He is a resident of Brighton, Mass. and the father of nine children.

Everyone is invited.

Mortar Board Holds Frosh Study Group

By Gay Faribault

Mortar Board members arranged a study workshop program for freshmen women which was held Oct. 19 from 9-10 p.m. in each women's dorm. They planned the itinerary for it, and then chose approximately 40 upperclassmen on the basis of scholastic ability and leadership to lead the discussion groups.

Each leader was given the names of the girls to contact before the actual discussion groups met. This gave the leaders an opportunity to talk with the girls before the meeting.

Purpose To Evaluate Study Habits

The purpose of this workshop was to give freshmen a chance to evaluate their study habits after their first exams, to give upperclass women a chance to help and acquaint themselves with the freshmen, to enable the frosh to talk freely with upperclassmen, and finally to help the freshmen realize the importance of academic life in college.

Program Initiated This Year

This was the first year that such a program has been arranged at the University. There may be another one at the end of this academic year, and it is hoped that it will be continued in years to come.

The general attitude of those freshmen taking part in this program was good. Mortar Board members also felt that it was a success. Attendance was not compulsory, but in most dorms the discussion groups were well attended.

Informal Atmosphere Provided

The group provided an informal atmosphere, one in which the frosh could discuss things freely. However, in several instances the girls did not take it seriously. This seemed more evident in dorms where there were many upperclassmen. It was in these dorms that freshmen had already discussed things with the upperclass women, and they felt that much that was discussed was "old hat."

In the dorms where there were few or no upperclassmen the frosh took this study workshop program seriously.

In The Groove

By Pete French

I spent one of the most pleasant of my many record listening sessions in Price's Record Shop yesterday afternoon. This pleasure was due to a new Columbia album called Conniff Meets Butterfield.

In this album, Ray Conniff combines his arranging and conducting skills with those of Billy Butterfield on the trumpet. These two are old chums, having both played with Bob Crosby's famous Bobcats a few years back.

It Swings

Conniff is already famous for giving us something new and clever in the way of arrangements of old standards. His orchestra provides the rhythm, while Butterfield takes the melody. Billy's trumpeting ranges from a sophisticated muted sound to real forceful jazz, when necessary.

You really owe it to yourself to hear their up to date renditions of: A Love is Born, South of the Border, Oh What a Beautiful Mornin', Beyond the Blue Horizon, Can't We Be Friends, and seven other standards.

Dixie

A real treat in Dixieland sound awaits you in a new Mercury release, The Riverboat Five Take The Train. The Five (actually seven) combine authentic New Orleans and Chicago styles as they take you on a train ride below the Mason-Dixon Line. We get rolling on the Wabash Cannonball and end up on the Night Train. In between it's On the Acheson, Topeka, & Santa Fe, Alabama Bound, I've Been Working on the Railroad, Casey Jones, and other railroading songs. Climb aboard and then get set to really roll!

Weird

Another Mercury release is Exotica No. III, the music of that Quiet Village man, Martin Denny. I can't say much more than the sounds range from weird to fantastic as Mr. Denny utilizes a multitude of instruments, devices, and natural sounds to produce some intriguing music.

Distinguished Restaurant Scores High With Student Body

By ANDREW JACKSON

This article is written as a guide to freshmen who may be suffering from misconceptions about "The Cat." It is situated in Dover and is known officially as La Cantina. It is supposed to be a restaurant, which means they serve food, but not necessarily. That is determined by your attitude.

So what does The Cat have that Commons doesn't have? Pizza, for one thing. Beer, for another. And perhaps atmosphere, but that depends. It seems at first glance to be rather dark, subdued, dreary. Looks like a dive, that's the secret.

Square Counter

A large square counter dominates the center of the room. This is for those confident souls who can maintain their balance on a stool. The less courageous and the inconspicuous are provided with booths.

Assume you get this far. The entrance requirements are money and a bona fide ID card, the former being sufficient if cramming has turned you prematurely gray. Note: a chemical ink remover does a neater job of modernizing ID's than a rubber eraser. Goofing up will cost you fifty bucks.

Exotic Food

The food is not outstanding, but is priced accordingly. You will find the usual Italian dishes, emphasis on pizza and spaghetti. You may reinforce your appetite with a couple of beers before the food arrives.

Three or four later the room seems less dreary, so you get up your courage and glance around at the other patrons. There are the philosophic types, lubricating their way down the golden path to Nirvana. There are gourmets, savoring one glass per pizza and managing to leave disgustingly sober.

Diversified Patrons

There are untalkative types who make up for lost time, and there are incessant talkers who have lost the ability. Old Pro stares fixedly at the wall, while New Initiate glances furtively at the door. Thirsty makes like Winston Churchill and gets two glasses. Scientist correlates intake with effect, and Indifferent reads the newspaper. Good Try drinks his coke in silence and broods over the lack of an ID.

Cool Atmosphere

The atmosphere grows warmer. People you've never met are glad to see you again. Your best friend focuses one eye in recognition and struggles vainly to confirm your presence with the other. It is this equality under the influence that makes the Cat a democratic society and gives it a place in campus tradition.

