Sex Education Non-Existent In Many Schools
Experts Discuss How It Can Be Handled

EDITOR'S NOTE: Sex education is often discussed by administrators but an expert says many schools do nothing about it. "Before we can hope to teach to teach youngsters to see the deeper means in sex," he says, "we must see them ourselves." The problem is discussed in this dispatch, fourth of five on the sexual revolution among America's young people.
By PATRICIA MCCORMACK
United Press International
The picture of the girl in the bikini jumps out at you on the advertising billboards as you motor along. It is a part of the Madison Avenue sex sell.
Sex is used to sell everything from automobiles to garbage disposal.
But while we recognize sex everywhere, we try to keep it out of our schools," says Dr. John H. Cooper, consultant on health education for the American Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation, a branch of the National Education Association.
This is blindness. Before we can hope to teach youngsters to see the deeper meanings in sex, we must see them ourselves.
We must ourselves see that sex cannot be kept out of the schools any more than it can be kept out of our lives. Otherwise, we can only remain as we are—the blind leading the blind.
Teach Them Young
Dr. Cooper said any question about impressed sex activity among youngsters should not wait until they are in college.
It should be asked in high school and before," he said.
It is among the elementary school age group where attempts should be started today to teach youngsters frankly and fairly about sex.
Yet I would judge that most schools do not have any kind of planned sex education program at all. And many of those that do treat only the biological aspects of sex—not the responsibilities that go with sex.
Dr. Cooper is one of many leaders in the educational, health and family fields, advocating improved sex education in America.
But not just the youngsters need it. Dr. Harold I. Lief, professor of psychiatry, Tulane-University School of Medicine, recently sounded the alarm for sex education of physicians.
General practitioners and internists are often consulted about sexual problems, and yet in most medical schools and hospitals today he reported, "only residents in population and obstetrics-gynecology are likely to receive an adequate sex education."
Needs Compulsory Causes
Lief hopes to see the day when courses in family life, marriage and sex will be made compulsory in every medical school.
The Journal of the National Association of Women Deans and Counselors devoted an entire issue to sex education and the educator's responsibility.
At the group's annual meeting in Minneapolis, Minn., this month, Barbara P. Van Cleave, dean of women, De Paul University, Chicago, urged members to improve their guidance in sex education of students.
College students are generally more mature, "more straightforward and honest than most adults when it comes to talking about meaningful answers to sexual problems," she said.
Therefore, we deans and counselors will have to shed whatever inhibitions or fears or prudishness we have and face the issue honestly, and openly.
Frank And Open
It is absolutely necessary in our work with students that we be able to see all aspects of sexual conduct; that we be frank and open in our approach to such matters, and that we be understanding, sympathetic, and most importantly, nonjudgmental. Thus we may be helpful, hopefully.

