My dear Sir

In answer to your query as to the hour of our dinner (which I ought to have given in my last note) it is half past five, but to give you more time - and that you may not be hurried in your journey it shall be six o'clock on the day in which we hope for the pleasure of seeing you here. There is a road by which you may come here without passing through Rex bridge which would shorten your distance two or three miles but I did not mention it as it is rather intricate and not easily to be found - though if you should his success in Ireland and the interesting conference he had with the Archbishop Magee; it is highly creditable and does honor to both parties - Mr. West is indeed an able instrument raised up by Providence to promote the pious cause of the good Bishop Lechase, who will greatly rejoice to have him return to his labours in Ohio.

Ah! the excellent Mr. Hoare - he is gone to receive the bright reward of a devout and faithful Christian; he is numbered among them "who die in the Lord" and his pious works will be remembered - as his loss will be greatly felt by numerous Relatives and Friends, by religious and charitable Institutions and by very many of the Poor and Needy, — such a man is a loss to the World indeed! — but what inexpressible gain is the re-moral, to him — from a world of sin and sorrow to the blessed state of rest and peace among the Spirits of just men made perfect before the Throne of His great Redeemer in glory everlasting — blessed be his memorial.

Most kindly and affectionately my dear Sir your humble friend Gambier.