Then with an air of studied nonchalance you get up and try to make a casual exit.

The shortest way back is past the police station, which lends substance to the old saying, "the longest way 'round is the quickest (and surest) way home." Naturally drinking and driving don't

Bradford Fancy Represents Philip Morris in Durham

As a part of its work scholarship program, Philip Morris Incorporated has announced that Bradford W. Fancy has been selected campus business representative here. The appointment is for the full school year.

The cigarette firm, which was first in the industry to support college-level education by this method, also makes grants for higher education and research institutions in many areas of the country.

Son of Mr. & Mrs. W. A. Fancy, Mr. Fancy will serve as liaison between this campus and the company's New York offices, and he will develop and work on advertising and promotion projects for Philip Morris, Parliament and Marlboro brands.

Now in his sophomore year at UNH, Mr. Fancy is an English major.

Many of Philip Morris' present executives began their careers as campus business representatives. While the financial assistance to undergraduates carries no obligation, the sales force and other departments of Philip Morris list a number of men who have joined the company after having been associated with the company during their college careers.

At present Alma Wright is carillonneur Monday noon and on Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons. L. Franklin Heald plays Wednesday and Friday noons.

and what they do at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft...

The field has never been broader
The challenge has never been greater

Engineers at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft today are concerned with the development of all forms of flight propulsion systems—air breathing, rocket, nuclear and other advanced types for propulsion in space. Many of these systems are so entirely new in concept that their design and development, and allied research programs, require technical personnel not previously associated with the development of aircraft engines. Where the company was once primarily interested in graduates with degrees in mechanical and aeronautical engineering, it now also requires men with degrees in electrical, chemical, and nuclear engineering, and in physics, chemistry, and metallurgy.

Included in a wide range of engineering activities open to technically trained graduates at all levels are these four basic fields:

ANALYTICAL ENGINEERING Men engaged in this activity are concerned with fundamental investigations in the fields of science or engineering related to the conception of new products. They carry out detailed analyses of advanced flight and space systems and interpret results in terms of practical design applications. They provide basic information which is essential in determining the types of systems that have development potential.

DESIGN ENGINEERING The prime requisite here is an active interest in the application of aerodynamics, thermodynamics, stress analysis, and principles of machine design to the creation of new flight propulsion systems. Men engaged in this activity at P&WA establish the specific performance and structural requirements of the new product and design it as a complete working mechanism.

EXPERIMENTAL ENGINEERING Here men supervise and coordinate fabrication, assembly and laboratory testing of experimental apparatus, system components, and development engines. They devise test rigs and laboratory setups, specify instrumentation and direct execution of the actual test programs. Responsibility in this phase of the development program also includes analysis of test data, reporting of results and recommendations for future effort.

MATERIALS ENGINEERING Men active in this field at P&WA investigate metals, alloys and other materials under various environmental conditions to determine their usefulness as applied to advanced flight propulsion systems. They devise material testing methods and design special test equipment. They are also responsible for the determination of new fabrication techniques and causes of failures or manufacturing difficulties.

Exhaustive testing of full-scale rocket engine thrust chambers is carried on at the Florida Research and Development Center.

Frequent informal discussions among analytical engineers assure continuous exchange of ideas on related research projects.

Cheating Encouraged?

It's rather enlightening to realize that Dr. Eddy decries cheating. No doubt the Doctor has to, since he seems to be doing nothing else about it. Not only that, but this scholar and administrator must take a great deal of responsibility for refusing to follow through upon his own analysis of the reasons for cheating; through such inactivity he actually fosters the very cheating which he, at the same time, so vociferously decries.

At a recent symposium for Student Senators and other "Student Leaders" (to work to death, we hope, a much overused euphemism) Dr. Eddy suggested he would fight attempts by students to take an active part in real policy making decisions. As part of The Administration he must take responsibility for a de-humanized registration system and an ill-advised faculty promotion Merit System — all of which have a bearing upon the school's cheating problem.

Because Dr. Eddy is an acknowledged scholar in the field, we assume to be correct his study on cheating which appeared in his College Influence on Student Character; yet we do not suggest, and we believe Dr. Eddy would not disagree, that the causes of cheating taken from this book and presented by him to the American Council on Education, are the only ones that are to be found. But these are of extreme importance.

Cheating, Dr. Eddy states, is found "particularly where there is a college-wide requirement, such as courses in hygiene and ROTC . . . It's part of the student culture to take these courses, and also to get out of them as easily as possible." He also finds it in other required introductory courses which are taught routinely.

Besides these areas, the problem arises even more acutely where a student lacks respect for his professors. Where a professor makes little or no preparation, or fails to meet his obligations to his students, they tend to feel no obligation toward him. It is with such a professor that a student will tend to cheat, says Dr. Eddy.

