New comes Mrs. Dana McClure with a nice note and a clipping from the Press-Scimitar, Memphis, Tennessee, Eidon Roark's column.

Mr. Roark tells the story of Mr. Dink, a dog which was a cross between a poodle and something else.

Seems that a family had the dog, had to move away and gave the dog to someone else because they couldn't keep him.

A good story by Mr. Roark and thanked to you Mrs. McClure for the nice note and the clipping.

Dogs have always held a special place in the hearts of people.
They give all the love they have and ask little in return.

Laird Gets Hard Time
On The ABM

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Situation: Russian missiles approaching over northern Hemisphere. Urgent call to the White House. More missiles appear.
"Who have three minutes left.
Mr. President, says the military commander. "Which button do I press; The antiballistic missile or our 1,054 Minute man ICBMs?"

The panic button, "came a low voice from the committee table. It was Sen. J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., muttering behind a green eyeshade.
"Laughter from the spectator's gallery — and from Sen.
Albert Gore, D-Tenn., too.
The television camera panned in on a grim, Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird, his eyes narrowed to gray slits after a two-day Senate inquisition under glaring lights.
"This is a deadly serious question, Mr. Chairman," the ex-congressman snapped. "It is not any laughing matter. It gets right down to the heart of the matter. If I were sitting in the position of the President, I would like to be able to have an ABM to launch and not have to push the button for an offensive strike."
Gore, chairman of the Senate foreign relations' disarmament subcommittee, which conducted the antiballistic missile system ABM hearing on national television, posed the hypothetical situation to Laird.
With that exchange, one of scores in a five-hour session that alternated between high comedy and deadly seriousness, the latest issue in the Senate debate over the ABM was joined.
New Argument
Laird's argument was a new one. He said the Safeguard system not only would protect the American power to retaliate against a surprise attack but would give the President "flexibility" in determining how to respond.
Gore ridiculed the argument.
"No president would push the ABM button rather than the Minuteman button once the missiles started falling," he contended.
Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., said there would be more than adequate time to put U.S.
ICBMs into the air after U.S. radar picked up the incoming missiles, and thus there was no need to protect the U.S. deterrent.
Gore said the United States should let the Soviet Union know in no uncertain terms that "if they launch a missile against us, we're launching a massive attack against them."

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK UPI - Garson, Hamill & Co. observes that the market is responding to a number of factors in addition to continuing uncertainty about the impact of tight money.

Also influential is increased concern about peace prospects in Vietnam in view of stepped-up Communist military activity, additional news from Washington suggesting a hostile attitude toward complete mergers, and uncertainties created by the French monetary crisis.

Regardless of how the market as a whole behaves, the firm points out, a few stocks may well have already bottomed out and others will do so shortly.

Reynolds & Co. says depressed blue chips seem to offer a good outlet for funds in this uncertain market atmosphere. Many of them have been firm recently, it observes, and those that have declined have done so at a rate slower than that of last year's performance leaders.

Hertz, Warner & Co. says that while the near term outlook remains "clouded," the longer term "measured by sharp increases on the demand side for securities," continues attractive.

The company suggests that traders keep moderate cash reserves for participation in rallies and advises longer term investors to keep their portfolios under constant review so as to take advantage of these rallies to eliminate "more vulnerable" issues.

EXTENDING POLICY WASHINGTON (UPI) - The State Department is extending for six months its policy of stamping U. S. passports invalid for travel to mainland China, Cuba, North Korea and North Vietnam.

Officials said the fact that the restriction was renewed for only six months instead of one year was indication the department already grants exemptions in some cases, such as those of newsmen, scientists and persons traveling on humanitarian missions.

IN CLEVELAND, a 45-year-old factory worker carried $100,000 liability coverage, $2,000 medical payments, full coverage comprehensive, $100 deductible collision and towing insurance on his 1968 Impala, which he drove to work daily.

He carried the same coverage, minus collision, on his wife's 1965 car. Annual bill was $277.80 this year. Payroll deduction plan dropped it to $222.

Not all reactions to the program have been so positive. Some insurance agents and brokers have attempted to block the spread of payroll deduction insurance programs to their states. These opponents see the plan as a threat to their economic well-being.

