Film Collection (16 mm)

The 16mm film collection had existed within the library for over 55 years. Its first films were part of the City of Miami's public library and began in the 1960s before there was a county library. When MDPLS was formed, the County supplemented its local funding for films with Federal LSCA grants (Library Services and Construction Act) which was enacted in 1964 by the U.S. Congress and ceased in 1995.

Film Collection (16 mm)

Apart from leased feature films, all films were purchased for free exhibitions for the life of the print within the collection include Experimental/avant-garde art films, Non-narrated films, Children's films, Black history, Floridiana, and local history. Today there are over 4,000 films within the collection.

The Vasari Project

The Vasari Project

The Vasari Project is a library collection dedicated to documenting, collecting and preserving Miami-Dade County's art history from 1945 to the present.

It is a living archive that grows through contributions from artists, art professionals, exhibition spaces, galleries, institutions, and private donors. The archive collects documentation rather than original works of art comprised primarily of printed matter: correspondence, press clippings, photographs, posters, books, exhibition catalogs, artists' files, oral histories, and other ephemeral materials.

The Vasari Project

As of 2010, the Vasari Project Archive holds over 300 archival cartons containing at least 6,000 items documenting all aspects of Miami's art history, including substantial documentation of Christo and Jeanne-Claude's Surrounded Islands and other major projects. Reproductions of Vasari materials appeared in the 2007 book Miami Contemporary Artists. In 2008, the archive loaned archival materials to El Museo del Barrio for the landmark exhibition Arte No Es Vida: Actions by Artists of the Americas, 1960-2000, which traveled to museums in Mexico, Colombia, Brazil and Argentina through 2011.

In 2019, with the help of an MDC Cultural Affairs Grant, Vasari Project commissioned a "zine" to be produced in order to orient and introduce the public to the archive. Please download a copy.

The Vasari Project

In 2019, the archive loaned items to the Copper Hewitt Smithsonian Museum of Design in New York, for the exhibition Willi Smith: Street Couture on view from March 13 – October 25. The Vasari Project is a resource for ongoing research, scholarship, publications, artists' projects, exhibitions and events.
