quarter. This drop, in itself, would normally be reason for anxiety. Yet during April 2020, the first full month of the lock-down, estimates indicate that GDP plummeted by -20.4% compared to March with particularly sharp falls in manufacturing (-24.3%). Production of vehicles virtually came to a standstill (-90.3%). Textiles and clothing output fell by 49.4% while food and drink, relatively protected by consumer need, dropped by a mere -10.9%. The only major sector experiencing growth was in basic pharmaceutical products and preparations (+4.7%).

Economists quickly adjusted their estimates for economic prospects for the UK economy in 2020. Forecasts for 2020 GDP made in April averaged around -5.8%. The most recent expectations, however, are considerably more gloomy ranging from -6.5% to -12.9% with an average of -9% over the 12 months as a whole. Official employment and unemployment figures have barely changed for now – in the 3 months to April the employment rate has dropped marginally to 76.4% and the Labour Force Survey estimates unemployment constant at 3.9% of the total workforce. These figures, however, completely mask the real situation as large number of workers are now either on reduced hours or on the government's Job Retention Scheme. The Labour Force Survey is now releasing weekly estimates with particular attention given to those who are classed as "temporarily away from work" which includes furloughed workers. The numbers in this category during most of the first quarter of 2020 was around 2 million. In the fourth week of April 2020, however, this had risen to 8.4m workers across the UK and on a continuing upward trajectory. These numbers can now be confirmed with reference to estimates published by Government on the number of claims made to the Coronavirus Job Retention Scheme (CJRS). Figures released on 11th June 2020 show that claims were made by 1.07m employers affecting 8.7m “employments”¹ with total claims costing £17.5 bn. Given the differential effects of the pandemic on sectors and types of firms, it is unsurprising perhaps that the largest beneficiaries of the CJRS are in wholesale and retail (1.6m employments), Accommodation and food services (1.4m) and manufacturing (0.8m).

Many workers in Cumbria are, of course, self-employed and the introduction of the Self-Employed Income Support Scheme (SEISS) would have been a relief to many (though not all are covered by this). Government data indicates that nationally there were 3.4m individuals identified as potentially eligible for the scheme. As at 31st May 2020, 2.3m claims had been made at a cost of £6,974m, an average of £2,900 per claim. By far the largest number of claims have been from the construction sector, around a third of all cases. Other sectors include the self-employed in transport and storage (8%) and administration and support services (8%).

Data released by HMRC in early June provides a geographical breakdown of the data on furloughed workers and Self-employed claimants to SEISS. Analysis of these data has been reported by Cumbria Intelligence Observatory (Labour market briefing, June 2020². This analysis shows that up to 31st May 2020, there were 64,000 “employments” in the furlough scheme involving residents in the County, the highest number in South Lakeland where tourism currently has the greatest impact on the economy (16,500). In addition, around 16,900 Cumbrian residents had made claims under the self-employment support scheme with the highest take-up again in South Lakeland. Further stages of withdrawal of support will follow in September and October.

From 1st August 2020, the CJRS will begin the process of unwinding and in the first instance, employers will have to pay employee's National Insurance and Pensions Contributions. Into this equation, employers must also factor in the Job Retention Bonus announced by the Chancellor on 8th July (£1,000 per re-employed worker paid after 31st January 2021). The response of individual employers to these various stages is, as yet, unknown and hard to predict. What is clear though is that a significant number of jobs affecting residents in Cumbria as well as the prospects for many in self-employment are threatened by the present circumstances. In this context, the responses of individual employers to the situations they face across the County has major significance for the future economic and social well-being of communities across Cumbria.

CORPORATE CHANGE IN CUMBRIA: APRIL-JUNE 2020

The second quarter of 2020 has been marked by turmoil not only in the lives of individuals and workers in the County but in the running of firms, both large and small, as a consequence of the Covid-19 (C) pandemic. There has been a mixture of responses from firms reacting to the Government's lockdown measures which have affected the demand and supply of both products and workers. This variety has been cross-sectoral as can be seen from Table 3. There are, however, also some discernible sectoral trends in responses and outcomes.

