A total of over $22,000 was mailed out this year. A. L. Burken, Assistant Cashier, said that this is the largest club, both in membership and total dollars saved since the service was first offered by the bank in 1953.

Knights Roll To Third Win

The Murray Knights rolled to its third straight victory last night at the expense of Princeton by the score of 103 to 82. The Knights took an early lead and were behind during the entire game. The Knights led by as much as 28 points at one time during the game.

The well-balanced offense and the strong bench of the Knights proved again to be the story of the game. Five players hit in double figures for the Knights and they were as follows: Joe Parker 28, Chico Reyes 26, Don Williams 16, Don Dingwerth 12 and Larry McClure who contributed 11. Other boys hitting in the scoring column were Ron Schue with 6 and Herb Dingwerth with 4. Don Dowdy, Dan Everett, and Tom Cox did not hit in the scoring column but all played a good defensive game.

The Knights led after the first quarter by 47 to 13 and the half ended with the Knights on top by 55 to 33. The third quarter saw the Knights lead by 72 to 54 with a slight comeback by Princeton.

Princeton was led by ex-Murray Knight player Gerald Taber who contributed 18 points and Hayden Kelley who also hit for 18.

A little side note can be pointed out with Parker hitting for 11 out of 22 from the field for a 50 per cent average while Everett hit for 11 out of 17 for a 70 per cent average while McClure hit 4 out of 6 for a 66 per cent average. The entire Murray Knight team hit a 46 per cent average from the field.

Man Kills Two, Injures Three, Then Jumps From Building

EASTON, Pa. (AP) — Authorities searched for a motive today in a suicide note left by a man who killed two, wounded three, with an axe and then critically wounded his wife, daughter and another grandchild with the same weapon before leaping to his death from a factory building.

The body of Elfrido Mantonio, 60, 828 Columbus Ave., Philadelphia, N. J., was found Monday outside the five-story industrial plant in nearby Wilson Borough and led to discovery of the attack on his family in his home in Palmer Township. His wife was attacked in a hospital here.

Elaine Gabert, 4, Mantonio's granddaughter, died shortly after admission to Easton Hospital. Her brother, Paul, 1, succumbed this morning. Their mother, Mrs. Lillian Gabert, 30, a divorcee, and a brother, Raymond, 3, were listed in critical condition today at the same hospital.

Investigators said Mantonio had planned to wipe out his entire family. Before starting on his wild rampage, police said Mantonio went to a neighbor's home in Philadelphia and sought to "borrow a small gun." The neighbor said he had only a shot gun but Mantonio said that weapon was too big.

An alarm had been sent out for Mantonio after he entered Betts Hospital where his wife, Anna, 59, was under observation since Nov. 14, and struck her down with a broad bladed axe. Her condition was listed as critical today.

Wilson Police Chief George Wright said a note was found under Mantonio's body but they had trouble deciphering it since most of it was written in a foreign language.

Decorate Tree With Cranberries

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Bend, president of the Precision Instrument Corp., proposed Monday a way out for the cranberry industry — use the bright red berries as Christmas tree ornaments.

He suggested that the industry pay this message to the "public."

"Would you like to help save the cranberry growers of America from disaster? You can help assure that they will have a happy Christmas if you will go out and buy just one pound of cranberries. Then, using a needle and ordinary twine, string them together and place the chain on your Christmas tree. This is the old-fashioned tree ornament home Grandpa always used. Use it again this year. It will add beauty to your tree and you will have that wonderful feeling that you have helped some cranberry grower have a merry Christmas."

Four Known Dead With List Expected To Rise With Search

By ROBERT T. LOUGHMAN
United Press International
CHICAGO (AP) — A four-engine freight plane crashed in flames into a cluster of homes and an apartment building today when trying for an emergency landing in pre-dawn darkness at Midway Airport, the world's busiest airfield.

At least four persons were known dead. Fire Commissioner Robert Quinn placed the death count at six and John Ascher, Chicago chief of detectives, said seven were dead. Ascher said the total death count might rise to 15. At least nine persons were injured, three seriously.

The Trans World Airlines Constellation had just taken off from Midway in pre-dawn rain and fog when the pilot, Capt. C. W. Helwig, radioed the control tower that he was swinging back for an emergency landing.

His plane came down three blocks away from the airport on Chicago's southwest side with an impact that sounded like a blockbuster bomb.

Fire engulfed the homes. Two homes were practically burned to the ground within an hour and a third was all but demolished, police said. Some residents of the homes were believed to have been trapped in their beds.

