Abstract

This project explored the many different ways Christianity connects to various topics and how Christianity is doing in the modern times. The main topics included how Christianity connects to science, America, and the modern day. Research has shown that Christianity had significant impact on the early days of modern science, with many great scientists being Christian themselves. America's foundation was heavily based on Christianity, such as laws and the society at the time. But, now that Christian influence that once was, has decreased a considerable amount and worldwide Christian persecution is at an all time high.

(McCarthy, 2019)

Conclusions & Discussion

Looking back at the findings, there was a substantial amount of evidence supporting the key points. This topic is fascinating because of how many connections there are to Christianity in our everyday lives. Like how most holidays celebrated in the US are Christian Based. Another example would be the law in the US, there are a lot of laws that are based off of Christianity, that we abide by everyday.

Some future research ideas could include, Christianity in Asia, the early Christian church, and the history of Christian Movements and their impact.

Key Points

- Christianity had a major impact on developing modern science.
- Christianity was crucial in developing the structure of America.
- Christianity has come from shaping American society, to adjusting to American society.
- Christianity and religion as a whole has been on a decline in modern times.
- The amount of people who don't identify
- Christian persecution has spiked in the Eastern part of the world.

It is fascinating to see how a religion could have such an impact on the world and the society of America.