The plan is available in Arizona, California, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nevada, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Washington and Wisconsin now.

Crop Was Useful And High Quality

1968 Dark Fired Tobacco Crop in Western District Broke Records For High Prices

The 1968 Dark Fired Tobacco crop in the Western District broke all records for high prices and was generally regarded by buyers as one of the most useful high quality crops produced in recent years.

The fact that about one million additional pounds of leaf were produced would seem to be cause for optimism on the part of tobacco growers in the Western District, the largest export outlet for fired tobacco.

However, representatives of these growers feel that, although the outlook has brightened somewhat, a further increase in production is needed to assure adequate supplies.

As shown below the consumption of Dutch smoking tobacco has consistently increased in recent years. Another significant factor is the virtual elimination of the Western Dark Fired Tobacco Growers Association, the "Pool," as a supplier of leaf for the Dutch smoking trade.

For the second consecutive crop year the Western Pool has taken no tobacco under loan, something without precedent in dark fired tobacco. Furthermore, during the past eleven years Western Pool stocks have declined by some fifteen million pounds.

Historically the Pool has been for the trade a ready source of tobacco to supplement auction purchases out of current crops. For all practical purposes this supply has been eliminated due to low production and increased foreign consumption. As a result 1968 was the fourth consecutive year that overall dark fired disappearance exceeded production.

Significantly, the four year cumulative disappearance at the end of 1968 amounted to approximately eight million pounds - slightly more than one entire crop at present production levels. Faced with this situation Netherlands manufacturers show continued concern over the supply of dark fired leaf.

Since World War II the Netherlands has been the largest user of dark fired tobacco. It is a densely populated industrialized, prosperous nation and the consumption of this type tobacco shows every sign of increasing in the future.

The great majority of fired leaf is used in "Shag" - an extremely fine cut type of roll-your-own cigarette tobacco that rivals ready made cigarettes in popularity. The two kinds of shag are the all dark fired type and the half and half, in which dark fired leaf is blended in equal proportions with other types of leaf. Use of both types is growing. One reason is economic - one roll more smokes from a pouch of shag than he gets from a package of ready made cigarettes of equal price. Most of the Dutch prefer the unusual taste and aroma which is uniquely distinctive of fired tobacco grown in this section of Kentucky and Tennessee. Characteristics of soil and climate are responsible, but most tobaccoists feel that the real reason for the flavor is the curing. Techniques of fire curing learned over many generations combined with the use of native hardwoods, hickory, oak and gum, have produced a type of leaf that growers in other areas have not been able to duplicate with any real success.

As shown in the following table total production of dark fired leaf has been fairly stable with production and consumption each year maintaining a good balance.

For the past three years, however, total consumption has exceeded production to the extent that reserve stocks held by dealers Association are being rapidly depleted. Adequate reserve stocks are vital to a tobacco manufacturer since before it is manufactured tobacco must go through an aging process which matures the flavor. For example, tobacco bought in 1965 possibly may not be manufactured in the final product until 1972.

The consumption trend in Holland in the recent past along with future projections is high consumption. It brings into focus the growing seriousness of the production gap, as shown in the following table.

The projection of consumption for the next three years makes it obvious that, if the present production trend continues, it will be almost impossible to supply this flourishing demand. A further complication is the fact that all of the dark fired tobacco grown in this District is suitable for the Dutch smoking requirements. This tobacco must be thicker bodied, well fired and brown in color as opposed to the heavier bodied, darker leaf preferred by the domestic manufacturers. Both varieties are needed in a balanced production for the year, but Dutch buying interests claim that this year's small crop falls by a good margin to produce the volume required to maintain sufficient stocks.

Marketing of the 1968 crop in the Western District (Mayfield and Murray) ended Friday, February 14, with slightly over seven million pounds sold at a record high price of $4.50 per hundred weight. Representatives of the major Netherlands manufacturers in this area state that a ten million pound production level is necessary to supply their market as well as the other domestic and export outlets. They pointed out that such an increase in production would not mean that the prices paid for next season's crop would decline from this year's level, provided the quality was good.

