CARDOZO LAW

YESHIVA UNIVERSITY

The Cardozo Data Law Initiative presents:

Uber made news recently when it was revealed that the company was subject to a hacking incident in 2016 that went unreported. There can be many business and ethical reasons to disclose incidents like these, but what does the law actually require? Join us to learn more about data breach notification laws, and how those laws can be narrower-and broader-than one might expect.

We will also discuss how the new Cardozo master's in Data and Privacy Law* for non-lawyers can prepare its graduates for careers in this and other privacy and data law fields.

Speaker

Felix Wu, J.D., Ph.D., is a Professor of Law at the Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law at Yeshiva University, where he is also Faculty Director of the Cardozo Data Law Initiative (CDLI).
