INTRODUCTION

Prophecy by Cambridge Offline Dictionary means a statement that says what is going to happen in the future, especially one which is based on what people believe about a particular matter rather than existing facts. Etimologically, prophecy is a word from Greek. It comes from word "Pro" which means before or pre, and word "Phanai" which means tell. So that, it becomes before it is told.

Prophecy is also known as telling fortune. Here, it has many media used in telling fortune. Gypsy is well-known in using bones to tell fortune. While, Arabian fortune teller sometimes uses crystal ball. However, fortune teller has their own style in telling fortune. The medium they use can probably be people's palm, people's signature, people's dreams, and so on and so forth.

However, a prophecy is something that someone can decide to believe or not. If someone believes a prophecy which is told to him, the prophecy will happen. However, if he doesn't believe a prophecy, he will normally run his life without realizing that he does the prophecy. It means that a prophecy is a fate that is told by fortune teller. It is proven by another literary work titled Oedipus Rex. In that play, a prophecy is delivered to King Oedipus by a prophet, Teresias. He doesn't believe the prophecy, but it happens as his fate. So that, the prophecy is still working. It also happens in Harry Potter and The Orde of Phoenix. One of the character, Professor Dolores Umbrige, is told a prophecy by a prophecy teacher, Sybil Trelawney. She doesn't believe to the prophecy which tells that she was in a great danger. However, it is still working to her.

In Emerald Green by Kerstin Giers, there are many prophecies which is made for some characters. Actually, the main prophecy is only one, but it includes some characters in this book. The main character, Gwendolyn Shepherd, believes to the prophecy after noticing her true identity, which is eternity. So that, the prophecy is working well. Before she knows her true identity, she is told a prophecy by her aunt-grandmother. She ignores it. However, the prophecy keeps happening to her as her fate, so that she begins to believe towards prophecies. There is also Count von Germain as the emerald in the arrangement of precious stone who belongs to the prophecy, too. He believes to the prophecy, so that it is working to him well, too.

Emerald Green by Kerstin Giers is actually time travel trilogy books. These three books tell the different story but it is continuous from the first book until the third book. In the first book, Ruby Red, it tells Gwendolyn's first experience as a time traveller. She is curious because everyone, especially her mother, hides her true identity and her date of birth. She doesn't know anything until she gets only a small piece of clue. In the second book, Blue Sapphire, she begins to search what secret hidden by her mother and people in the organization. In the third book, it is the result of curious things from the beginning. In this third book, too, it gives the answer of the main prophecy for twelve time travellers and the main character, Gwendolyn, notices her true identity.

This novel was analysed using Semiotic approach. Semiotic which is also known as semiology is one of literary school of studies. This discipline is a study of sign appears in literary works. Based on American linguist, C.S. Pierce, semiotic is divided into three basic kinds of sign (Eagleton, 1996:87). There are symbol, icon, and indexical. Symbolic means the sign which is conventionally link with its referent. Iconic means the sign which resembles what it stands for. Meanwhile, indexical means the sign which is associated with what it is a sign of. As Ferdinand de Saussure stated, he divided the sign in language by signified and signifier. Signified means the mental image of object, while signifier stands for the meaning which is conveyed by the function or concept in the object.

In the previous research entitled Semiotic In The Language Used To Convey Message Through Prophecy As Seen In Kerstin Gier's Emerald Green, it also tells how Gwendolyn can reveal her identity. However, in the previous research, it only explains the character and the symbol. In this research, the researcher analysed the conflict and setting in structural approach which supported how Gwen can reveal the prophecy. The researcher also analysed the index that shows the cause-and-effect of an event in the novel. The index will support to prove the symbol found in the analysis.

Based on the explanation above, the researcher chooses Emerald Green by Kerstin Gier under the theme Prophecy Reveals Identity.

There is Winner, There is Loser

Winner and loser are common in competition and championship. However, it is not always in the competition. Being winner is for someone whom can survive or pass the game they play on. Meanwhile, being loser is for someone whom is unlucky to survive. In the prophecy, it is said that it is the battle of the youth and the oak tree. The youth symbolizes Gwen, and the oak tree symbolizes the Count. Gideon tells Gwen if the youth is died, the oak tree will stand forever in the world. Moreover, it the edge of the paper, it is written precisely by the Count that Gwen must die right after he gets the elixir. It indicates that if Gwen is loose, so the the Count will win, so that it is indexical.

The index that there is winner and there is loser shows the conflict between Gwen and The Count. It also reflects her character as the twelfth in the arrangement of the circle.

Philosopher's Stone Brings Eternity

As described above, philosopher stone is also called the elixir of life. It brings eternity for someone whom drinks the liquid. Because it makes someone eternal, it is obviously that someone really wants to have it for himself. In the story, Lesley explains the clue in Anna Karenina that Lucy and Paul doesn't want to close the Circle of Blood because there is a philosopher stone which the Count really want it for himself. It is told in the prophecy that everyone who consumes the philosopher stone will be eternal. So that, philosopher's stone and eternity are indexical.

The philosopher's stone really makes someone eternal. Before Gideon comes to rescue Gwen from the Count, Lucy and Paul insist him to drink the elixir. When Gideon comes to Gwen, the Count shoots him with the pistol. The bullets make him fall down. However, some minutes later, Gideon breathes and tells Gwen that he has drunk the elixir. Xemerius sums up that the philosopher's stone makes Gideon eternal. So that, the index that philosopher stone brings relates to the conflict between Gwen against The Count. It also relates to Gwen's character as immortal.

The correlation between the symbol and the index lead the result of Gwendolyn's effort to reveal the identity as eternal person through the message written in the prophecy. The correlation between the intrinsic, structural approach, and the extrinsic, semiotical approach also brings the result of the way she reveals her identity.

The way Gwendolyn reveals the prophecy is shown by her curiosity about the secret hidden by the Guardian. She is also curious about a chest that she finds in the house until she knows that it is chronograph, the tool for the time travelers to elapse. It is also shown by her conflict against Lord Alastair who is successfully killed her in the ball but she is still alive, even she lost a lot of blood. Her conflict against the Count also makes her easier to reveal the meaning of the prophecy because the prophecy contains the information that shows The Count's intention to own the philosopher's stone for himself.
