Introduction

As an early career clinician in a fast-paced field that is dedicated to working with others, saving time and energy where possible is invaluable. When I first started working with children, I was overwhelmed by the amount of time I was having to dedicate to research to find reputable resources to use in my clinical settings. I realized so much of my time and energy was going towards this research that by the time I entered the therapy room with my clients I was tired, frustrated, and overwhelmed by the lack of easily accessible resources. After working with and learning from so many experienced psychologists I was inspired to create a compendium of child treatment resources that collaborates and consolidates years of experience, clinical work, and expertise into one readily accessible guidebook, the Clinician's Resource Guide (CRG). The CRG aims to help new clinicians quickly and easily access and obtain resources when providing services to children.

A secondary goal of this guide is to decrease burnout associated with high workloads through increasing support and access. Burnout among clinicians in the mental health field has been identified as a significant problem, however little focus or research has been dedicated to understanding and solving the issue (Morse, Salyers, Rollins, Monroe-Devita, & Pfahler, 2011). Mental health providers experience high burnout rates, and a recent study identified workload as a key factor in psychologists' burnout rates (O'Connor, Neff, & Pitman, 2018). In their review, McCormack, Macintyre, O'Shea, Herring, and Campbell (2018) found that, "Workload and work setting are the most common job demands and factors that contribute to burnout among applied psychologists..." (Results section, para. 1). With this guide, clinicians will have new confidence in their work practices throughout the entire client relationship.

Clinicians also need to know what resources they can recommend to their clients and clients' caregivers. The CRG is organized to include resources that are recommended for clinicians, caregivers, and client use and are labeled accordingly. The resources labeled for client use are inherently resources that clinicians and/or caregivers would use with or read to clients. If a resource pertains to more than one audience, it will be labeled under the central audience and I have noted within the reference if additional audiences may benefit from said resource. In addition to the reference for these materials I have also provided a brief description of each resource.

The Clinician's Resource Guide: A Compendium of Child Treatment Resources, has limitations and it is not meant to replace the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders, 5th Edition (DSM-5), invaluable trainings, supervision, or other diagnostic and/or treatment resources. Although not focused on one theoretical orientation, it integrates various sources and orientations to help guide therapists' search when identifying clinical references. While the list of resources in this book is not exhaustive, the author hopes that additional versions of this guide will be created as more references are recognized and included. It is the goal of this resource guide to help clinicians spend their time and energy with clients rather than searching through thousands of articles, sites, and books for information. Clinicians should verify all resources for appropriateness before use in any clinical setting.

I would like to sincerely thank all the professionals, supervisors, mentors, and peers who have helped contribute to this compendium. Your support and collaboration were essential and invaluable in making this guide a reality. Thank you!

General Manuals and Resources for Clinicians Working with Children

In this section, general manuals for clinicians working with children are listed. Resources are organized by the central audience; resources for clinicians, resources for caregivers, or resources for clients (children). As mentioned in the Introduction, the resources labeled for client use are inherently resources that clinicians and/or caregivers would use with or read to clients. If a resource pertains to more than one audience, it will be labeled under the central audience and I have noted within the reference if additional audiences may benefit from said resource. In addition to the reference for these materials I have provided a brief description of each resource.

Child Mind Institute. (2020). Retrieved from <https://childmind.org/>. This resource may also pertain to caregivers.

The Child Mind Institute is an independent, national nonprofit dedicated to transforming the lives of children and families struggling with mental health and learning disorders. Our teams work every day to deliver the highest standards of care, advance the science of the developing brain and empower parents, professionals, and policymakers to support children when and where they need it most. (About, para. 1)

Davies, D. (2011). Child development a practitioner's guide (3rd ed.). New York, NY: Guilford.

This book on child development provides an essential foundation for all practitioners who work with children. Douglas Davies has the unique ability to present complicated theoretical content about child development in a very comprehensible manner, with numerous in-depth illustrations of how these theories come alive in the developmental trajectory of growing children. Not only is the book a treasure trove of information, it is also a pleasure to read. (vii)

Dodds, J. (1985). A child psychotherapy primer: Suggestions for the beginning therapist. New York, NY: Human Sciences Press.

The purpose of this book is to assist students to deal with the practical issues of child psychotherapy. The questions addressed here are those students frequently ask when they start seeing children in mental health settings. The questions and discussions are most applicable to therapy methods calling for a one-to-one relationship between a psychotherapist and a child, rather than to methods such as family and group therapy. (Abstract, para. 1)

Jongsma, A. E., Peterson, L. M., & McInnis, W. P. (2014). The child psychotherapy treatment planner (5th ed.). Hoboken, NJ: Wiley.