With this analysis of some occurrences of cheating we ought to ask ourselves (and Dr. Eddy ought to ask himself): What are we to do about it? No doubt there will always be required courses but it is likely that if the students themselves decide what courses shall be required (or at least have some voice in this decision) they will not feel so compelled "to get out of them as easily as possible." Certainly students have courses which they feel are more important than others. If a student felt he had some effective say-so as to his requirements, he would have a greater sense of responsibility toward these, as he now has towards his electives.

Yet Dr. Eddy stated in his talk before the Student Senate that he would fight attempts by the students to put themselves into any effective policy-making positions, including those involved with establishing course requirements. The vice-president admitted, however, that putting students into such positions would be desirable, but only theoretically. Then why does Dr. Eddy decry cheating in practice? Why doesn't he decry it quietly and theoretically if he isn't really interested in doing anything about it?

The other basic cause of cheating, outlined by Dr. Eddy, is that generated by poor professors who fail to gain the respect of their students. Yet here again what the provost says and does are two different things, for realizing the problem he tacitly, if not vigorously, condones a registration system which, in effect, does not permit a student to pick his own professors. Should a student feel an obligation toward a professor who has been foisted on him by a de-humanized and mechanized registration system? Some might think not. Some might consider cheating the easiest way to get past a dull and unimaginative professor.

And further, Dr. Eddy is a part of The Administration which erroneously and to ill effect finds the extra-curricular activities of a professor to be the best judge of his teaching ability. No more absurd assumption could be imagined; teaching is teaching and is a full time job. It is a fact that many of the professors on campus are so busy doing outside activities they are greatly impairing, to say the least, the quality of their teaching. If the professor is going to cheat the student, is it reasonable to expect the student not to cheat back?

When The Administration encourages the faculty to do "good work" beyond proportions in order to give the University a better name it attracts students to the campus; that is, students who cannot choose their own professors for whose specific guidance they have come to UNH. Hence, being stuck with some second-rate instructor, is it not possible they too will tend to cheat? Are we then to attract people to the campus only to have them cheat? This is what may happen.

It is quite clear that Dr. Eddy's theories and his practices are two different and even contradictory things. We suggest that Dr. Eddy, as well as The Administration, forget about the cheating problem and accept it as an inevitable concomitant of the more glorious ends of denying to students all opportunities for decision-making, including the minor one of selecting their own professors, and of creating a faculty more dedicated to its extra-curricular activity than to its teaching; or else follow the course of action advocated by the research on the cheating problem.

Theory without practice is sterile. Let's give the students more effective voice in the establishment of University-wide required courses; let's give them a more effective voice in establishing course requirements; let's give them complete discretion in choosing their own professors. Here's something for our near-sycophantic Student Senate and "Student Leaders" to concern themselves with. Here's where they can make (for a change) a worthwhile contribution to themselves and their school.

Looking Around

Comatosias

By DICK SHEA

Characters: Pummellas and Comatosias.

Scene: Arch in front of the Oracle.

Pum: Ho, there, Comatosias, what makes you run so fast, on such a humid day?

Com: Pummellas, forgive me, I saw you not. Indeed, if you will excuse this poor pun, I am running for office. I mean, of course, I am hurrying to post signs in the arch.

Pum: To be sure. What manner of sign?

Com: Signs urging the voters to elect me as President of the Plebe class at the University.

Pum: I was not aware that you were a candidate, or in fact, that there was such an election. I am old and cannot run along with you, so would you be so kind as to read your signs to me. Knowing your temperament and wit as I do, I cannot doubt they must be extremely coercive and vehement.

Com: Pummellas, I am honored that you would have me read my signs to you. I am the leader of the "Clean Up This Stinking Mess" ticket, and therefore am interested in seeing my whole ticket elected. Ulysses Dullas is running as my vice-president. The sign I have written for him goes: "All except sissies, Vote for Ulysses."

Pum: I can hardly restrain myself.

Com: Thank you. The treasurer of the group is Achilles Dummas. This is the sign I have composed to help him: "Fellas and Fillies, Vote for Achilles!"

Pum: Clever.

Com: But you have yet to hear the best. Wimple Illiteras is to be secretary. I am sure that even an elder as yourself would be impressed by this sign: "Don't be a pimple, Vote for Wimple!"

Pum: Poignant, indeed! But what is the sign you composed for yourself?

Com: "Don't blow your nosias, Vote Comatoias!"

Pum: Indeed, it causes my heart to jump. But, Comatosias, what will you do if you are elected to this office, which as I see by the determination in your manner, must be of great importance?

Com: We will do our best, Pummellas. There is a great deal of work and tremendous responsibility involved. What more could a voter want than to know his representative is doing his best?

Pum: But what will you do your best to do, Comatosias?

Com: We will do our best to help those who have elected us. We will develop fully a spirit, indeed a wildcat spirit, and a close feeling of togetherness.

Pum: Commendable, Comatosias. For the time being I doubt not that you can promote these things. But to what purpose?

Com: Pardon, Pummellas, but I do not follow you.

Pum: Surely if you are making as your main objective the betterment of class spirit, and perfection of togetherness, there must be some good to be gained by this. As I am sure you have decided what this good is, would you be so kind as to let me know, that I may gain by your conclusion?