Just Who Did Daley Have In Mind?

By DICK WEST
 WASHINGTON — A minor mystery has developed over Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's choice for last year's presidential nomination.

In a put-down of Hubert H. Humphrey, Daley said someone else would have made a stronger candidate—someone with the "name of a former president."

It was widely assumed that Daley was referring to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. But then along came Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., with a rebuttal for that theory.

Did Not Support Kennedy
 Ribicoff said Daley did not support Kennedy at any time before, during or after the Democratic convention at Chicago.

Whom, then, did Daley have in mind?

I posed this question to a group of political pundits the other day and it led to some rather interesting speculation.

"I doubt that Daley was talking about John Eisenhower," one pundit said. "The last time I checked, Ike's son was a Republican like his daddy."

"That's right," another pundit said. "And I think we can rule out Rep. Robert Taft Jr., R-Ohio, for the same reason."

"I doubt he was referring to Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. either," the third pundit said. "Young Frank has more or less retired from politics."

And so has Sherman Adams, the first pundit said.

"Wait a minute," the second pundit said. "We are only assuming that Daley meant the last name of a former president. Maybe he meant the first name. In that case, Abe Ribicoff himself could have been it."

"A Good Point"
 "A good point," the first pundit said. "Or it could have been someone like Truman Capote, the famous author."

"Truman Capote is a bit too intellectual for Daley," the third pundit said. "A better guess would be Roosevelt Grier, the football player who was Bobby Kennedy's bodyguard."

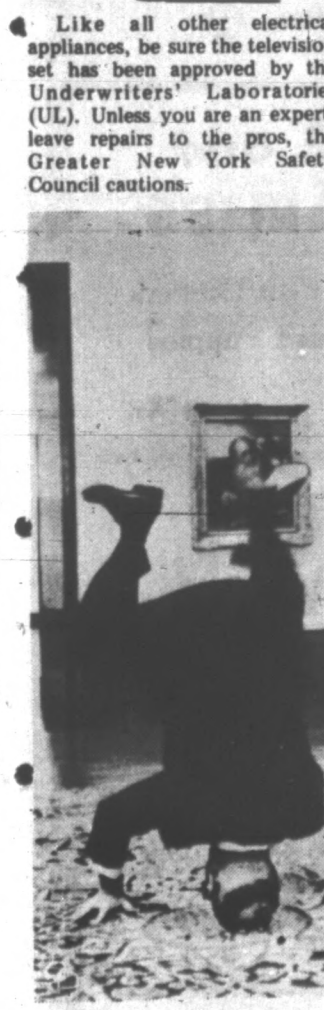

"That won't hold water," the second pundit said. "Roosevelt Grier was too closely identified with the student groups that were tormenting Daley at the convention."

"I agree," the first pundit said, "and the same thing goes for the Jefferson Airplane. Daley would never have supported a rock music group for the nomination."

"Well, then, how about Cary Grant?" the third pundit said. "He's a big favorite with Daley's generation."

"It's possible," the first pundit said. "But I think we have been overlooking the most logical bet—a man who shares Daley's hard line attitude toward demonstrators. I'm convinced the man Daley had in mind was J. Edgar Hoover."

Like all other electrical appliances, be sure the television set has been approved by the Underwriters' Laboratories (UL). Unless you are an expert, leave repairs to the pros, the Greater New York Safety Council cautions.

TV CAMEOS: Greg Morris A Nice Guy Who Won't Finish Last

Now and then on "Mission," Greg Morris gets a little violent and does some karate like this, but mostly he's the "resident electronics genius" who runs the awesome gadgets.

By MEL HEIMER
 THE SUBJECT was show-business stars, and Greg Morris, who admits candidly that he wants to be one, meditated and then shook his head, no-no, when I suggested a certain black actor was the next big star on the horizon and, possibly, the first genuine black matinee idol.

"I don't think so," he said, "and I'll tell you why. I've met a lot of stars over the last few years—and I've never come across one who, basically, was a no-good pineapple. The man you mention doesn't seem to be deep down, a nice guy... and for that reason, I don't believe he'll really make it big."