Pressure from third-party payors, accrediting agencies, and other outside parties has increased the need for clinicians to quickly produce effective, high-quality treatment plans. Treatment Planners provide all the elements necessary to quickly and easily develop formal treatment plans that satisfy the needs of most third-party payers and state and federal review agencies. (1)

Shapiro, J. (2015). Child and adolescent therapy, science and art (2nd ed.). Hoboken, NJ: Wiley.

The purpose of this book is to equip readers with the knowledge and skills they need to provide effective psychotherapy to children and adolescents. I aim to provide an understanding of the major theoretical approaches, knowledge about the findings of outcome research, training in a variety of therapeutic techniques, and lots of good words to say to young people and their parents. (xi)

Troutman, B. (2015). Integrating behaviorism and attachment theory in parent coaching. New York, NY: Springer International Publishing.

This practical guide provides a robust positive-parenting framework for professionals coaching parents of infants, toddlers, and primary school children. The first half of the book explains behaviorist and attachment theories of parenting, comparing, contrasting, and synthesizing them into an effective, research-informed approach to practice. The second half shows these guidelines in action, using play therapy as a means to improve disruptive child behaviors, correct harsh parenting practices, and address root causes of adversarial parent-child relationships. Throughout these chapters, vivid composite cases demonstrate not only common parent-child impasses but also therapist empathy, flexibility, and self-awareness.

Wachtel, E. (2004). Treating troubled children and their families. New York, NY: Guilford.

The majority of integrative efforts thus far have been directed toward work with adults. It is my hope in this book to make a contribution to the application of integrative thinking toward work with younger children and their families. The particular form of integration I am describing is intended primarily for work with families where the child manifesting difficulties is a preadolescent or younger.

Greene, R. (2014). The explosive child: a new approach for understanding and parenting easily frustrated, chronically inflexible children (5th ed.). New York, NY: HarperCollins.

If you are the parent of a behaviorally challenging child, this book should help you feel more optimistic about and confident in handling your child's difficulties and restore some sanity to your family. If you are the child's grandparent, teacher, neighbor, coach, or therapist, this book should, at the least, help you understand. There is no panacea. But there is certainly cause for hope. (xiv)

Theoretical Orientation Specific Manuals for Clinicians Working with Children

In this section, theoretical orientation-specific manuals for clinicians working with children are listed. Resources are organized by specific theoretical orientations. As mentioned in the Introduction, I have provided a brief description of each resource.

Cognitive Behavioral Therapy (CBT)

Davidson, H. (2019). Cbt workbook for kids: 40 fun exercises and activities to help children overcome anxiety and face their fears at home, at school, and out in the world.

Emeryville, CA: Althea Press.

This book addresses a wide range of anxiety symptoms: generalized anxiety, panic, specific phobias, and even some obsessive thoughts. It will teach your child the skills they need to stop avoiding things that make them anxious and live happier, healthier lives. (vi)

Phifer, L., Crowder, A., Elsenraat, T., & Hull, R. (2017). Cbt toolbox for children and adolescents: Over 200 worksheets and exercises for trauma, adhd, autism, anxiety, depression & conduct disorders. Eau Claire, WI: PESI.

CBT Toolbox for Children and Adolescents was designed with therapists in mind to provide a brief, targeted solutions to a myriad of mental health issues that are frequently present in children. The activities in this workbook enhance traditional CBT by promoting the development of a child's executive functioning, developing social skills, and prompting the whole-brain approach. (xi)

Dialectical Behavioral Therapy (DBT)

Miller, A. L., Rathus, J. H., & Linehan, M. M. (2017). Dialectical behavior therapy with suicidal adolescents. New York, NY: Guilford Press.

In this book we discuss the “why”, the “how”, and the “what” of DBT for multiproblem suicidal adolescents, and we offer clinical guidance from our experiences in implementing DBT for this population... We also discuss BPD (a diagnostic risk factor in and of itself), particularly the validity, reliability, and stability of this diagnosis among adolescents. (3)

Rathus, J. H., Miller, A. L., & Linehan, M. (2017). Dbt skills manual for adolescents. New York, NY: Guilford Press.

The current volume presents their latest contribution to adolescent DBT, and is certain to be as influential as their 2007 book. It is written for clinicians in various settings to use with adolescents coping with a broad array of emotional and behavioral difficulties. (viii)

PA: Jessica Kingsley Publishers.