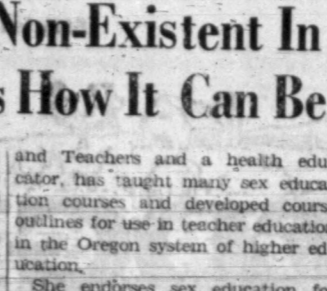

DYE Enamic Ideas

Be A Bit Creative Using Colorful Dye
JOAN O'SULLIVAN
THOSE little packages of tint and dye that deck store counters are good for a great deal more than freshening up faded lingerie with bright new color.
Their possibilities are just about endless. You can employ them for any number of decorative or arts-and-crafts uses.
For example:
Sponge Printing: Air your artistic talent by dipping a sponge in dye, then using it to print or paint a picture or design on unbleached muslin, linen, denim or a square cut from an old sheet.
Mixing The "Paint": Make a concentrated dye solution (1 pkg. of dye to 1 c. hot water for "paint"). Use at least one sponge for each "paint" color.
For interesting effects, cut sponges into different shapes. Print with the edges, sides or the flat surface with a wet lit not dripping sponge.
When the print dries, apply a coat of clear finish to give it a permanent finish.
Make Your Own
Finger-Painting: Mix your own finger-paints by combining 1/2 c. cornstarch and 1/2 c. cold water in a medium saucepan. Add 2 c. hot water and cook over-medium heat, stirring constantly until mixture comes to a boil and is clear.
Remove from heat and blend in 1 envelope unflavored gelatin that has been softened in 1/2 c. cold water. Add 1/2 c. milk soap flakes; stir until mixture is thoroughly dissolved. Makes 2 c.
To color the finger-paint base, mix 1 c. of base and 1 tsp. all-purpose dye in a jar with a spoon.
Wood Work
Finishing Furniture: For a colorful finish that allows the beauty of the wood grain to show through, color unpainted furniture with all-purpose dye.
Brush a concentrated solution (1 pkg. of dye dissolved in 1 pt. of hot water) into the wood. When dry, repeat the application. When the second coat dries, rub it with paste wax, then shellac it.
Dried And Dyed
Dried Flowers: Brighten dried flowers with dye.
While they're drying, hang them upside down in small bunches.
When dried, dip them in a concentrated hot dye solution until the desired depth of color has been obtained. Hang them up while the dye dries.
Ideas For Odds And Ends:
Every home has "discards" that can be decorative.
Old tennis balls, for example, can be dipped in dye, dressed up with yarn hair, button eyes and yarn mouths. Then they can be hung from a cord; hang to make a real bouncing mobile.
Empty wooden thread spools can be dyed in bright colors and strung together to make dolls. Or glue them, one atop the other, to create a totem pole that can be decorated with decorative-looking painted-on or pasted-on features.
as these last two appeal to youngsters. Remember them next time a rainy day shuts the door on outdoor fun and games. Give the youngsters something novel to do and you'll all weather showers in better spirits.

YOU DON'T have to be Picasso to paint-something pretty. This picture was printed with dye-dipped spongy pieces.

SOMETHING old tennis balls—makes something new—a mobile. They're colored with dye, dressed up with yarn hair.

"FORTRESS"—Here's a close-up look at Hainan Island, which lies east of North Viet Nam. Red China is reportedly creating a military base on the 12,000-square-mile island. The location makes it a handy "fortress" for launching naval or air attacks in Viet Nam straits.

Richardson's Catch Brought Memories Back For Terry

By GEORGE C. LANGFORD
UPI Sports Writer

Ralph Terry was thinking back to the seventh game of the 1962 World Series when Bobby Richardson snared Willie McCovey's line drive for the final out to preserve Terry's 1-0 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Terry, who won two games for the Yankees in that series, was the series hero and took home a fat check, a new car and the admiration of millions.

Wednesday night, the 29-year-old Terry shut out his former Yankee teammates on three singles, 4-0, for the Cleveland Indians. There was no extra inn, no new car nor a flood of autograph seekers as a result of the feat, but to Terry: "It has to be one of the happiest times I've ever pitched."

"Makes Terry Happy"
"I tried not to get myself too worked up for this particular game, but this makes me very happy," bleamed Terry, trying without much success to conceal his gleeful heartiness in the team that had confided him to no lesser useful. The Yankee team that to Cleveland last October after he won seven and lost 11 in 1964.

"I think I had my mind made up that I was able to control it, to hold my nerves in. I had to have those men out of the New York Yankees," Terry said, referring to the team that had confided him to no lesser useful. The Yankee team that to Cleveland last October after he won seven and lost 11 in 1964.

The Indians did all the scoring in the first inning against Whitey Ford on a three-run homer by Fred Whitfield his second in two days and a solo blast by Leon Wagner. The victory for Terry was his fourth since only one loss and lowered his earned run average to 3.30.

Jim Bunning Just Got Too Smart Says Manager Mauch

By GEORGE C. LANGFORD
UPI Sports Writer

Jim Bunning just got "too smart," according to his manager, Gene Mauch.