Civil defense officials said one of the dead was the pilot. He was through 100 feet from the plane, still strapped in his seat. The other crew members, 1st Officer D. W. Waters and Flight Engineer A. L. Auge, were believed to have survived.

Two bodies, that of a man and his wife, were taken from the flaming apartment house to the Cook County Morgue. Morgue officials said they were prepared for eight to 10 more casualties.

At least five persons, all believed members of the same family, were reported injured.

Jumps Through Window
It was the first major plane crash in four years at Midway where a plane lands or takes off every minute. The airport is located close to new-bungalow-style housing developments. At the time of the crash, the fog was so dense that low-skimming planes overhead could not be seen.

Twenty-two lives were lost in Midway's last disaster, when a Braniff Constellation plunged into a corner of the airport while trying to land on July 17, 1955.

Within minutes after the TWA plane hit just before 6 a. m. CTS, the pleasant residential area

He was a member of a Presbyterian Church in Illinois. The funeral will be conducted Wednesday afternoon at 2 p. m. at the Puryear Methodist Church with Rev. J. W. Boyd and Clovis Kemp in charge. Burial will be in the Murray City Cemetery.

Blasts Rock Area

Elmer Bolen, who said he lived across the street, said "I was jolted by a terrific explosion and thought it was in my house. But I looked across the street and saw only a sheet of flame."

"One house was definitely leveled by the blast. The tail end of the plane hit the apartment after striking another home."

"The first house was occupied by George Maholov, his wife, and a teen-aged son and daughter, George and Betty; Bolen said. Windows across the street were

Not Enough Deer Being Bagged

FRANKFORT (U.P.) — Kentucky hunters are not killing enough deer, state Fish and Wildlife Commissioner Minor Clark said Monday.

Clark said the deer population in some areas already reaches capacity the large deer support and additional deer in those areas would only tend to make future specimens small and less virile.

Clark estimated that about 15,000 hunters will take part in the three-day gun season which opens on Dec. 4. These hunters are expected to kill about 2,000 deer.

"This is not enough," Clark said. Biologists' surveys, according to Clark, indicate that the total deer herd in Kentucky numbers about 80,000 to 90,000. He said, "it would be good for the herd if as many as a fourth of the population were harvested in some areas."

The commissioner feels that one reason for the low number of deer killed is that Kentuckians simply are not skilled in hunting deer. It is a new experience for many of them. He contended that with proper caution and skill, each hunter ought to be able to kill at least one deer this season.

Clark said a total of 47 deer were killed and reported to the department by bow and arrow hunters during the archery season which will end on Nov. 19. He said these undoubtedly are more than have not been reported.

Auxiliary Will Operate Shops At Hospitals

Christmas Gift Shops will be operated by the American Legion Auxiliary this year in 174 Veterans Administration Hospitals and in many other hospitals where veterans are under care, Mrs. Earl Nanny, Rehabilitation Chairman of Murray Unit of the Auxiliary, has announced.

At these 80 per cent hospitalized veterans can select gifts to be sent to their families, with the gifts gift-wrapped and postage a donation from the Auxiliary.

"American Legion Auxiliary gift shops bring to the veterans in the hospitals the joy of Christmas giving," explained Mrs. Nanny. "The Auxiliary also gives each veteran a gift for himself, but we feel that they appreciate more the opportunity to send gifts home to their wives and children."

"The gift shops are set up by Auxiliary volunteers in a spare hospital room, decorated, gaily and gift articles attractively displayed. Patients able to leave their beds come to the shop and make their selection of gifts, which the Auxiliary's volunteer workers then wrap and mail for them. Budget patients make their selection from carts loaded with gift articles and wheeled to their bedsides.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars are expended by the Auxiliary each year in buying articles for the gift shops. The shops are operated by state organizations of the Auxiliary and supported by local units throughout the state. The Murray Unit here is helping support gift shops at Outwood.

The South And East Dominate The 1959 All-America Football Team Named By Coaches

By LEO H. PETERSEN UPI Sports Editor

CHEGAGO (U.P.) — The South, with four players and the East, with three, dominate the 1959 All-America football team selected today by the American Football Coaches Association.

Chosen as the finest 11 collegiate players in the land by the 550 coaches who are members of the association were:

Ends — Chris Burford, Stanford and Bill Carpenter, Army.

Tackles — Dan Lanphear, Wisconsin and Don Floyd, Texas Christian.

Guards — Roger Davis, Syracuse and Zeke Smith, Auburn.

Center — Max Baughn, Georgia Tech.

