Defeat Seen For 2 Amendments

By JAMES R. RENNEISEN
United Press Staff Correspondent

FRANKFORT — Two important constitutional amendments apparently will be defeated by Kentucky voters on Nov. 5, and the reason for the defeat will be indifference.

With only a few days away, no organized opposition has developed against the amendments, but on the other hand, nobody is working very hard for passage either.

As a matter of fact, the vast majority of voters who will be asked to decide on the amendments do not know what the proposals are.

The amendment listed first on the ballots would liberalize the amending process by permitting up to five proposed amendments to be considered by the voters at one election. The Constitution now limits the number to two at each election.

The second amendment abolishes the elective office of superintendent of public instruction and substitutes a commissioner of education to be appointed by the governor.

Billy Graham Has Bout With "Devil"

MONTELEONE, N.C. — Evangelist Billy Graham was to be taken to the hospital today because he fought a painful battle with a kind of horned devil he had never fought before.

The devil was not the irreligious type with which Graham wrestles in his sermons. Rather, it was a "big, mean, tremendous old man" that was guarding his two ewes.

Saturday afternoon, Graham entered the sheep pen on his mountain farm to pick an apple off a tree in the pen. He intended to give the apple to the ram.

The apple turned out to be the forbidden fruit. The ram butted Graham from behind, striking him behind the knees. Graham tumbled down a 50-foot craggy incline, bruising and scratching himself.

The enraged ram followed, butting Graham twice more. The evangelist picked up an ax and fended the animal off until he could scramble over a fence.

Graham, suffering bruises, cuts and scratches, lay in bed all day Sunday lamenting the fact. "I kept turning the other cheek on that old ram."

Dr. L. Nelson Bell, who is Graham's father-in-law as well as his doctor, decided early to operate on the evangelist's knee which was so inflamed it could be fractured.

Investigate Death Of Mother And Seven Children In Fire

BELPRE, Ohio — The death of a mother and seven of her nine children in a fire which gutted their once - condemned home here was under investigation on three fronts today.

Washington County Sheriff Dean Ellis said he had requested Fire Marshal to aid him and local authorities investigate the death of Mrs. Vivian Aileen Snider, 36, and her seven children.

The eight victims had apparently suffocated early Sunday before they could escape their second-floor apartment. The only exit was a narrow stairway at the end of a series of five-rooms the family occupied in the ramshackle building in this Ohio River town.

The father, Lloyd, 39, and two sons, Darrell Lee, 16, and Ronald, 12, were not at home. Snider was visiting the home of a relative in Vienna, W. Va.

The fire severed a power line, cutting off electricity to Piedmont and surrounding areas.

No one was injured. Police and firemen plus a small detachment of troops from nearby Ft. McClellan moved in to evacuate about 50 homes in the danger area, about a half mile from the center of town.

Authorities cleared out an area about a mile square.

Mayor J. O. Chaffin said the boxcar containing the shells had by mid-morning burned down to a "smouldering hulk but the shells were still popping off although not as frequently as before.

Chaffin said he was told that it would be four hours after the shells had been moved to the 105 millimeter variety, stopped exploding before anyone could go into the area.

Lt. Gerald Marcotte of Woonsocket, R. I., head of the 142nd Ordnance Co. from Ft. McClellan, brought about 20 soldiers here to joint Piedmont's five-man police force, firemen and state patrolmen in cordoning off the area.

Fire Capt. Gene McLeod said the shells started going off about 3:10 a.m.

He said the freight car had dropped off a Seaboard Airline Railroad freight train after the train crew noticed the fire which was believed to have started from a hot box on a wheel bearing.

The town's police officers and the soldiers hastily began evacuating residents in the area and road blocks were set up to the scene, attracted by the popping shells.

Three Injured As Car Overtakes

It was learned here today that Jimmy Bogard, 18, and two companions were in an automobile accident near Pete Light Springs east of Murray on Highway 68 in the early hours of Sunday morning. Bogard received facial lacerations and both of the other occupants of the car were injured, one seriously, according to reports heard during the day.

A check with city, county and state police revealed no definite information by press time. It was learned, however, that only one car was involved in the accident and that it was driven by Bogard. The car reportedly struck loose gravel on the highway and overturned several times.

Explosion Shells Cause Evacuation

Piedmont, Ala. — A boxcar loaded with artillery shells caught fire early today on the outskirts of this small northeast Alabama town and an estimated 200-300 persons were evacuated from their homes to escape exploding fragments.