Com: Togetherness makes everyone feel as if he belongs. Spirit is the promoter of togetherness.

Pum: I am sorry, Comatosias, but it was my belief that the design and purpose of the University is to better the intellect. Moreover, I believe that the University is a union of people. If you grant me that it is a union of people you must also grant that togetherness is intrinsic. One doesn't attempt to create that which already exists. Comatosias, in my long life, I have never known of one to be lonely at the University. If one should become so, it would be a psychological problem, with which you as a Plebe officer are not equipped to deal. There is togetherness in living in a dormitory; there is even togetherness in dining, as does not the Plebe class dine as a body in one place?

Com: That is true. Ptomainas Tavernas, it is called.

Pum: If I had time, Comatosias, I would even doubt the usefulness of this thing, togetherness. I was of the opinion that the only usefulness or pleasureable togetherness at the University was practiced on Saturday night between similarly inclined members of oppositely constructed sexes.

Com: But there should be spirit at athletic contests as well.

Pum: Ah yes. And doesn't Bacchus supply a great deal of these spirits? What spirits he doesn't supply, will be immediately evident of their own power when a cause for such spirit is shown. I mean, of course, when your athletes display superior prowess, the spirit in their behalf will manifest itself unaided.

Com: True, Pummellas.

Pum: Then it is evident that your purpose in holding office does not lie in promoting spirit, or in creating togetherness. Let us conclude this discussion with haste, Comatosias. Tell me, in material terms, what are you going to do? What does your office require?

Com: We are the administrators of the frosh-soph hop at the Collisseum.

Pum: And do you do this alone?

Com: Oh no. The officers of the second year class combine with us.

Pum: Does this not mean that there will be two presidents, two vice-presidents, two treasurers and two secretaries to arrange an event which requires little more than reserving the Collisseum through Statinas, the director of the edifice?

Com: That and a menial amount of publicity.

Pum: And nothing more?

Com: No, that is our major work for the year.

Pum: Then I should think it will be efficiently run, if the two groups don't get in each other's way.

Com: Yes.

Pum: Well, Comatosias, I must continue on my way to the forum. I wish you good luck, and add that I only asked these questions of you so that I could be certain that this election was not just another popularity contest between people wanting an office for purely vainglorious reasons. My conclusion is satisfactory. I bid thee farewell, and hope that you strive as diligently throughout life, as you do in getting votes for this election.

Time To Wake Up

By GEORGE DAUGHAN

The most powerful nation in the world is the United States, and its most powerful rival is the Soviet Union. Americans became acutely aware of how close their rival was on Oct. 5, 1957, when the first Sputnik was launched. People awoke on that morning to read headlines in their newspapers something like this: RUSSIA FIRES FIRST EARTH SATELLITE. Bewilderment followed the initial surprise. Everywhere the questions, why? and how? were being asked. We had been under the impression that the Soviet Union was a backward country of barbarians capable of little scientific accomplishment, and certainly never capable of equaling, much less outdoing, the United States in any scientific-military field. The breaking of this illusion revealed a deep crisis. Many editorials, television discussions, and congressional investigations were showing the causes of our deficiencies. They lay in many places including rivalries between the services, indecision in high places over objectives, lack of basic research and education.

But as the months wore on and Explorer was launched, our sense of urgency seemed to evaporate.

We were reminded last month that we are still far behind the Russians in the space race when they launched their two successful lunar probes. We were also reminded that many of our old ills are also still with us, especially our niggardly attitude toward education.

The president last week made a new attempt to straighten out some of the difficulties. He moved most of our military rocket development under the control of the Air Force, and put our scientific space program under the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Although this action will certainly help, it falls far short of accomplishing the task. Our teachers are still underpaid, our tuitions are still too high, our young people still lack incentive and guidance, and many of our building facilities such as language laboratories are still inadequate.

The most galling part of all this to many of our struggling students and teachers is the fact that such great contributors to American culture such as Ricky Nelson and "Fabulous" Fabian earn in the neighborhood of $400,000 annually.

William Inge's "Bus Stop" To Be Presented By Mask And Dagger

By MARY ALICE CHANDLER

On November 12, 13, and 14, the stage in New Hampshire Hall will be transformed into a bustling Bus Stop as Mask and Dagger raises the curtain on William Inge's play of that name. Another successful play by Mr. Inge, Picnic, was presented by Mask and Dagger two years ago. Both plays were popular Broadway productions and movies.

Isolated Depot Staged

Due to a raging snow storm, the bus that travels the road between Kansas City and Topeka is forced to halt at an isolated depot. The masterful hand of winter brings about an improvisation of the old theme of boy meets girls.

Among the passengers is Bo (Ron Brown), a young rancher who goes to Kansas City, ostensibly to join the rodeo, but actually in search of a wife. An hilarious situation arises when the farm boy becomes entangled with Cherie, a city girl who has "been around". Ron Brown appeared as Rodrigo in Othello. He also won the Best Actor award last spring for the Workshop Play. Maggie Nevers, who plays Cherie, made her Mask and Dagger debut last year as Ellen in A Visit to a Small Planet. Bo is accompanied in his ventures by Virgil (Brian Corliss), his life-long friend and advisor. This is Brian's first Mask and Dagger performance.