For example, in the Manufacturing sector, many reported responses to C have involved innovation. In response to a call from Government and an innate desire to help the country fight the C pandemic, many firms have turned to producing oxygen and ventilator equipment (see James Walker, James Fisher & Sons, Bender UK, Forth Engineering, BAE); sanitisers (see Pure Lakes, The Bath House, K & S McKenzie, Playdale Playgrounds); and personal protective equipment or systems (see BAE Systems, Furness Plastics, Atom Packs, Oxley, Urofoam, Camtec Security). This has also, on occasion, been a joint effort, firms coming together to invent, produce and distribute products that are vital in the fight against C. For example, in April, it was reported that BAE Systems and Furness Plastics were working together to produce tens of thousands of free masks for the NHS. Colleagues from BAE's Technology Team and Air sector joined forces to design and manufacture their first 3D printed face shield. "BAE were producing the white head band and Furness Plastics were laser cutting the clear face shields and putting them together" (IC 9.4.20). The power of joining forces was truly demonstrated in the building of the Nightingale hospital at Kendal which brought together firms from different sectors. A 62-bay recovery ward was built at Kendal Leisure Centre. Russell Armer were in charge of the construction and provided the joiners, alongside Timber Frame North West Ltd. The painters were from Hodgson's Decorators, Kendal, the electronics from D.G. Bushell Ltd, Grange-over-Sands. "BAE Systems in Barrow, in partnership with Leck Construction, supplied the timber and pre-fabricated panels that required on-site assembly, fixing and finishing" (IC 9.5.20).

Innovation and invention has also been a means to capture new markets (see BAE Systems, James Fisher & Sons, The Bath House, Grasmere Gingerbread, Forth Engineering, K&S McKenzie, Urofoam, Camtec Security, Will & Al's Natural Plant Food Co.). For example, K & S McKenzie, Carlisle, supplier of parts to the commercial vehicle market, teamed up with WAI-Global to supply innovative vehicle sanitisation kits which will be useful for taxi drivers, bus drivers and garage owners to keep their cabs safe from viruses. With this firm adaptability and their use of the Government's furlough scheme for workers, it is notable that no firm engaged in manufacturing has been reported as having to close during this quarter. Indeed, jobs have been reported lost at only one firm, namely, Hawkshead Brewery, where 12 staff took an offer of voluntary redundancy.

In contrast to the trends seen in Manufacturing, sectors which have seen a direct hit to operations, namely Retail and the Hospitality sector have witnessed closures (see Oasis and Warehouse, Debenhams, The Derwent Water Hotel, The Windermere Hotel and The Shepherd's Inn) and disinvestment (see Edinburgh Woollen Mill, Caterite Food and Wine Service) resulting in at least 44 job losses (the actual numbers are often not reported). Given the slow pace of recovery at present, following the lifting of lockdown restrictions on these sectors, it is likely that we will see more of the same in the next quarter. However, some shops selling food and drink products and meals have innovated by starting local delivery services during lockdown (see Chestnut House, Mc Clures, Zest Bistro Kitchen, The New Union, Shap Chippy, A Day's Walk).

One sector which has clearly embraced the need to adapt its services to online provision has been that of Education (see Gen 2, PHX Training, Carlisle College and Skills Shop Ltd). However, a casualty of the C pandemic has been the Appleby Heritage Centre and possibly Newton Rigg College (its future from 2021 is being discussed by interested parties).

Finally, despite the inability of the tourism sector to operate during lockdown, there have been reports of both private and public investment in tourist facilities and venues (see Barrow Dock Museum, Port Haverigg Watersports, Nenthead Arts & Visitor Centre, Lakeland Wildlife Oasis).

The next six months will be critical for the Cumbrian economy as corporate responses to the crisis begin to unfold. In particular, the tourism and hospitality sector which accounts for approximately 14%* of employment in the County will now need to see a strong revival or additional government assistance to see it through the Winter months of 2020/21 given the loss of revenue this Spring/early Summer. Manufacturing companies (which account for 21%* of the County's GVA) and retail & wholesale traders (which account for 17%* of the County's employment) may also struggle to hold onto workers given both a world recession & the prospect of Brexit adversely affecting exports and the domestic demand for goods.