The fire severed a power line, cutting off electricity to Piedmont and surrounding areas.

No one was injured. Police and firemen plus a small detachment of troops from nearby Ft. McClellan moved in to evacuate about 50 homes in the danger area, about a half mile from the center of town.

Royal Couple Is Overwhelmed By New York Visit

NEW YORK — Queen Elizabeth II rode up New York's canyon of heroes today in a deluge of confetti and ticker-tape. It was the biggest celebrity reception here since Gen. Douglas MacArthur returned from Japan.

Curb-side crowds of hundreds of thousands cheered the 31-year old monarch and her consort Prince Philip as their royal motorcade moved slowly in brilliant sunshine from the battery to City Hall. The windows of skyscrapers along the route were jammed with office workers who scattered tons of confetti, ticker tape and torn telephone directories on her bubbly limousine.

It was the Queen's first visit to New York, the city she said she had "wanted to see since I was a child." It was also the first ticker tape parade ever accorded a British monarch.

Shout "Hi Liz"

New York's informal shout of "Hi, Liz" brought the Queen's broadest smile and the jauntiest wave she has exhibited on her six-day visit to the United States. Fashion conscious New York women eyed her rust-colored ensemble trimmed with regal white ermine and set off with flashing diamond jewelry.

Handsome bareheaded "Prince Phil" whose car followed the Queen's, flashed a smile that thrilled the Wall Street's secretaries who had been given an extra-long lunch hour to attend the parade.

The Queen stepped into the special limousine at the Battery at 11:22 a.m. She and her party arrived aboard a U. S. Army ferry which had brought them from their train on Staten Island in the company of Gov. Averell Harriman and British commonwealth dignitaries.

Elizabeth's own comments on her first view of the towers and turrets of Manhattan were in everyday American slang: "Wheel!" she exclaimed. "How quickly I didn't realize the buildings were so closely knit!"

The weather was as near-perfect as a queen could wish. The sky was a soft blue with only a trace of clouds and the temperature climbed toward the 60-50s. A brisk fall wind was blowing.

Her brief route to City Hall was Mayor Robert F. Wagner's official welcome to the city called up one of the heaviest forces of police, federal security officers, firemen and first aid personnel in memory.

"Since MacArthur was cheered by 7,500,000 persons in 1951 had the city put on such a dazzling show. The entire financial district, which Elizabeth glimpsed as she passed Trinity church at the head of Wall Street, was decked with Union Jacks.

After a welcome at City Hall by Mayor Robert F. Wagner, the royal couple will continue on their breakneck schedule to the Waldorf - Astoria for a luncheon at which the mayor will be host.

Will Visit U. N.

At the United Nations the potentially-explosive Middle East crisis will be tabled for the day to welcome the sovereign. The Queen will deliver a brief address before a special plenary session of the General Assembly.

There'll be just enough time for a royal cat-nap before the Queen is due at a dinner at which 1,000 guests are paid $35 each to eat and get a glimpse of the royal couple. The dinner is being given by the Pilgrims and the English-speaking Union.

Her last formal appearance will be at a gala Commonwealth held at the 7th Regiment Armory. Then the Queen and her entourage will go to Idlewild International Airport for a flood-lit sendoff.

One of the Queen's most outspoken critics, former Punch magazine editor Malcolm Muggeridge, announced to give all of Elizabeth's movements through New York a careful appraisal. Muggeridge flew to New York Saturday to discuss his article "Does England really need a queen" on a TV show. He said today he would watch the queen on television.

Firemen Called Twice On Fire

Firemen were called Saturday to 1314 Sycamore street where timbers beneath a fireplace had caught fire.

An effort was made to extinguish the blaze Saturday night and apparently the fire was out, but they were called again on Sunday morning about 9:30.

Firemen said that the fireplace rested on sills rather than being built down to the ground as usual.

Damage was confined mostly to the area directly under the fireplace.

By FRANK LITSKY United Press Sports Writer — The nation's college grid players—the few still unscathed and the walking wounded from Saturday's fiasco of upsets—plunge into "back-yard" conference play Saturday as the season passes the halfway point.

The season's most spectacular successions of upsets claimed no fewer than four of the country's top 10 teams Saturday as Purdue whipped first ranked Michigan State, 20-13, Illinois beat third-ranked Minnesota, 34-13, UCLA defeated seventh-ranked Oregon State, 26-7, and Texas stunned ninth-ranked Arkansas, 17-0.