Bunning, the perfect game pitcher of last June 21 and a 19-game winner, lost three of his first four games this season but Mauch claimed he had "great stuff in every game."

"Jim was just over pitching. He knows the hitters' weaknesses and was trying to pitch to those weaknesses instead of relying on his own strength," the Philadelphia Phillies manager said.

Wednesday night Bunning decided to force a lot of the work on the hitters and just ran back and forth. The result was a four-hit shutout of the New York Mets, 1-0, and Bunning showed the game-winning homer in the bottom.

"That was the difference," Mauch explained. "He was loose and was just trying to pitch to them."

Talks Of Homer
Bunning, however, was talking on about the sixth-inning home run he hit off 41-year-old Warren Spahn, the hard luck loser in the 4-0 who also allowed only four hits.

"That's the first homer I've ever hit to right field and it's the first I've had in the National League," Bunning said. "I hit three in the American League and I've yet to hit one at home."

Spahn Koufax pitched the Los Angeles Dodgers into first place in the NL, beating the Cincinnati Reds 4-2. Wade Blasingame hurled 14 innings for Milwaukee and Eddie Mathews doubled home the winning run in the 14th for a 2-1 victory over Houston. Bob Buhl of the Cubs three-hit Pittsburgh for a 3-1 Chicago triumph and San Francisco whipped St. Louis 10-5 in 10 innings.

In the American League the pace-setting Chicago White Sox won a doubleheader from Detroit 4-0 and 4-1. Cleveland downed New York 4-0. Minnesota trounced Baltimore 9-2 and Los Angeles best Boston 6-4.

Goos Distance
Blasingame, a 21-year-old $100,000 bonus baby, allowed only five hits and struck out 12 in going the longest distance of any pitcher this season to even his record at 2-2. The only run he allowed was Rusty Staub's second home run in the seventh.

Joe Torre honored for the Braves' other run in the fifth off starter, Dick Farrell, who locked up with Flanagan in a duel for nine innings.

Farrell allowed just five hits and struck out 12 in going the longest distance of any pitcher this season to even his record at 2-2. The only run he allowed was Rusty Staub's second home run in the seventh.

Ron Fairly and Dick Tracyowski hit home runs in support of a struggling Koufax, who allowed nine hits, struck out eight and hit a batter which forced in a run, en route to his third victory in four decisions. Jim O'Toole suffered his fourth consecutive loss for the Reds.

Increase In Number Of Seior Citizens Is Cause Of Many Problems As Population Grows

THE Aging I
DITOR'S NOTE: America's population is growing by leaps and bounds and, at the same time, life expectancies are increasing. Each by 5,000 persons reach 85. This increase in "senior citizens" poses many problems — for the aging for those who care for them. UPI national reporter Harry Ferguson discusses some of them in this dispatch, first of three on the subject.

By HARRY FERGUSON
 United Press International

WASHINGTON 6P — Every day 200,000 Americans turn age 65. It is safe to say that millions of old people are living longer and enjoying it less.

Not all of them, of course. Many of them adjust smoothly to their new way of life and learn that there is considerable validity in the slogan that the latter years of their lives can be the golden ones. But the hard facts are depressing: There are 3 million elderly families trying to live on less than $3,000 a year. There are nearly 6 million elderly persons struggling along on less than $1,800 a year. That kind of income category that the federal government calls poverty.

There is increased concern by the federal government, including Congress, about old people. It would be nice to say that Congress is acting out of humanitarian instincts, but it wouldn't be true. Congress is concerned because there are about 8 million Americans over 65 and almost all of them are entitled to vote. Any senator or representative who views the plight of the aged with indifference is inviting retirement to private life, and all of them know it.

Recent Development
 In the long history of the United States the federal government's concern about old people is a fairly recent development. It has occurred, for instance, in the adult lifetime of President Johnson. He has insisted that facts be accepted in the annual report of his council on aging — a special group set up to study the problem.