At the bus stop, Dr. Lyman, an older man with young ideas, meets Elma, a young waitress who is not too well versed in the ways of the world. Through smooth talk he attempts to beguile her to Topeka. Jim Cooke, who portrays Dr. Lyman, has appeared in numerous productions, including Death of a Salesman and Othello. Elma is played by Sandy Shaw, who won the Best Actress award last spring for the Workshop Play, Singerman.

Carl, the bus driver, who has been making regular twenty-minute stops at this depot for years finally realizes his desire to become better acquainted with Grace, the manager. Cast as Carl is Jerry St. Cyr, who last appeared in Othello and Singerman. Anne Ustick, who plays Grace has performed major roles in Othello, Death of a Salesman, and Anastasia.

Will, the sheriff, who manages to get his finger in every pie and who adds to the comedy of the entire play is portrayed by John Zanes in his first Mask and Dagger role.

Season Tickets On Sale

Season tickets for the four scheduled productions (Nov. 12, 13, 14; Jan. 20, 21; March 24, 25, 26; and May 12, 13, 14) are now on sale at the Business Office at T. Hall and in the lobby of the Student Union. In addition there is a representative from Mask and Dagger who is equipped to sell season tickets in most of the housing units on campus. These tickets may be purchased for only $2.00 which is 1/3 less than individual admissions.

Subscribers will be notified before each production which will give them a chance to exchange their coupons for tickets before the seats go on general sale. So for a gay ride to fine entertainment get your tickets NOW, and join the crowd for Bus Stop.

Around the World

By Sandra Barnard

This column is designed to help the student body to become better acquainted with the foreign students on campus. Each week an article will appear on one of these students which we hope will be of interest and enlightenment.

There are on campus, 69 students representing 30 countries.

Difference

"It is very different." That was Tiny Anakasant's opinion of the United States as compared with her native Thailand. More specifically, Tiny is from Pattani in southern Thailand. Formerly called Siam, the name was changed to Thailand which means "land of the free", with the transition from absolute to constitutional monarchy. Tiny's name means free (Ti-), girl (-ny).

While in secondary school in the country's capital city of Bangkok, she took a competitive examination sponsored by the government which enabled her to go to the college of her choice. Her admission here was arranged by officials in Washington, and Tiny was in.

Studies English

She studied about the United States before coming here and upon arrival in Washington D. C., in June 1958, she studied English first at American University for four weeks, then at Harvard summer school. She is now a sophomore, and plans to major in Biology.

Tiny finds the people here friendly and the atmosphere on campus more liberal and relaxed than that found in Thailand schools. In classes there, strict attention is paid to the teachers and the attitude is more formal.

Dating

She finds the boy-girl relationship more liberal also, as in Thailand there is no dating without chaperones.

Marriage occurs only with full consent of the parents.

Tiny plans to go back to Thailand at the end of her four years to teach, having signed a contract with her government.

Letters To The Editor

TO THE EDITORS:

It is my belief that there are no real Republicans in this University. Certainly if there are any, they are all apathetic. It has been said that minorities clan together and work harder than the majority. Numbers do not mean strength, but energy and work output are the final determinants of power.

Despite the fact that this state is supposed to be overwhelmingly Republican, this campus, at least, shows a preponderance of Democrats. The Young Democratic Club has formed itself into a strong nucleus of dynamic individuals working together with unity of purpose and singularity of aim. If you compare the attendance records of the YDC and YRC on this campus, it will be obvious who is in the majority; if you compare the amount of work done by these two bodies, you will see where the strength lies. It now looks like the campus, and perhaps the state, will go Democratic for certain.

Perhaps, however, the old adage that the majority, when it is certain of overwhelming numbers will sit back and watch the opposition blow themselves out is real. It has been so true in history that when a great majority gets over-confident and relaxes, believing fate to be on its side, it automatically goes into decline, withers and dies. Is Republicanism dying then? The only "apparent" Republicans seem to be the Rockefeller backers. Even these, it seems, are either petty adventurers or Democratic cast-offs because there are no strong Republicans among them with any record of attendance at YRC meetings, either at the present or in the past.

RISE UP O' MEN OF HONOR! RISE UP AND BE COUNTED, YE REPUBLICANS. (name submitted)

A Campus-to-Career Case History

"I found I could be an engineer —and a businessman, too"

William M. Stiffler majored in mechanical engineering at Penn State University —but he also liked economics. "I wanted to apply engineering and economics in business," he says, "and have some administrative responsibilities."

Bill got his B.S. degree in June, 1956, and went to work with the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania at Harrisburg. During his first two years, he gained on-the-job experience in all departments of the company. Since June, 1958, he's been working on transmission engineering projects.

Today, Bill is getting the blend of engineering and practical business-engineering he wanted. "The economic aspects of each project are just as important as the technical aspects," he says. "The greatest challenge lies in finding the best solution to each problem in terms of costs, present and future needs, and new technological developments.

