

Five Questions

Marsha Warren Mittman

What is the color of despair

I ask

Of those blind to its pain

What is the sound of hope

I wonder

When pleas for change are ignored

What is the touch of neglect

I shout

To those who turn their backs

What is the taste of anger

I yell

When people cannot feel

What is the smell of death

I cry

At those who walk away