"When I first came to Washington, we were doing nothing. Social Security was not even talked about. Old age, as I understood, was not prevalent and it took the combined efforts of President Roosevelt and Huey Long and a good many others to dramatize the situation where we could really do something for the aged."

"Up to that time most of our elections had been run on the basis of whether you were wet or dry, prohibitionist or anti-prohibitionist, Klan or anti-Klan, or whether you were for the local bridge or against the local bridge. I never heard of Social Security until I was 21 years old. All I heard was whether you were wet or dry for the courthouse group or against them."

Not Enough Oldsters
 The reason President Johnson did not hear anything about old people when he first came to Washington was that in the crucial world of politics there were not enough of them to make a noise loud enough to be heard in the halls of Congress. In this century there has been a startling increase in the number of persons past 65. Like this:

In 1900 there were 3.1 million. In 1940, 9 million. In 1960, 16.6 million. In 1965, 18 million. The projection for 1980 is 24.5 million; for 2050, 32.3 million. Old people not only have increased in great numbers, but they have become organized and social. Politicians are facing up to the fact that you had better worry about the old folks or else.

"In this book, employers show that hiring the handicapped makes good business sense."

The President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped has received 15,000 copies of the pamphlet from its employer committee to promote greater acceptance of workers suffering from a physical or mental condition.

For much of this century medical science concerned itself not with the aged, but with the infant and the adolescent. The result was gratifying: In 1900 the death rate from the communicable diseases of childhood — such things as measles, scarlet fever, whooping cough and diphtheria — was 63.2 per thousand. Today those diseases almost have been conquered and the death rate is negligible.

Get Good Results
 Then the doctors turned their attention to ailments of the adults and the aged, and again the results were good. The average life expectancy of Americans shot upward in a steep curve. In 1900 it was around 48 years. Today it is around 70.

On Aug. 14, 1935, President Roosevelt signed the Social Security law and said it was "a cornerstone in a structure that is being built but is by no means complete." His words were prophetic. Social Security has helped the aged, but it has not solved their problems. Over the years Congress has passed at least eight amendments to the Social Security Act, liberalizing and improving the benefits. It currently has under consideration a bill for medicare under Social Security. But the federal action has not kept pace with the problem, even though most of the states also provide some form of old age assistance.

It is as dangerous to generalize about old people as it is about teenagers, Democrats, Baptists or chorus girls. Many of them are well adjusted and happy. But many of them also are ill, discouraged, hopeless and helpless. To them the ticking of the clock day after day grows louder until it seems to be a bell tolling their doom.

That is why President Johnson has chosen this month of May to try to rally the nation to the problems of the aged. He knows millions of them need more money, but he is equally interested in bestowing up them the priceless ingredients of optimism and hope.

WASHINGTON 6P — There are about 13,000 Americans past the age of 100.

The Social Security Administration has surveyed some of them to try to find out the secret of their longevity. Some of the answers: —I got where I am by avoiding blindes.

—I try to follow the Ten Commandments.

—Always looking at the bright side.

—A swig of wine in the morning and another swig at night.

MAY FACE PADDLING

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. 6P — Illinois school teachers may soon have the legal right to "whale the hell" out of sassy children. A bill authorizing corporal punishment passed through the Illinois House recently by a 154-8 vote.

"If the kid wises off and cusses the teacher, then the teacher should have the right to whale the hell out of his," Rep. Don Moore said in support of the measure.