"I kicked in a panel and reached inside," he said. "I felt an iron bar. I couldn't budge the door."
Firemen said later the "iron bar" was a towel rack and if Kerns had reached a few inches further he would have been able to unlock the door.
Volunteer firemen said they were blocked by dense smoke and flames from mounting the single set of stairs. An attempt to gain access to the apartment from a nearby roof was also thwarted, they said.
"By then the kids must have been dead," Fire Chief William Mulligan said. He said the flames were brought under control in about an hour. He said his wife and children were watching television when he left.

HOW WE'RE KILLING OURSELVES OFF—These charts from the Health Information Foundation, New York, tell you how and where we're dying accidental deaths by the thousands in industry and in the home. As you can see, most fatal accidents occur in the mining, quarry and oil and gas fields in industry, and in the home it's falls. Annual figures are from National Safety Council.

Obituary

The consecrated life of one of God's faithful servants, William Stubblefield, ended October 16. He was born December 7, 1887, being 89 years, 10 months and 9 days of age.

He was married to Lissie Housden, December 1, 1895. To this union were born two daughters. One died in infancy. One daughter, Mrs. Mavis Albritton, survived him and who was able to administer to him all his needs until the very end. He was a kind, agreeable, and devoted father, and a true, faithful, and loving husband, a noble Christian gentleman, and we have every reason to believe that when he was called to quit the works of this life that he has gone to live in the spiritual realm, where peace, joy, and happiness will be forever more.

May we all so live that when our summons come we can have the assurance that our souls will be transported to that celestial home, the beautiful city of God, where there will be eternal joy and supreme happiness with sorrow and suffering ended and all tears wiped away.

With all our grief at his going, let us thank God that the faithful and true Bro. Stubblefield is not only released from the trials and tribulations of this earth, but has exchanged them for the spiritual realm where with angel voices sweetly singing, he is now at rest with God, and when Jesus comes to gather his jewels home, he will be one among the number.

The Christian is willing to be absent from the body and be present with the Lord. Let us think of him still as the same. He is not dead. He is just away. Sunset and evening star, And one clear call for me! And may there be no moaning of the bar, When I put out to sea. But such a tide as moving seems asleep, Too full for sound and foam, When that which drew from out the boundless deep

GARD OF THANKS

We would like to again express our genuine and sincere appreciation for the many courtesies extended us by our friends and relatives during the illness and bereavement of our wife and mother.

We will long remember and always appreciate your help in time of need.

Thurston and Gail Furches

An Appreciation

Dear Friends and Relatives: We wish it were possible to express to each of you personally our gratitude for your many helpful deeds and sympathy during the many months of illness and the taking of our loved one. All the prepared food that lightened our work. The beautiful flowers that you sent helps us to know you care. Your many deeds will forever remind us of our obligations to you. Again we thank you.

Mr. and Mrs. George Shoemaker, Mr. and Mrs. Houston Lax, Mr. and Mrs. Hoyte Miller.

Turns again home. Twilight and evening bell, And after that the dark! And may there be no sadness of farewell. When I embark. For thought from out our bourne of time and place The flood may bear me far, I hope to meet my pilot face to face. When I have crossed the bar.

CHAPTER 1

My father and I were working on the corral gate when I saw my brother Gil riding his horse the pasture to the Besse Nordine's ranch. "Gil's coming, Pa." My father tossed his head and straightened up. "One thing about Gil: when he was on a horse, he was worth watching.

Gil was riding Tuck, his big sorrel gelding. Tuck was the fastest horse in Dillon's Park, and Gil loved him, but loving him wasn't enough to keep Gil from riding the devil out of him. He put the sorrel over the barbed wire fence between Nordine's and our Big Ten in a long, graceful jump, and came right on, never missing a lick. A minute later he reined up in front of us.

"My father said, in his mild way, "In a hurry, Gil?"

"Sure am," Gil said. "Saddle up. A bunch of Rafter 3 cows are coming into the park, and we gonna run 'em back over the hill."

"Who is?"

"Men you and Bess and her crew."

Besse Nordine's crew consisted of two men, Barney Lux and Shorty Quinn. Any way you counted it, that added up to five, including Bess, who was, as Pa often said, the best man in the park. My father was a good hand with a gun and everybody knew it, but even quality wasn't enough against numbers, and Rafter 3 had numbers besides being a plenty salty outfit.

"What happens if we run into some Rafter 3 riders?" my father asked.