"Another thing I like is that I get full job-responsibility. For example, I recently completed plans for carrier systems between Scranton and four other communities which will bring Direct Distance Dialing to customers there. The transmission phase of the project involved almost a half-million dollars—and it was 'my baby' from terminal to terminal.

"Telephone engineering has everything you could ask for—training, interesting and varied work, responsibility, and real management opportunities."

Bill Stiffler and many college men like him have found interesting careers with the Bell Telephone Companies. There may be a real opportunity for you, too. Be sure to talk with the Bell interviewer when he visits your campus—and read the Bell Telephone booklet on file in your Placement Office.

Scenes from the Sidelines

Making Mud Pies

By DOUG BROWN

At this stage of the game I think it is high time to extend a hand of congratulations to those twenty or so fathers who braved the elements Saturday, to watch their sons slosh through the mud to a 6-6 tie with the Judges of Brandeis.

Rain - Wind - Mud - Misery

The wind blew and the rain blew and for the 1500 fans in the stands, and tell me that is not loyalty, it was a perfectly miserable day. And as for the poor guys out on the field, I don't see how they do it. Most of the game was played on one end of the field so it was no time at all until they were playing in a lake of mud.

Of course the game did have a few interesting points; Danny Ruskiewicz did tie it on a pass from Sammy Paul in the last quarter. How about that Brandeis center in the first period? After two plays he was so mud strewn that, it not only was impossible to tell his number, it was impossible to tell in which direction he was facing or for that matter where his face was. And of course their was that kick by Joe Vaillancourt that took off into the wild blue yonder, reversed direction, and set sail for the Wildcat goal finally settling on the Cat 35. Oh, it was a good game, note the picture on this page.

But this was not unusual. Look at what was going on elsewhere in the area. B.C. postponed their game with Marquette. Dartmouth plowed through the mud for a 9-0 win over the Crimson of Harvard. Northeastern and Mass., neither a strong defensive team, fought to a 0-0 tie.

Next week our troops will have their hands full at Storrs. Here in Durham there will be, not only the Yankee Conference cross-country meet, but also the New Hampshire High School meet.

Wildcats - Brandeis Fight Elements For 6-6 Tie

The Wildcats and the Judges of Brandeis fought to a muddy 6-6 tie in the rain before a sparse gathering of 1500 at Cowell Stadium.

In the statistics column the Cats held an overpowering edge with a total of 215 yards on the ground and in the air to the Judges 59. But the mud created an obstacle that neither team was able to overcome.

Power Football

The outset of the game gave indication that both teams would be forced to resort to old fashioned power football. The Judges were content in the first period to play defensive ball kicking on second down with the ball deep in their territory.

In the second period Joe Vaillancourt punted only to have the ball fly back over his head to the UNH 35. The Judges then drove to the Wildcat 15 before being halted. The Cats then pushed back to the Brandeis 40 when the halftime buzzer sounded.

In the third period the Judges found the one break that they had been waiting for all afternoon when the Wildcats fumbled on their own 29. Sammy Paul stopped the threat when he intercepted the ball in the Cat end zone for a touchback.

The Judges were not to be sidetracked at this point. Taking the ball on the UNH 40 on a Wildcat punt they pushed goalward. A pass to Lahnston and a run by Delaney put the ball on the six. Then a quick pass to Long and the Judges led 6-0.

Cat Comeback

The Cats roared back in the final stanza blocking a Solon kick on the five. Paul then hit Ruskiewicz with the six pointer that knotted the score. The rush for the extra points was unsuccessful and the final score was UNH 6 Brandeis 6.

UNH Hosts Yankee Conference Cross-Country Competition

All six of the New England state universities which combine together to form the Yankee Conference have entered teams in the annual cross-country championship which this year will be run on the 4.35 mile UNH Varsity course starting at 2:30 p.m. Saturday, October 31, 1959.

Last year's winner, Doug MacGregor of UNH will be present to defend his title. He will also be trying to break the record that he now holds on the home course.

The University of Vermont, the defending team, rates as a favorite to retain the championship over a surprisingly strong University of Massachusetts team. The surprise being that UMass has become so much stronger with practically the men who, while finishing second last year, were not close in the scoring. However, it is possible that either UNH or UMe. could upset the favorites. If Maine, who has been plagued by illness and injuries, is at full strength, the other teams will find that she will be hard to beat.

New Hampshire chances will ride on Doug MacGregor defending his championship plus an improved grouping by his fellow team mates. Besides MacGregor, only two other Varsity men have seen action in the Yankee Conference Championship Meet. They are Capt. Cal Fowler and Ed Pelczar, who finished as UNH second and third men last year. This is the first year of Varsity competition for transfer student Dave Langlois, as well as for sophomores Jack Allen, Chuck McKee, and Bill Kimball, all of whom have showed great strength throughout the entire season. Another Varsity veteran, who will probably not see action, is Junior Bob (continued on page 7)

UNH Thinclads Post Fifth Win; Top BU 20-34

The Varsity X-Country team won its fifth consecutive dual meet of the year as they easily downed the harriers of Boston University 20-43 on the Wildcats rain soaked home course. Conditions for the race were far from ideal as a strong wind blew a steady rain against the thinclads and conditions underfoot were made extremely soggy from the steady rain the preceding night. When this reporter interviewed the runners after the race he was told that this was one of the worst running days that they had ever encountered.