Many of the activities in this book can be used with individuals or adapted for application with a group. While some of the activities require more time than others, most can be completed within 30 minutes. Some of the activities work well with young children and other activities are more appropriate for preteens and teens, but many can be adapted for either population.

Lowenstein, L. (Ed.). (2011). Favorite therapeutic activities for children, adolescents, and families: practitioners share their most effective interventions. Retrieved from <https://lianalowenstein.com/e-booklet.pdf>

The interventions have been divided into three sections. The book begins with engagement and assessment activities providing clinicians with interventions to engage with and evaluate clients. The second section presents treatment techniques to facilitate the working through of therapeutic issues. The last section outlines interventions that can be incorporated as part of the client's termination process. (ii)

I have no preferred treatment modality, as no single approach fits everybody, but I practice all the forms of treatment that I discuss in this book. Each one of them can produce profound changes, depending on the nature of the particular problem and the makeup of the individual person. I wrote this book to serve as both a guide and an invitation – an invitation to dedicate ourselves to facing the reality of trauma, to explore how best to treat it, and to commit ourselves, as a society, to using every means we have to prevent it. Edelman, R. D., & Carter, S. (2015). Trauma: teaching kids all about trauma.

Gainesville, FL: Village Counseling Center.

How trauma affects our thoughts, feelings and behavior are discussed to help children recognize and express how they might have, or might be, affected by stressful events in their lives. Ways of coping with trauma are suggested as well as the message that kids are survivors and can overcome things that might have been traumatic in their lives.

Heegaard, M. E. (1991). When something terrible happens: children can learn to cope with grief. Bloomington, MN: Woodland Press.

This book was designed to use the art process to teach children who have witnessed or experienced a traumatic event some basic concepts about trauma and provided an opportunity to learn about and express related feelings.

Misconceptions may be revealed, conflicts resolved and self-esteem increased while coping skills are developed.

Holmes, M. M., Mudlaff, S. J., & Pillo, C. (2000). A terrible thing happened. Franklin, TN: Dalmation Press.

This gently told and tenderly illustrated story is for children who have witnessed any kind of violent or traumatic episode, including physical abuse, school or gang violence, accidents, homicide, suicide, and natural disasters such as floods or fire. An afterword by Sasha J. Mudlaff written for parents and other caregivers offers extensive suggestions for helping traumatized children, including a list of other sources that focus on specific events.

Ippen, C. G., & Ippen, E. (2016). Once I was very very scared. San Francisco, CA: Pipro Productions.

Summary: "Once I was Very Very Scared", declares squirrel. The other animals chime in to share that they were also once scared. Through the story we learn what scared the little animals, ways they each responded when scared, and things that help them feel safe and calm. This book was designed to help young children who have experienced stressful or traumatic events.

Ippen, C. G., & Ippen, E. (2019). You weren't with me. San Francisco, CA: Piplu Productions.

Little Rabbit and Big Rabbit are together after a difficult separation, but even though they missed each other, Little Rabbit is not ready to cuddle up and receive Big Rabbit's love. Little Rabbit needs Big Rabbit to understand what it felt like when they were apart...Big Rabbit listens carefully and helps Little Rabbit to feel understood and loved. This story was designed to help parents and children talk about difficult separations to help them reconnect and find their way back to each other.

McCleary, C. S., & Santana, N. (2014). The day my daddy lost his temper: empowering kids that have witnessed domestic violence. Scotts Valley, CA: CreateSpace.

The Day My Daddy Lost His Temper is a story about Laura, a little girl who witnesses domestic violence. The book is aimed at mirroring the reader's experiences and provoking increased acceptance and verbalization of their own feelings and experiences.

Moore-Mallinos, J. (2018). Do you have a secret? Hauppauge, NY: Barrons Educational Series.

This book helps kids distinguish between good and bad secrets. Even very young children have concerns and anxieties, and Let's Talk About It! books are written and illustrated especially for them. Parents are advised to read these books aloud while their preschooler listens and looks at illustrations of the boys and girls in each story. Many children in early grades will be able to read the stories for themselves. Let's Talk About It! books encourage children to explore their feelings, and then to speak openly about things that trouble them.

Straus, S. F., & Bogade, M. (2013). Healing days: a guide for kids who have experienced trauma. Washington, DC: Magination Press, American Psychological Association.