"We'll blow their heads off," Gil said.

He sat looking at Pa, his black Stetson cocked at a rakish angle. Flimsy! That was the word for Gil. He could do a lot of things well - almost everything except work. He had a talent for wearing fancy clothes and he owned the most expensive pair of Justrins in the park. He always carried a pearl-handled .44, and he was fast and accurate with it; but whether he could kill a man was something else.

Gil had fallen in love with Bess when we first moved to the park three years ago, and he said he was going to marry her. If he did it would be quite a trick, because she was a strong-minded woman from away back. I hoped he got her. It would serve him right.

My father didn't say anything. Impatiently, Gil said, "Bess told me she'd wait for you. He motioned toward me. The kid can finish the gate." Then he whirled his sorrel and took off for Anchor.

The kid can finish the gate. That was like him. I stood watching until he disappeared, blood pounding in my temples. Sure, I could stay here and finish the gate, while he eschayed around over the country trying to look good in front of Bess. Funnny, he was twenty-two. I was nineteen. He used to whip me regularly until I was sixteen. It hadn't been too tough a job, with him three years older than I was. Then there'd be the time in Buhl, the county seat, when he jumped me. I'd have whipped him if Ma hadn't knocked me groggy by hitting me on the head with a frying pan. He hadn't tackled me since.

When Gil was home he never turned a hand. He was sickly. Ma said, and him as big as a young Shorthorn bull. Funnny thing: he couldn't work at home, but he'd go over to Bess's ranch and shine up to her.

I hadn't realized my father had added up until he said, "Dave." He stood a few feet from me, holding the reins of his brown horse. When I looked at him, he said, "I've felt the same way more'n once. Dave." He stepped into the saddle. Then he said, "Never mind the gate."

He rode off, not across the pasture the way Gil had, but down the lane to the road. Quite a man, my father. Big, hard-working, patient. Joe Munro deserved more than he'd received from life - the way I saw it, anyhow. He was one of the reasons I'd stayed home. He needed me, and he loved me, and I loved him.

I hated Gil. I'd hated him as long as I could remember, and someday I'd break his neck. There were times, too, when I hated my mother. I knew it was wrong, but I couldn't help it. Ma hadn't wanted me in the first place. She had a hard time when Gil was born. She almost died, and she told my father she wouldn't have any more children. I don't believe she ever neglected me - physically, I mean. But if she ever gave me a chance of a word of endearment, I couldn't remember it.

"Where did they go, Dave?" Ma called from the back porch. I stood looking at her for a moment. She was a small woman, under five feet, and I never knew her to weigh more than one hundred pounds. Now, at forty, she was showing her age. Her hair was gray; she had wrinkles in her cheeks and around her eyes. Right then I wasn't in any mood to listen to her fret about Gil. I said, "A bunch of Rafter 3 cows are headed into the park, and they're going to run 'em back over the hill."

Now she really had something to fret about. All of us who lived in the park were under the shadow of Rafter 3 guns. The trouble had never come to a head, but it was only a question of time until it would, unless Vic Toile, the Rafter 3 foreman, got a dose of lead poisoning.

I went into the barn, climbed to the mow, and lay down on the hay. I had a nunch Kitzy would be over. She was Bess's younger sister, seventeen and pretty, and the one person in the world who meant more to me than my father. We were in love and wanted to get married, but Bess threatened to marry her. "Kitzy isn't going to work like I have," Bess said flatly. "When she's eighteen, she's going away to school. She'll marry somebody with money, not a kid like you, Dave, who doesn't have ten cents to his name."

Bess wasn't a woman to change her mind. She didn't have anything against me, but she'd decided Kitzy's future, and that ended the whole business.

The only time Kitzy and I were alone was when Bess and the crew were gone, and Gil wasn't each other at parties or in church on Sunday morning or maybe at a school shindig, but always when Bess was around.

I didn't wait long. I heard the barn door open and close, the one on the north side that Ma couldn't see from the house. A moment later Kitzy climbed the ladder to the mow and stood there, smiling provocatively at me.

I said, "Hello, Kitzy."

She put her hands on her hips. "Were you expecting me?"

I said, "Counting on it."

I couldn't even look at her without getting tied up inside. Blue eyes, chestnut hair that held just a little curl, a slim figure more girl than woman, Kitzy Nordine was everything in the world I wanted.

