

Presentation for the Symposium on BEER

November 2020

Prime Supporters in College Students' Support Networks

David Chan<sup>1</sup>, Hollee McGinnis<sup>2</sup>, Michael Broda<sup>3</sup>, Haya Hamid<sup>4</sup>, Quindel Jones<sup>5</sup>, Jeremy Winslow<sup>2</sup>, Joy Ma<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup>Department of Mathematics and Applied Mathematics, VCU, Richmond, Virginia 23284-2014

<sup>2</sup>School of Social Work, VCU, Richmond, Virginia 23284-2014

<sup>3</sup>School of Education, VCU, Richmond, Virginia 23284-2014

<sup>4</sup>VCU Health Sciences, Richmond, Virginia 23284-2014

<sup>5</sup>Systems, Modeling and Analysis, VCU, Richmond, Virginia 23284-2014

dmchan@vcu.edu

Abstract: Many college students find different kinds of support from their peers, family, and others while at college. Some of these individuals are prime supporters that support the student in multiple ways in terms of the education and their mental health. Using data collected from before COVID-19, we examine the impact of these prime supporters on students in terms of their education and their mental health outcomes.