Healing Days is a book designed to be used in therapy for young children and functions as an excellent resource for those who have experienced physical or sexual abuse, or other trauma. Readers will follow four children as they learn ways to cope with their trauma. Sensitive, empowering, and beautifully illustrated, the book models therapeutic coping responses and provides children with tools they may use to deal with their trauma.

Resources for Clients

Carlson, N. L. (2007). My family is forever. New York, NY: Penguin Group.

Some families look alike, some don't. Some families are formed through birth, and some families are formed by adoption. But as the little girl in this heartwarming book makes clear, being a family isn't about who you look like or where you were born—it's about the love that binds you together.

Fraser, T. A., & Fraser, E. E. W. (2020). We're all not the same, but we're still family: an adoption and birth family story. Ann Arbor, MI: Loving Healing Press.

This story was written for adoptive families to explore the benefits of adoption openness. The main character, Deshaun, loves his family but always wondered about his biological family. Does he look like them? Did they love him? With the support of his adoptive parents, Deshaun gets to meet his biological family. They develop an ongoing relationship, so Deshaun feels more stable in his adoptive family, but also develops a comfortable relationship with his birth family.

Deshaun and his family are reminded (as we all are) that family can include biological, adopted, foster, and kin members.

Heegaard, M. E. (2007). Adopted and wondering: drawing out feelings. Minneapolis, MN: Fairview Press.

This art therapy book helps children cope with the emotional impact of adoption. Children can use this book's interactive exercises to realize that their birth parents were good people who loved them but were unable to give them a good home; understand that they were placed, rather than abandoned; and develop a strong sense of personal identity. The interactive drawing exercises help children explain in pictures what they are unable to say in words.

Katz, K. (2012). Over the moon: an adoption tale. New York, NY: Square Fish.

An affirming story about international adoption, based on the author's own experience with her daughter. A magical, reassuring story of one adoptive family's beginnings told in words and pictures that are just right for the youngest child.

Madrid-Branch, M., Darling, E. (2019). Coco & olive: the color of love. Author.

Explore the colors of love and the beauty of family diversity with Coco & Olive, a doggie mother and daughter pair who come together through adoption. Filled with imaginative characters and stunning illustrations, this is a story about finding a home, not in a building, but within each other's hearts.

Nazario, T. (2018). And that's why she's my mama. Author.

Some mamas didn't hold you in their belly, but they will forever hold you in their hearts. Mamas come in all different shapes, colors, and ages, but they all have one thing in common. They love you! Enjoy the multiple characters in this children's story which explores the loving tasks of what makes a mama.

Nemiroff, M. A., Annunziata, J., & Koeller, C. (2004). All about adoption: how families are made & how kids feel about it. Washington, DC: Magination Press.

For the child who already understands the concept of adoption, this work provides a deeper understanding of how the adoption process works and the feelings that many children have about being adopted. Topics include why children are given up for adoption and why adoptive parents want to adopt.

Zinniger, S., & Cunliffe, T. (2014). Yes, I'm adopted! Scotts Valley, CA: CreateSpace.

Yes, adoption makes me special, it means that I am loved... This brightly colored children's book illustrates how adoption is brought about by love. Written from a child's point of view, the rhyming verse takes you through an adoption journey from start to finish. It is perfect for anyone, young or old, whose life has been blessed by adoption.

What exactly is a Coping Skills Toolbox? It is a collection of your various favorite and healthy items that you can use when you are feeling anxious, panicky, or distressed. It has sometimes been recommended that students create a coping skills toolbox for those times when they need something to help them get through an anxiety attack, panic attack, or any kind of distressed situation.

Because there are nearly an infinite number of ways to cope, it is not necessarily important whether you cope like everyone else. All that matters is that you find effective coping methods that will help you to build resilience and to thrive. (1)

Troutman, B. (2015). Integrating behaviorism and attachment theory in parent coaching. New York, NY: Springer International Publishing.

This practical guide provides a robust positive-parenting framework for professionals coaching parents of infants, toddlers, and primary school children. The first half of the book explains behaviorist and attachment theories of parenting, comparing, contrasting, and synthesizing them into an effective, research-informed approach to practice. The second half shows these guidelines in action, using play therapy as a means to improve disruptive child behaviors, correct harsh parenting practices, and address root causes of adversarial parent-child relationships. Throughout these chapters, vivid composite cases demonstrate not only common parent-child impasses but also therapist empathy, flexibility, and self-awareness.