If Greg's reasoning is sound, he at least has one giant step toward stardom. For three years now the resident "electronics genius" on CBS-TV's "Mission Impossible," Morris is good-looking, industrious, intelligent, talented—and, at least seemingly, a nice guy. Few people in the business have anything but good to say of him.

ACTUALLY, TV's gain is basketball's loss. In Greg's younger days, he enrolled at the University of Iowa, to play under noted coach Eusebio O'Connor and then move on to the programs and later, perhaps, coaching. But O'Connor was killed in an auto accident after Morris' season of playing on the freshman team, and Greg's interest dwindled. "So I decided to be an actor," he said—and despite a detour or two, he has zeroed in on that goal from then on.

Still muscular and fit—he goes 6 feet 2½ inches and weighs 190, being bigger than he seems on video—Morris continues playing ball in his spare time. He remembers with a smile that he played in a benefit game between the "Mandarin" and "Mission Impossible" casts, and after 10 minutes, had gone at it so hard that he became sick to his stomach "and I was the only one there who was in halfway decent condition."

AT IOWA, Greg got his own radio and TV shows on campus, but after his freshman year he came to New York City for a quick visit and became friendly with Frederick O'Neal, the Actor's Equity president, who over the years has helped his career. His first professional break, however, came in Seattle. He was working as a waiter when he got the Polter part in a road company of "A Raisin in the Sun" at the Cirque Theatre, and after that he played the same part in the Long Beach, Calif., production of the play.

Morris worked steadily after that. "I've been a professional for eight years," he said, "and for all but six months, my family has lived comfortably." The family includes wife Leona and

Wall Street Chatter

NEW YORK UPI - Hayden Stone Inc. says the market decline has not yet hit bottom, adding that "no major base has yet reformed from which a substantial recovery could take place at this time." The firm further notes that public participation in trading is relatively small and that the future action of the industrials, especially their ability to reform a valid base, should be watched very carefully. A low volume trading market holding in a narrow range would be most constructive over the intermediate term, the firm says, adding that investment considerable switching has been going on, with attention increasing to generous yield stocks with low price-earnings multiples.

E. F. Hutton says that the market's relatively mild reaction to the prime rate boost indicates that when it has already declined in expectation of some news development, it is not likely to decline again on realization of that development. In the market's rebound following the prime rate announcement, the more volatile glamor issues received the bulk of trader interest, the firm points out. Though declines outnumbered advances, the gains were obviously larger than the losses. A somewhat more positive market approach over the very near term would seem to be warranted, the firm says, although the market could hardly be said to be out of the woods.

Bache & Co. feels that the phase of precipitous decline in the market is apparently ended. "Continued light volume suggests that institutional investors are holding pretty much to a sideline position, but cash continues to build in institutional offers," the company says.

Standard & Poor's sees little basis for a major rally in the current market situation. "While technical rebounds will afford some profit opportunities for nimble traders, the average investor is counseled to maintain cash reserves," it says.

Hillman Ferry Campground To Open April 1

Hillman Ferry, one of the two major family campgrounds in Land Between the Lakes, will open April 1. Hillman Ferry is located on the Kentucky Lake shoreline approximately four miles south of Barkley Canal, just off The Trace (Highway 453). Rushing Creek Campground, located just across the Kentucky-Tennessee line on the Kentucky Lake shoreline, will open May 1. The two campgrounds have both tent and trailer camping sites, modern central service buildings, electrical outlets, playgrounds, boat launching ramps, grills and picnic tables, and drinking water. Camping is on a first-come-first-served basis. In addition to the family campgrounds there are 20 lake access areas in Land Between the Lakes that provide limited facilities for campers, boaters, and picnickers.

National Wildlife Week

National Wildlife Week, March 16 through 22, focuses attention this year to the increasing loss of natural habitat across America. The theme, "Provide Habitat—Places Where Wildlife Live," is very timely, according to Paul Sturm, Supervisor of Wildlife Management in Land Between the Lakes. "We cannot keep using up all of our open spaces, woodlots, and shorelines for subdivisions, highways, and shopping centers without losing wildlife which need natural areas to survive," said Mr. Sturm. "Of course, we must develop our land and water resources, but in such a manner that will not result in the destruction of the flora and fauna of these areas. One of the major objectives of the Land Between the Lakes demonstration is the integration of conservation principles into the overall recreational development of the area," Sturm reported.