The suspense adventure by Gordon Ashe A PROMISE OF DIAMONDS

CHAPTER 27
PATRICK DAWLISH looked at Wade Harrison, smiling faintly. "Wade," he said, "I want you to go to Kentucky with Arvo and Sampson. I know you don't have to and I can't make you, but I'm sure it's the best way."
"You could send Arvo and Bukka," Harrison said.
"I can't go on without a South African policeman with me, and you know it," Dawslish said. "You and I are here by our courtesy."
Harrison echoed, "Courtesy?"
"It's the courtesy of our expression in his eyes was nasty. Then, to Dawslish's surprise, he said, "I'll be back with a helicopter. Don't make any mistake, Dawslish. One of the people you're janded with smashed those radio transmitters and that means they are hand in glove with whoever flew up that truck."
He looked at Jacob Parkin and Jeff Mason with cold accusation, out of a man's face. Even he said to Dawslish, "It's you, sweetheart. I will personally cut your throat."
Dawslish said to Parkin, "Do you think Harrison's right, Major?"
He was standing with Dawslish and Mason by the side of the truck, at first they went on the desert.
"He could be," Dawslish said. "That makes odds against you."
Dawslish said tightly, "Three to two? I've known a lot worse."
"This is all nonsense." Mason put in, "I'm the major suspect of one of us, he wouldn't come along with us."
"I don't think you know the major," Dawslish said, "arrogant. When he says he's had worse odds, you can be sure he's telling the truth."
"There's another problem," Dawslish said, as if it had just occurred to him.
"What is it?"
"I've people in one truck."
"There's plenty of room," Parkin said. "Do you want me to drive?"
"Will you?"
"Of course," Parkin sounded as if he meant it.
He was smiling to himself as started off. Bukka sat beside Dawslish and Dawslish were in the cushioned seats on the back of the truck. Dawslish was on the rock with a blanket folded over Dawslish began to doze. She lolled away against Dawslish, and his arm seemed to long to change places with him. For greater comfort he slid his arm round her shoulder.

Sex Is Used To Sell Everything From Garbage Disposers To Automobiles; Hinders Education

EDITOR'S NOTE: A mother in Tacoma, Wash., criticized permissiveness. Another in El Paso cited the lack of parental discipline. Parents discuss the increase in sexual activity, and the cause, among the nation's youth in this dispatch, third of five.

BY PATRICIA MCCORMACK United Press International

A girl's calendar hung on the bedroom wall of an 11-year-old boy was his "advanced thinking" parents' way of helping to teach him that sex is not dirty. The calendar episode was cited during a Child Study Association of American workshop on sex. The experts participating could only agree that the act reflected the parents' views of sex. They could not agree on the approach. A mother ordered her teenage son out of the house when she came home and discovered him in bed with a girl. He has not returned. That parents have different ways of handling the sex problem among youth was further noted by a psychologist participating in a workshop at the annual meeting of the American Orthopsychiatric Association. He told of two middle-age women who are near suicide because their teen-age daughters are pregnant. The boys involved want to marry the girls—but they aren't. The mothers approve of or desire as husbands for their daughters.

Ho-Hum Attitude
Other parents take a ho-hum attitude. Police Chief Donald K. Pearman, of Half Moon Bay, Calif., told a group of parents that a patrolling officer can find 8- or 10-teen-age couples engaged in sexual activity any time of day or night along the beach. "We'll call parents," he said, "and say we have this or that minor in custody. Many just say—'Oh, send him on home.' They just can't be bothered." Concern and attitudes of parents run the gamut of emotion, according to a survey by the National Congress of Parents and Teachers. The survey, conducted by the PTA, magazine, drew responses on morals of teen-agers from presidents of PTA units nationwide. Said a mother from Tacoma, Wash.: "The easy way to raise a kid is to let him decide for himself. This permissiveness that dominated our child psychology for so many years has allowed parents to abdicate their authority. Thank heaven, the pendulum is swinging back." There was disagreement on the extent of teen-age immorality. A North Miami, Fla., mother said basically the contemporary teen-ager is the same as the teenager of 40 years ago—except that he has a little more freedom and a little less responsibility.

