D'Edden (Appellant)
vs
Redder (Respondent)

The Chief Justice <sup>forwards</sup> contends that if the appellant is to be regarded as an agent and instrumentality of the Commonwealth, when he signs a receipt for the monthly payment of his salary, upon a voucher prepared in a form prescribed for that purpose by the Federal Audit Act, then the absurd position arises that the Commonwealth by one of its instrumentalities is giving a receipt to itself for payment of money which it owes to another. This argument is founded upon an entire misconception of the character and purport of the act performed by the Appellant when he signs the receipt in accordance with and in obedience to a law of