The hearty fans who had braved the foul weather to see the football game were treated with a very exciting finish as B.U.'s Freeman just edged out UNH's sophomore, Jack Allen, as they finished the race in front of the stands. Jack was followed closely by star Doug MacGregor who had been suffering from a severe cold all week. Other UNH runners finishing in the money were Cal Fowler, Dave Langlois, Chuck McKee, and Ed Pelczar.

UNH Sports Car Club Plans Halloween Rally

The University of New Hampshire Sports Car Club got off to a formal start for the season at its first meeting of the year. Election of officers was held with the results showing Jim Locke, President; Bill Fisher, Vice-President; Carolyn Jennison, Secretary; Sharon Wood, Treasurer. Bruce Smith was appointed Activities Director and George May was appointed Publicity Chairman.

After the elections, plans were made for a Halloween Night Rally. Registration will begin at 6:30 p.m. Saturday, October 31st at the Lewis Fields Parking Lot. An entrance fee of $2.00 will be charged to cover the cost of awards. Refreshments will be served at a check point along the route.

The UNH Sports Car Club was formed to encourage safe driving and to bring together all those who appreciate fine cars. All are welcome whether you own a sports car, economy car, American car or no car at all. The Club sponsors rallies, gymkhanas and speed events. Associate memberships are open to non members of the University. Come to the next meeting to be held Wednesday, November 11th at 7:30 p.m. in the Grafton Room at the Memorial Union.

Kittens Win 23-50

Despite the foul weather BU frosh Mueller was able to set a new course record on the Frosh course here. The old record was set last year by Chuck McKee in a race against the M.I.T. Frosh. Mueller's record is 15:04.3 minutes. Not only was Mueller fighting foul weather, he was also running on a course he did not know and could not follow because the heavy rain had washed the chalk markings away.

Wildcats Shoot For Yankee Conf. Crowns This Week

Two University of New Hampshire teams go for the Yankee Conference jackpot next week in football and cross-country next week.

Chief Boston's gridders can move into first place in the Conference by upsetting Connecticut in Memorial Stadium at Storrs, Conn., Saturday, while Paul Sweet's harriers must out-distance five other teams to acquire their first league crown.

Both teams rate only an underdogs chance of success.

Yankee Conf. Meet . . .

O'Connell Bob has been confined to Hood House for the past week because of illness.

The Wildcat Harriers will enter the championship meet undefeated. They have defeated Rhode Island 15-47 and MIT 15-48, both of which are perfect scores. They have also defeated Northeastern 20-38, Boston University 20-43, and the only close race of the season when they defeated Maine 27-28.

Those who are interested in X-Country will find that Saturday will be an exciting day. In the morning the State cross-country meet will be held with three different races for the three different size high schools. Then, at 2:30, the Yankee Conference Meet will be held.

ANOTHER YEAR, ANOTHER DOLLAR

Today I begin my sixth year of writing this column for the makers of Philip Morris and Marlboro Cigarettes. For this I get money.

Not, let me hasten to state, that payment is necessary. "Sirs," I said a few days ago to the makers of Philip Morris and Marlboro, "if I can introduce America's college men and women to Philip Morris and Marlboro, and thus enhance their happiness, heighten their zest, upgrade their gusto, magnify their cheer, and broaden their bliss, there is no need to pay me because I am more than amply rewarded."

We wept then. I'm not ashamed to say it. WE WEPT! I wish the wiseacres who say big business is cold and heartless could have been there that day. I wish they could have seen the great, shimmering tears that splashed on the board room table. We wept, every man jack of us. The makers wept—the secretaries wept—I wept—my agent, Clyde Greedy, wept. We wept all.

"No, no!" cried the makers. "We insist on paying you."

"Oh, very well," I said, and the gloom passed like a summer shower. We laughed and we lit Philip Morris and Marlboros—and some of us lit Alpines—which is a brand-new cigarette from the makers of Philip Morris and Marlboro—a fine new cigarette with a light touch of menthol and the rich taste of choice tobaccos and the longest filter yet devised. And if you are one who likes a fine new cigarette with a light touch of menthol and the rich taste of choice tobaccos and the longest filter yet devised, you would do well to ask for new king-size Alpines. If, on the other hand, you do not like menthol but do like better makin's and a filter that does what it's built for, ask for Marlboro. Or, if you don't like filters at all, but only mildness, ask for Philip Morris. Any way you play it, you're a winner.

But I digress. "Will you," said the makers of Philip Morris, Marlboro and Alpine, "write about the important issues that occupy the supple young minds of college America this year in your column?"

"But of course," I replied, with a kindly chuckle.