Opinions Differ
One president in Detroit said there has been no increase in immorality. But another in the same city was certain there has been an increase. Sixty per cent of those participating in the survey believe immorality among teen-agers is on the upswing. A Rochester, N. Y., mother blamed the adults who don't have the courage to say "No" or "Wait" to their babies as well as to their teen-agers. She also scolded parents who encourage a market for cosmetic-surgery and "adult" dolls for six-year-olds. Also criticized were parents whose "supreme discipline is directed toward playing the game of getting something for nothing, whose supreme delight is in some form of self-indulgence, who hold more and more responsibility for their children's welfare onto the schools and community agencies."

Time and again, the PTA presidents repeated what an El Paso, Tex., leader said: "The primary reason for teen-age immorality is lack of parental discipline." "Teen-age immorality spread by young people wanting too much too soon," said a Louisville, Ky., mother. "Parents foster this notion when they say—my kids are going to have it better than I did." Pay The Price
The price of parents not caring or expressing enough discipline is reflected by the statistics of unruly mothers, teen-age marriages and venereal disease. A letter in the files of the national headquarters of the Young Women's Christian Association (YWCA) tells of the heartbreak. "The writer desires her pregnancy forced her into an early marriage and out of school. Her husband also was a drop-out. She expected high adventure and romance. Instead, she experienced poverty, hunger, physical pain, anguish and spiritual suffering. She said she wrote the letter in an attempt to caution other teen-agers against 'making my mistake.'" In a subsequent letter, the teenager reported she had gone through a divorce and was once again living with her parents. "If only the others would listen to me," she said. Next: Sex education.

By United Press International
"The crux of the dilemma has always been and still is, that youth themselves are expected both to mix freely males with females in enjoyable social situations, and at the same time to exercise sexual restraint," says Winston W. Sherman, associate secretary, American Association of University Professors. Writing in the Journal of the National Association of Women Deans and Counselors, Sherman continued: "This pleasurable and beneficial association was expected to solve the contending cultural values of the sinfulness of sex and the delights of romanticism. "The effective control of sexual expression primarily by way of the personal restraints of young people is almost a unique expectation in the history of culture."

DOWNTOWN in Moline, Ill., two employees of the Modern Printing Co. keep a wary eye on the rising flood of the Mississippi River, while in East Moline a fireman patrols a residential area in a boat, looking for looters.

PRETTY BIG, THIS RIPRAP—An Air Force helicopter unloads an auto body into the Rock Creek levee break north of Quincy, Ill., which is being eaten away (lower) by the flooding Mississippi River. They also dropped old refrigerators.

FARM BUREAU in Action

Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman testified before a House Agriculture committee that he had a good deal of respect for the operation of the market system, but if prices were allowed to go very far above the support level, you "can't get farmers into the program." He was, of course, referring to the Administration's "voluntary" wheat and feed grain programs.

The Secretary made this interesting observation in reporting there was "a strong interest in resulting by law a higher minimum price for sales of Commodity Credit Corporation grain stocks in the open market." He further stated that a number of bills before the Congress would raise the minimum from 105 per cent of the loan rate to a range of 115 to 125 percent.

Secretary Freeman said that the USDA shares the stated objectives of these proposals that is, "to make maximum use of market forces in guiding production and of private market facilities in handling commodities and minimize CCC activities in marketing commodities."

However, he pointed out that in addition to its concern with the operation of the free market, the USDA "has the responsibility to operate the feed grain and wheat programs as effectively as possible for the producer at a minimum cost to the taxpayer. This can't be done if we are required to hold stocks from the market to obtain prices so far above the loan levels that we can't get farmers into the program."

It's not news to farmers that the Secretary of Agriculture's purpose in dumping government surplus stocks on the market was to break the market price and force producers into his "voluntary" programs, but it's the first time such an admission has been made. As the Secretary told the Congressional committee, he would like to permit the market to operate, but he explains, "We must consider the producer and the consumer as well as the trade when we determine the ground rules for operating our commodity programs."

As an old saying might be paraphrased, "When a producer has friends like the Secretary of Agriculture, who needs enemies?"
