ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

First of all, Alhamdulillah and we want to express our gratitude to Allah S.W.T because give me a good health and without any obstacle to complete my industrial training and this thesis.

I would like to take this opportunity to express my deepest gratitude to my academic supervisor, Miss Nur Syaliza Hanim Che Yusof for her kindness, patience, encouragement as well as dedicated guidance. Her valuable suggestion and interpretation truly helped me in writing this thesis.

Last but not least, my most gratitude goes to my parents and my beloved family members and also to all my friends for supporting morally and financially. Their kind understanding, courage, love and personal attention towards the completion of this project will not be forgotten. May Allah bless them with good life and happiness in this world and thereafter.

Thank you.

ABSTRACT

Students all over the world are faced with the problem regarding career decision making. Moreover, this phenomenon becomes more difficult when facing prospective undergraduate. This study was conducted to determine the relationship between financial benefits, non-financial benefit, interpersonal factors and intrinsic factors on career decision making. Target population selected from undergraduate students of Universiti Teknologi MARA Kelantan. Based on population size, 337 students are defined by using stratified sampling technique from four different faculties. Questionnaire was used as data collection and Structural Equation Modeling to analyze the inter-relationship between construct. Since the questions have the reliability and validity, an accurate data are required to proceed on several statistical techniques. As a result, financial benefits and intrinsic factor have significant effect on career decision making. While, non-financial benefits and interpersonal factors are not supported the hypothesis.