Poor Duncan just wants to color. But when he opens his box of crayons, he finds only letters, all saying the same thing: His crayons have had enough! They quit! Beige Crayon is tired of playing second fiddle to Brown Crayon. Black wants to be used for more than just outlining. Blue needs a break from coloring all those bodies of water. And Orange and Yellow are no longer speaking—each believes he is the true color of the sun.

Ewing, C., Morgan, P. (2019). An abc of equality. Minneapolis, MN: The Quarto Group.

A is for Ability, B is for Belief, C is for Class. All people have the right to be treated fairly, no matter who they are, what they look like, or where they come from. An ABC of Equality introduces complicated concepts surrounding social justice to the youngest of children.

Fox, M., & Staub, L. (2017). Whoever you are. Boston, MA: Houghton Mifflin Harcourt.

Everyday all over the world, children are laughing and crying, playing and learning, eating, and sleeping. They may not look the same. They may not speak the same language. Their lives may be quite different. But inside, they are all alike...At a time when, unfortunately, the lessons of tolerance still need to be learned, Whoever You Are urges us to accept our differences, to recognize our similarities, and—most importantly—to rejoice in both.

Hallinan, P. K. (2018). A rainbow of friends. Nashville, TN: Worthy Publishing Group.

This book is for ages 3-5. Friends come in all colors and sizes; they can be funny or serious, musical or athletic, outgoing or quiet. This book reminds children to celebrate their differences because that is what makes each of us so special.

Herman, S. (2019). Teach your dragon about diversity. DG Books Publishing.

Having a pet dragon is very fun. He can sit, rollover, and play... But what if your dragon is sad because he is different than his friends? What if he feels bad that his skin is red, and is not like any of his friends? What if he's worried that none of his friends have wings, tails, and scales like him? What if he's so nervous because he's different? What should you do? You teach him about diversity! You teach him that we're individuals and should celebrate our differences..."

Kates, B. J., & Mathieu, J. (2017). We're different, were the same. New York, NY: Random House.

Who better than Sesame Street to teach us that we may all look different on the outside—but it's important to remember that deep down, we are all very much alike. We all have the same needs, desires, and feelings. Elmo and his Sesame Street friends help teach toddlers and the adults in their lives that everyone is the same on the inside, and it's our differences that make this wonderful world, which is home to us all, an interesting—and special—place.

Katz, K. (2013). The colors of us. New York, NY: Square Fish.

A positive and affirming look at skin color, from an artist's perspective. Seven-year-old Lena is going to paint a picture of herself. She wants to use brown paint for her skin. But when she and her mother take a walk through the neighborhood, Lena learns that brown comes in many different shades. Through the eyes of a little girl who begins to see her familiar world in a new way, this book celebrates the differences and similarities that connect all people.

Love, J. (2019). Julian is a mermaid. Somerville, MA: Candlewick Press.

In an exuberant picture book, a glimpse of costumed mermaids leaves one boy flooded with wonder and ready to dazzle the world...Mesmerizing and full of heart, Jessica Love's author-illustrator debut is a jubilant picture of self-love and a radiant celebration of individuality.

Marley, C., Brantley-Newton, V. (2014). One love. San Francisco, CA: Chronicle Books.

Adapted from one of Bob Marley's most beloved songs, One Love brings the joyful spirit and unforgettable lyrics to life for a new generation. Readers will delight in dancing to the beat and feeling the positive groove of change when one girl enlists her community to help transform her neighborhood for the better.

Penfold, A., & Kaufman, S. (2019). All are welcome. New York, NY: Random House.

Follow a group of children through a day in their school, where everyone is welcomed with open arms. A school where kids in patkas, hijabs, and yarmulkes play side-by-side with friends in baseball caps. A school where students grow and learn from each other's traditions and the whole community gathers to celebrate the Lunar New Year. All Are Welcome lets young children know that no matter what, they have a place, they have a space, they are welcome in their school.

Thomas, P., & Harker, L. (2014). Everyone matters: a first look at respect for others. Hauppauge, NY: B.E.S. Publishing.

Children learn that having respect means treating everyone fairly. But there are some types of respect that each person must earn for themselves--by keeping promises, by being honest in what they say and do, and being polite and respectful to others. Most important of all, boys and girls learn that people who are different deserve just as much respect as close friends.

Tyler, M., & Csicsko, D. L. (2016). The skin you live in. Chicago, IL: Chicago Childrens Museum.

With the ease and simplicity of a nursery rhyme, this lively story delivers an important message of social acceptance to young readers. Themes associated with child development and social harmony, such as friendship, acceptance, self-esteem, and diversity are promoted in simple and straightforward prose.