Quarterback — Richie Lucas, Penn State.

Halfbacks — Ron Burton, Northwestern and Billy Cannon, Louisiana State.

Fullback — Charles Flowers, Mississippi.

All are seniors. Cannon, who was the only junior on the coaches' All-America team last season, is the only repeater.

Baughn, Smith, Cannon and Flowers gave the South the strongest representation geographically with the East following with Davis, Lucas and Carpenter, the "lonely end."

The Midwest, which usually dominates most All-America teams, placed only two men — Lanphear and Burton. The Southwest and Far West each won one berth — Floyd and Burford, respectively.

Davis is the giant of the team standing 6-3 and weighing 250. The line averages 215 pounds; Burford at 198 being the only lineman below the 200-pound mark. The backfield averages 194 pounds with Cannon at 208, the heaviest and also the tallest at six, one.

This 1959 All-America team is the 70th annual selection in the tradition originated by Walter Camp at Yale in 1889 and popularized for more than a half century in Collier's Magazine. Camp made the selections until his death in 1925, when he was succeeded by Grantland Rice.

In 1946, the coaches association undertook the responsibility of selecting the All-America team on the basis of a new and impartial principle — rating the leading All-American candidates week by week on the evidence revealed in slow-motion game movies.

UPI Exclusive Distributor

When Collier's discontinued publication in 1956, sponsorship of the coaches' All-America was assumed as a public service by General Mills, United Press International distributes the coaches' All-America team exclusively.

The coaches' association set up a 10-man board, headed by association president Wallace Butts, University of Georgia coach, to make the final selections. It studied the ballots of the 550 coaches at more than 150 colleges. Their votes reflected on-the-field observations, comprehensive scouting reports and expert analysis of game movies.

Serving on the final selection board with Butts were Jack Curlice, Stanford; Leonard Casanova, Oregon; Jess Neely, Rice; William Murray, Duke; Bobby Dodd, Georgia Tech; Hugh Daugherty, Michigan State; Jordan Oliver, Yale; Bud Wilkinson, Oklahoma and Rip Engle, Penn State.

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER WILL STOP HERE—This is a view of the U. S. pavilion for the forthcoming World Agricultural fair in New Delhi, India. The pavilion will have 40 gift domes when finished. President Eisenhower is scheduled to open the pavilion when he visits New Delhi on Dec. 11.

"BADGERS" EDGE "GOPHERS" 11-7 — Minnesota's Arlie Bonstad (26) carries the pig-skin over into the end-zone with Wisconsin's Ronald Steiner (15) close on his heels. Bonstad received the ball on a pass from Minnesota's quarterback Sandy Stephens. Wisconsin rallied to beat Minnesota 11-7 at Minneapolis and thereby became the 1959 Big Ten Champions and probably Big Ten representative in the "Rose Bowl".

Arson Blamed In Two Hotel Fires
PEORIA, Ill. (UP) — Fire touched off by an explosion roared through the Arion hotel today, and for five persons were reported missing. It was the second fire here in 24 hours.

Chief Fire Inspector Al Boulton blamed both fires on arson. "A blaze Sunday destroyed an unoccupied building which was to be opened soon as a Negro hotel, the Parkview Arms."

The buildings were about eight blocks apart on this city's South Side, a neighborhood of transition in terms of white and Negro residents.

The fire at the Arion raged for about four hours before it was brought under control.

Leap to Safety
One woman leaped naked from an upstairs room to safety and two or three other persons jumped from upper rooms. Boulton said. He said about 10 or 12 persons were believed to have been in the building at the time of the fire and most fled through the burning building to safety.

He indicated it was not known how many persons lived there. No records were found, he said, and no one could give an accurate list of names or descriptions.

The hotel in the past had been raided for alleged prostitution activities and other vice violations.

Mrs. Betsy Woodrum, one of the hotel residents, said she had left her four-month-old infant inside the building in the care of another woman, and the child was among those unofficially missing.

The fire inspector said the Arion fire and the other blaze Sunday were "similar."

He said that the fire on the stairs in the Arion Hotel ruins and gasoline tins and steel drums containing a flammable liquid were found in the ruins of the other building.

Sunday's fire destroyed a $400,000 building that once was a 120-bed hospital. Firemen said the building's sprinkler system was found with the valves shut off and connections dismantled.