With the observance of National Wildlife Week, it's an ideal time to visit Land Between the Lakes and enjoy the many hiking trails and back-country drives. One of the most interesting hiking jaunts in Land Between the Lakes is the two and one-half mile trail that winds its way around Hematite Lake in the Conservation Education Center. The trail rambles through a wooded area that abounds in a variety of wildlife and wild flowers. One of the highlights of the trail is a boardwalk that extends over a marshy woodland at the head of Hematite Lake. The boardwalk has a loop that extends out into the lake where hikers can observe birds, deer, and other wildlife.

With the last of the Canada geese wintering in Land Between the Lakes heading north and the appearance of large numbers of robins, spring can't be far behind in the twin lakes area. Fishermen, boaters, and picnickers will be interested in the seven new lake access areas constructed in Land Between the Lakes during the past year, bringing the total to twenty. Twin Lakes, Yale, Sugar Bay, and Redd Hollow on Kentucky Lake and Shelly Hill, Taylor Bay, and Kuttawa Landing on Lake Barkley are the recently completed lake access areas. The lake access areas have picnic tables and grills, boat launching ramps, and chemical toilets. Twin Lakes, Boswell Landing, and Cravens Creek have drinking water available, and wells will soon be completed at Yale and Sugar Bay.

Fishing

Two days of warm sun prompted many fishermen to drag their tackle "out of the moth balls" this weekend, and Kentucky Lake produced some of the best bass fishing in the twin lakes area since last fall. Several good strings of bass were reported from the Blood River, Ginger Creek, Rushing Creek, Anderson Creek, and Sugar Bay areas of Kentucky Lake. Many of the bass are being taken on floating-diving type lures along submerged stumps and steep, rocky banks. Crappie were also reported being caught in the Jonathan Creek area on minnows at 10 to 15 feet along the old creek and river channels. Crappie are also being taken in Lake Barkley by jigging minnows from 3 to 6 feet deep along the brush and stick-ups near the main channel of the creeks and lake. Scattered catches of bass are also being taken in Barkley by jigging big minnows. The water temperature ranges from 46 to 48 degrees in both Kentucky Lake and Lake Barkley, and the water is clear to murky.

Re-discover KENTUCKY

How To Catch Those Catfish

Frankfort, Ky., (Special - Catfish fishing is a lot of fun and will furnish some of the very best meat for the table. This is the word from the fisheries experts of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

Many summer vacationers, besides fishing for other species, also ply their skills in setting out a trotline. This is exceptionally exciting to youngsters who may not be too proficient in other forms of fishing.

A trotline, under new regulations of the Department of Fish and Wildlife, so far as the sport fishermen are concerned, may have on it no more than 50 hooks which may not be placed closer together than 18 inches. No more than two trotlines may be fished by the holder of a sport fishing license and these lines must be run every 24 hours and all fish must be removed. Then, at the end of the fishing session, all trotlines must be removed from the waters. These lines, when baited with small shad, crawfish, minnows, stink bait or small chunks of liver, will take many a catfish.

It's best to bait the line late in the evening and then run in the early morning. However, if the catfish are biting good, then it would pay to run the line more often since catfish will often twist off the hook if allowed to stay too long on the line.

When still fishing for catfish, the general rule is to fish the bottom. Many fishermen choose to use soft-shelled crawfish, gobs of worms or nightcrawlers, small shad or even stepped-on fresh minnows for bait.

In larger rivers, as well as in warm water areas below the dams of Kentucky and Barkley Lakes, catfish are harvested in limitless numbers below both locks and dams. It is in such areas that catfish are found in vast numbers at peak times during summer and all that is needed is to get the bait down near or on the bottom and wait for that tug.

Catfish are quite game and will give a good account for themselves in still or moving water. A sharp knife and a pair of pliers will serve well to remove the tough skin of the catfish and larger catfish may be filleted or cut into steaks. They should be washed well to remove excess oil and blood; seasoned to taste, rolled in corn meal and dropped into hot shortening. Remove when brown and serve with corn bread or hush puppies - a treat fit for any king.