"And will you," asked the makers, "from time to time say a pleasant word about Philip Morris, Marlboro and Alpine?"

"Crazy kids!" I said with a wry grin, pushing my fist gently against their jaws. "You know I will."

And we all shook hands—silently, firmly, manly. And I left, dabbing my eyes with my agent, and hurried to the nearest typewriter.

The makers of Philip Morris, Marlboro and Alpine take great pleasure in bringing you another year of this uncensored, free-wheeling column.

In the first part of his document, Prof. Dishman cites "The State of Our State Governments". Later in "The Yardsticks of Good Draftsmanship" with the subtitle of "How Well Do Our State Governments Measure Up?" he gives several examples and ways to tighten up the various state constitutions. The professor believes that state codes should "Be Confined to Fundamentals", "Be kept Pruned of All Deadwood", "Be Consistent With Itself and With the Federal Constitution", and that "A Constitution Should Be Simply Written and Logically Arranged".

As a further development of his study, Professor Dishman will direct a workshop in "State Conditions — How to Study Them" at the National Conference on Government held at Springfield, Massachusetts on November 15-16. This is an annual conference of local and state officers sponsored by the National Municipal League.

The Young Republicans Club will not prohibit any of its members in aiding any Republican faction that is conceived in the spirit of fair competition and dedicated to the furtherance of the Republican Party.

reason I feel student counseling is so important, is because these years are of greatest importance in the young adult's life. The manner in which the student will cope with problems here will most likely be the way in which he will continue to do so the rest of his life. Through an understanding of himself, he will gain in understanding all men. This is the challenge which a college must face before it can permit the responsibilities of education to end.

what the various companies' needs and policies are in order to help the student to make the right selection. Dr. Paul McIntire, head of the Service, visits companies to secure first-hand information to supplement the literature sent out by the firms. Also, the Testing and Placement Service must sell the University to the companies, so it works both for the student and for the firm.

Uphold Ethics

As a member of the Eastern College Personnel Officers association, the Service has the support of all major colleges in upholding the standards of ethical recruitment procedures. Students benefit from the membership of many major businesses in E.C.P.O., because they recruit personnel through college placement officers.

Last year approximately 3/4 of a class of 650 registered. This year they expect over 400 to register, although some may be registering for future reference, not for the active file.

It is difficult for the Placement Service to state a percentage of effectiveness, because many statistical problems arise. The fairest appraisal of effectiveness rests in the attitude of industry toward the University in the search for personnel and in the student willingness to cooperate in this process.

Important Firms

What firms come to UNH? Most of the major companies return to the University, so they must be satisfied with our grads. For example, Chrysler, G.M., G.E., U.S. Steel and Eastman Kodak all recruit here. Dupont, federal agencies and major insurance companies, where demands for quality are extremely high, also recruit here. Approximately 150 agencies are coming onto the campus, not including the many sub-divisions of various large companies.

Qualifications

For the technology students, the most stringent qualifications and severe competition are in the research and development fields. "Liberal arts grads are most successful if they try to show a proven capacity for learning and a willingness to continue, rather than trying to make a literal transfer of their major to the business world," says Dr. McIntire. The first representative will be on

LUCKY STRIKE presents

Dear Dr. Frood:

DR. FROOD'S MORAL OF THE MONTH

Most college students today do not know the meaning of the word "adversity." Those who do are just a handful of English majors.

Dr. Frood, Ph. T.T.

Dear Dr. Frood: How can I leave my husband without making him happy?
Prof's Spouse

Dear Prof's Spouse: Leave a note saying you'll be back.

Dear Dr. Frood: Our library is full of "no smoking" signs. When I want a Lucky, I have to go outside. Is this right?
Furious

Dear Furious: It's monstrous. But think of the poor souls who go outside only to smoke brand X or Y or Z.

Dear Dr. Frood: Boys are always whistling at me. Do you think my clothes are too snug?
Prudence

Dear Prudence: It's impossible to tell without a picture. Send one. Please.

DR. FROOD TELLS WHO HOLDS HIS CIGARETTE HOW

I have noticed that the solid, conservative type carries his cigarette between his first two fingers. The nonconformist carries it locked in the bend of his arm. The self-conscious type holds his lighted cigarette in his pocket. The most intelligent species of all carry Lucky Strike (usually between their lips).

Dear Dr. Frood: When raccoon coats swept the campus, I wore a polo coat. When the English bobby cape came in, I wore a raccoon coat. I'm always in last year's style. How come?
Dated

Dear Dated: This is an anxiety complex arising out of being a "late-diaper" baby.

Dear Dr. Frood: I am irrationally, incalculably, irrevocably in love with a girl on campus. How can I tell her?
Lovesick

Dear Lovesick: Use small words.

Dear Dr. Frood: When I listen to stupid people or read anything boring, I fall asleep. What can I do?
Superior

Dear Superior: Yours is an extremely difficult prob mfh zzz z

COLLEGE STUDENTS SMOKE MORE LUCKIES THAN ANY OTHER REGULAR!