MURDER BULLET EVIDENCE—Alexander Robillard, 19, weeps in Redwood City, Calif., court, where a mannequin (lower) is used to show paths of the bullets which killed Eugene Duran, a Hillsborough, Calif., policeman, last August. The jurors had the problem of deciding whether the killing was premeditated. Said Robillard tearfully, "I didn't know what to do. I had that . . . gun in my pocket and couldn't throw it away . . . I didn't think, I just fired."

A NEW THRILLER
SHADOW OF GUILT
by PATRICK QUENTIN

CHAPTER 22

"I JUST walked out of Saxby's apartment and kept on walking," Chuck Ryan continued his story to Connie and me. "Then I found I was on Second Avenue in the sixties, passing a bar I used to go to way back when I was at Harvard—The Red Bear on the corner of Sixty-first Street."

"I went on. The barman, Mack, was there. He recognized me. I was the only guy in there at the time. He stood me a drink. After that I had another. I had never stayed there a couple of hours. Then, after that, I went on the town. It seemed the only thing to do. I went from bar to bar."

"I lost all track of time. Then I saw it was almost nine and I remembered my plane to Chicago. I had my ticket in my pocket."

"Flustered though I was, I knew I had to get to the airport. I took a taxi to Idlewild. I'd gotten my timing all wrong. The plane didn't go till eleven. I had over an hour to wait."

"I sat around waiting and . . . well, that's all another matter. That's what I told the police. What they wrote down and I signed."

"He stopped. For a moment he sat looking at us, then a very small, tentative smile moved his lips."

"Wow!" he said, "that's what happened. I guess the D. A.'s going to think I'm pretty much of a jerk, but well, he's got to believe it, hasn't he?"

"He went on looking at us when neither of us said anything. The smile gradually faded."

"But . . ." he said. "Gee, Connie, you're . . ."

"Connie got up and went to him. She stood by his chair, bending over, putting her arms around his shoulders. "Chuck . . . maybe we should have told you at the beginning, I don't know. I just couldn't think of what was best. The District Attorney's already read the statement."

Chuck sprang up. "He's read it and . . .?"

"Trant told us," said Connie. "They're issuing a warrant for your arrest. They're going to charge you formally."

"It was horrible to see the way his face changed. First the color faded from his cheeks, then all his skin turned gray, even his lips took on a grayish tinge."

"But—but that can't be. I'm telling the truth. I . . . He turned his gaze wildly from Connie to me. "You believe me, don't you?"

"Of course I believe you," said Connie passionately. She spun around to me. "And do you, don't you, George?"

"Yes, Chuck," I said. "I believe you."

"Then . . . then—"

"Well do something," Connie cut in. "You mustn't worry. I'll do something. I'll call—"

She broke off at the sound of a key in the door. We all turned to face it. It opened and the cop came in.

"Sorry, folks, but I guess you've got to leave now."

Connie's eyes as she glared at him, were blazing. "I've got to see the District Attorney. Now, right away."

"Sorry, lady. It's too late tonight to contact the D. A."

"Then take me to Lieutenant Trant."

"He ain't here. He went off just about ten minutes ago."

"The cop was watching her with the faintly clinical benevolence of a cop who'd been asked thousands of times by thousands of relatives to be taken to the District Attorney. "Listen, lady, if you've got anything to say or if there's anything you want to know, the man to contact is the kid's lawyer."

"Yes, yes," Connie turned back to Chuck. "Where is he? Where can we find him?"

Chuck felt in the pocket of his jacket and brought out a card. "Without a word he handed it to her."

"There you are, lady," said the cop. "All fixed up. And now, if you please."

He was standing aside, waiting. She glanced at the open door and then ran back to Chuck, throwing her arms around him.

"Chuck darling, I'll make them see I swear I will. She was kissing him, her love for her cop's man."

"Please, please, Chuck, you mustn't."

She tore herself away from him. We went into the corridor. The cop locked the door behind us.

Being away from Chuck was almost as bad as being confronted by him. As the cop started leading us down the corridor, I was still haunted by Chuck's gaunt, stricken face because I couldn't escape the fact that if I told about Ala, they wouldn't arrest him. The moment they knew about Ala, there would be two people, neither of them more or less suspect than the other. They couldn't arrest them both.

But Ala was innocent, too. Hadn't she convinced me of that in those moments at Don Saxby's apartment, just as positively as Chuck had convinced me?

Of course she was innocent and of course I, as her father, her only ally, could do nothing but go on shielding her.

It wasn't as if we'd seen anything at Saxby's which made it impossible for Chuck to be guilty. To betray her would do nothing but be constructive to help him. But Chuck was innocent, too. He was innocent. The words, synchronized with the steady climb