Fishing Report

FRANKFORT, Ky. UPI - With water temperatures up 2 to 3 degrees better catches of croppie and white bass are reported by the State Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

Barkley Lake - Good catches of big croppies are reported at stickups on minnows at six to eight feet. Black bass are fair by the same method. Bluegill catches are improved. Below the dam-black bass are good by casting from the bank.

Kentucky Lake - Croppie are good in the Blood River area and fair in rest of lake. Black bass are very good in the same area. Below the dam - croppie are good and white bass fair on minnows and doligs.

Herrington Lake - Black bass are good by casting dollies with lizard trailers. Trout are fair in hands of creeks in lower section.

FISHING TIMETABLE

Fish bite every day in Kentucky. However, if you are looking for a particular species, then there's a "best time" for that fish. Therefore, this calendar. You can tell at a glance when a certain species should be most active.

|                      |  |
|----------------------|--|
| Jigging (black bass) | January through April in all lakes                                     |
| Walleye              | Closed season in February and March; best months, April and November   |
| Sucker & buffalo     | February and March in most small streams                               |
| White bass           | April especially in Dale Hollow, Cumberland, Herrington, Dewey         |
| Croppie              | April & May, everywhere  |
| Jump Fishing         | May, July, Oct., everywhere  |
| Best for Casting     | April, May, & Oct., everywhere   |
| Tops for Bluegill    | May & June, especially in farm ponds                                   |
| Musky                | March, April, October, November, Green, Barren, Kinicoonick and Tygart |
| Rainbow Trout        | Year 'round  |

This year about 115,000 people won't listen to Smokey.

Don't be one of them.

Remember, only you can prevent forest fires.

Dear Abby Jealous Daughter Threatens Romance

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have been a widow for three years and have two teen-aged children. A daughter and a son. A few months ago my husband's best friend whose wife passed away last year started calling on me...

SEEN & HEARD

Quotes From The News

WASHINGTON - Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower, commenting on her life since the former president suffered a congestive heart failure last Saturday: "I live from day to day, from hour to hour."

Long Sperring TOKYO (UPI) - A medal struck in Japan to commemorate the Nobel Prize in literature had a spelling error. The manufacturer said an employee apparently goofed when he called the Swedish embassy to ask how Swedes spelled "literature."

New Landmark SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) - A new landmark has been added to the San Francisco skyline - a huge ship's wheel attached to the 40-foot pier. The "sign post" is erected in the heart of Fisherman's Wharf, one of the city's busiest tourist spots.

Other headquarters at Dong Tam, 45 miles southwest of Saigon, and into a base of the 25th Infantry Division near Tay Ninh City, 80 miles northwest of the capital.

FLAG PRESENTATION - The American Legion Post 26, through the cooperation of Congressman Frank A. Stubblefield, presented a United States Flag to the J. U. Kevill Center to be used in dedication ceremonies Friday. The flag has been flown over the United States Capitol according to J. George Stewart, architect of the Capitol. The American Legion furnishes flags to new buildings such as this. Pictured at the Kevill Center are John Redden, director of center; Gene Gilliam, president of the Kevill Board; and Virgil Gilliam of the American Legion Post 26.

Historic Watering Spot ST. THOMAS, Virgin Islands (UPI) - Water Island, a 500-acre island in St. Thomas Harbor, is famous as a watering spot for everyone from pirates to millionaires. Now a poah resort, it got its name from pirates who used to land there for supplies of fresh water.

DEAR ABBY: I have been living in an empty marriage [in many ways] for many years. We put on a good show, but are strangers who cannot even discuss our problems with each other, so we keep very busy, each with our separate lives. For some time I have been thinking of making a break, hoping to find a truly meaningful relationship. Am I crazy for considering giving up possessions and a comfortable place in society?

Well, we've had, what a mess. So we picked all of this stuff up and threw away about four fifths of it. There's more room than you can shake a stick at now. If the other shelf will just fall now, we'll have it made.
