PREFACE

This book is an attempt to fill a long felt need in New Guinea for a simple text to place into the hands of the people to assist them in understanding and applying to their every day living the basic principles of hygiene and sanitation. It is not easy to take a subject of this kind, simplify its concepts and terminology and then give it a Neo-Melanesian (Pidgin) dress so that it can be studied with profit by the people of the Territory. Mr. Tscharke came to the Territory to serve in the Lutheran Mission shortly before the outbreak of World War II. During the war he served in the Medical Department of the Australian Military Forces as medical assistant, having charge of the medical work among the Native peoples in several centres in Papua and New Guinea. Following the termination of the war he returned to the Mission and was placed in charge of the Gaubin hospital, Karkar Island. The experience gained and the observations made in treating the sick and in instructing his Native assistants urged on him the need for a text of this kind. Mr. Tscharke is to be congratulated on his effort and on the painstaking way he has endeavoured to make basic concepts and techniques understood. The first and preliminary, limited edition was soon exhausted. It is hoped that this present and rewritten edition also will have the widest circulation.
