doesn't fit in? By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Our son just came home from Viet Nam and announced his engagement to a girl he went with before he went away. She comes from high society people.

Her mother asked me for a list of people on our side we wanted invited to the wedding. My problem is we have a lot of relatives we never see except at weddings and funerals and some of them wouldn't fit in very well with such high-class folks. Also, this is going to be a dress-up type church wedding, and I hate to put some of them on the spot to spend all that money getting dressed up just for that one day.

Is there some way I can invite those who can afford it and will fit in, and leave the others out? I hate to hurt any SAN ANTONIO feelings

DEAR SAN: Invite them all, and those who want to come will find a way to cut the mustard. Everyone has some relatives who won't "fit in." But don't worry, there will be plenty on the other side who won't fit in either, and they'll fit nicely with your misfits.

DEAR ABBY: I am 11 years old and I am ashamed of my mother. She tells the biggest lies, and she gossips a lot on the telephone. She will talk to one Jady and pretend to be her best friend, when she is really her worst enemy. How can a person be so two-faced and evil and then tell me if I tell a lie CHARLOTTE, N. C. God will punish me?

DEAR CHARLOTTE: Do as your mother SAYS, not as the does, Honey. Perhaps your mother will read this and realize that while "example" is not the only teacher, it is one of the most powerful.

DEAR ABBY: I have been asked to be a bridesmaid and am very excited about it, but I am also worried. You see, I want very much for my boyfriend to be invited to this wedding, and so far my girlfriend [the bride] hasn't said anything about it.

The invitations haven't gone out as yet so I don't know whether she plans to invite my boyfriend or not, but I am praying she is.

Is there some subtle way I can find out? And if she isn't planning on having my boyfriend, how can I get him invited without seeming bold? BRIDESMAID

DEAR BRIDESMAID: A bride asks her closest friends to be her bridesmaids, and obviously you are one of hers, so come right out and TELL her that you hope she doesn't overlook your friend.

DEAR ABBY: My husband was married briefly before married me. I understand he was very much in love with his first wife who left him for another man. A year later we met and fell in love. We married after a short courtship and now we have one child. I love him with all my heart, and I know he loves me, but he insists on doing something that is eating away at my heart. Whenever we meet new friends, he always finds a way to mention to them that he was married before. Why does he do this? Is he proud of the fact? It was such a short marriage, and they had no children. I don't see why it is necessary to even bring it up.

If you can explain why he does this, you will be helping me tremendously. Thank you. HURT

DEAR HURT: Only your husband can answer that question. Ask him. And while you're on the subject, ask him for one small favor. To keep quiet about it in the future.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "UPSET AND DISGUSTED IN BROWNSVILLE, TEXAS": Perhaps your "reliable" sources are not as reliable as you think they are. Don't make any judgments until you have talked with your father. Ask your mother if it is true that a woman telephoned her to inquire as to why she divorced your father. You could be "upset and disgusted" for nothing.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a persona, reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.