HAIR-TRIGGER MIDDLE EAST—Here's a geographic look at highlights of the tense Middle East situation. In manpower, Syria has about 55,000 under arms, with maybe as many as 3,000 more from Egypt. Turkey may have a million. The Soviet charges that 50,000 of them are massed on the northern border of Syria, and that the U. S. is trying to goad the Turks into attacking.

AFTERNOON OFF—A traveling queen gets hardly any time for informality, but Queen Elizabeth did get time for this stroll on the grounds of Government house in Ottawa, Ont. With her are Governor General Vincent Massey and his three daughters, Eva, Jane and Sue. Two of the girls carry cameras. Note the watchful Mounties back there.

New California License Plates Easier To Read

LOS ANGELES — Police officers on various levels say the state's new type of license plate has assisted them in law enforcement noticeably since introduced in 1956. The new plate has three letters and three numbers, compared with the previous type of passenger car plate which usually had a letter, a number and four to six numbers. The plates' letters frequently make actual words, but there are more which could cause embarrassment to a car owner.

Motorcycle officer Homer Struthers said he can check one-third more license plates now. Like all officers, he has a "hot sheet" or list of car license plates wanted for one reason or another. Struthers said the plates are less cluttered, easier to see and easier to recall. Lt. W. H. Gaylord, in charge of the hit-run felony follow-up unit, said his division now receives more license plates and more letters and numbers of suspected hit-run cars than previously. He said witnesses still make mistakes under the stress of seeing a traffic accident, but that he noticed a difference right away when the new plates were issued.

The Grilse Is Salmon Mystery

SAN FRANCISCO — Prodded into maturity by an odd quirk of nature, the grilse, a little brother of the king (or chinook) salmon, is an ichthyological mystery that frequents Redwood Empire streams every year. When the big kings make their spawning runs this autumn, the grilse, which weigh only from one to seven pounds, will also be making this purposeful run, for these fish, sometimes called "jacks," are mature sexually despite their retarded growth.

Why one male king fingerling goes down to the sea to return as a hefty specimen, while another returns as something of a midget, is a finny puzzle. The usual life pattern for a normal king salmon is four years—one year in fresh water while making the downstream migration, two years at sea, nine months on the spawning run and three months as an egg. The king destined to be a grilse spends only one year at sea before he feels the urge to make the spawning run. In the Rogue River of Oregon, at the northern part of the Redwood Empire, it has been estimated that 13 per cent of the king salmon on a spawning run are grilse. Grilse are also found among the silver salmon, a smaller species than the king, but the percentage of silver grilse is smaller.

Big Cherry Pie Baked For George

GEORGE, Wash. — This town, newest in the state and currently with a population of 20 — was dedicated July 4 with a cherry pie eight feet square and cherry arch. The town's promoter, Charles E. Brown, said the pie required 2000 gallons of cherries and was baked in a specially constructed oven. More than 300,000 eye injuries occur yearly in American industry. About 90 per cent can be prevented.

Film Shop

By RON BURTON United Press Staff Correspondent HOLLYWOOD — Call it inflation, call it competition, call it progress or call it anything you like, but what it amounts to is a trend which the main object will be the multi-million-dollar film and TV production. Charles Wick, chief of Splendex Enterprises, believes in the old saw about money making more money. His associated belief is that the very expensive TV or film production actually will promote popularity of high-priced productions. This means more demand for more such productions, he believes. "Our company is splurging in both TV and motion picture super-chuper, million-dollar productions," he said. "Movies with huge budgets which permit them to be epics with special camera techniques and color treatment started this trend. Now TV must shell out money to keep up with such movies."

Makes Both "This fall, for example," we'll have a TV series starring Frances Langford and there won't be any shooting budget for the series. It's three million dollars right now."

Wick admits his theory is that you've got to spend some money to make some money, but he phrases it, "you must invest before you may realize a profit." Wick said he also planned to produce one super musical film with Miss Langford, using the same techniques found in today's hit movie musicals. "We're also keeping in mind technical advances which these super productions will bring about," he said. "That means perhaps newer camera and screen devices—also larger TV screens and more and more color." He likes to think of the Splendex firm as one which really isn't embroiled in the movies and TV shows.

Education Opinions

WAVERLY, Iowa — A balance between two "honest differences of opinion" concerning the type of schooling for youngsters is needed before any progress can be achieved, according to Prof. John Haefner of the University of Iowa. "The real wonder is as good as it is" in view of the argument between the "honoring the mind" and "adjustment to life" methods of education," he said. The question is no longer which system is needed, but how much of each, Haefner added.
