Government holds Open House

By LAUNCE RAKE
Associate Writer

Reactions were generally enthusiastic to Student Government's Open House held Friday in its University Center Office. An estimated two hundred Wright State students, faculty, and administrators conversed with Student Government members, drank punch, and gobbled down cookies and crackers offered at the Open House.

Jim Greene, Student Government Chairman, said a Board of Trustees member, a couple of deans, assistant deans, faculty members, and many students attended the event. Among the Wright State officials who dropped by were Wright State President Robert Kegerreis, University Trustee Frederick Young, Director of Student Development Joanne Risacher, and Assistant Director of University Center Lorna Dawes. Greene added that students from every college within the University along with Hamilton Hall residents, University Apartment residents, and representatives from every major club or organization were also present.

Jim St. Peter, liberal arts representative to Student Government, was very impressed with this year's function. He called this year's event much more successful than last year's.

Father Gian Bonutti of the Campus Ministry said he enjoyed himself a great deal at the Open House. He added, "It's good to have the opportunity to take time out, to see each other, to share what we're doing, and especially to get to know Student Government."

HERB MIELKO, a Wright State student who works for Student Government, said the facility was not large enough to hold the crowd. He added that this should set a precedent for larger functions in the future to give more exposure to Student Government. "All-in-all, though," he said, "it worked out very well."

Thomas Anderson, a classics major, said he enjoyed the Open House. He added that it was a good opportunity to meet Student Government representatives, but he said he does not believe Student Government has much effect on his own academic career.

Jim Greene said he could feel the energy present in the room with many important and informative discussions taking place. "New ideas and new avenues of approach were discussed there about many relevant issues on campus."

Raider Carl Westfeld goes up against two Lewis University opponents in the finals of the Division II Midwest Regional Tournament. Wright State lost to Lewis 15-7, 15-13, 15-4, and 15-10. The Raiders still have hopes of going to the National tournament held in Colorado Springs, Colorado because the Division II tournament officials will be inviting several teams across the nation that placed runner-up in their region.

MS Center funds included

Bill funds WSU building projects

The recently approved Capital Improvements Bill, which appropriates about $25 million dollars to institutions of higher education in Ohio, includes approximately thirteen million dollars assigned for use by Wright State.

The funds will go into various projects, including the construction of two new buildings. Oelman Hall will be expanded to make room for Engineering and Computer Science facilities. The three story addition will be constructed adjacent to the Brehm Lab. The other new structure will be a two story animal laboratory to be used by Health Science students. It will be located on the south side of the Biological Sciences building.

The specific time when construction on these two projects will begin is not yet known. The time period needed for completion of such an undertaking can be seen in the example of Rike Hall, which was finished in time for this quarter. The funds for Rike Hall were allocated in the 1977

Appropriation Acts. Thus, approximately four years were needed to build it.

In addition to the construction funds, money has also been allocated for four more planned projects. A Multiple Sclerosis Diagnostic Center is one such proposal, as well as a Child Care Center for Wright State students with children, and a West Dayton Health Care Center for medical students. The fourth project will benefit the Western Ohio Branch of Wright State in Celina in its need of control of erosion from Grand Lake St. Mary's.

THE COMPLEMENT of the state funds will be used for the building of a heating plant at the Fels Research Institute in Yellow Springs; the purchase of the currently rented Kettering Center for continuing education; and 1.5 million dollars for basic maintenance and renovation of the Wright State campus.

The Capital Improvements Bill benefits all Ohio Colleges, as well as departments of natural resources, mental health, hospitals, and more. It was approved in its original form by the Ohio House last spring, but languished in the Ohio Senate. After some amendments it was finally accepted last week by the State Senate, House, and the Governor.

Wright State President Robert Kegerreis said a Capital Improvements Bill was not approved during the past three years because interest rates were too high. Kegerreis said high interest rates affected the outcome of the bill this year also.

He said the Bill's failure to pass over the past three years hindered the construction of Rike Hall and the amount of equipment the University was able to purchase for it.

"Rike Hall is only about 70 percent of what we wanted it to be," according to Kegerreis, "and (for example), we have three computer terminals in there now, when we really should have about 15 more."

AP/NBC poll: Majority favor banning nukes

By TIMOTHY HARPER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK AP—A majority of Americans think no more nuclear power plants should be built in the United States, according to the latest Associated Press-NBC News poll.

A majority of those polled also opposed closing existing nuclear power plants until questions about safety are answered.

Majorities also said it would worry them to live within 10 miles of a nuclear power plant, and think the future energy needs of the United States would be better served by more conservation and expansion of other energy sources rather than by expansion of nuclear power.

The nationwide telephone poll of 1,602 adults was conducted Nov. 16-17 in a scientific random sampling.

On the question of whether more nuclear power plants should be built, 56 percent said no, 32 percent said yes and 12 percent were not sure.

That represents a dramatic turnaround from 1977, the last time that question was asked on an NBC News poll. Then, 63 percent said more nuclear power plants should be built.

IN THE current AP-NBC News poll, 51 percent opposed closing existing nuclear power plants until questions about safety are answered, while 39 percent favored closing all of them and 10 percent were not sure.

Those results are consistent with the responses in April 1979, the last time the AP-NBC News poll asked about closing existing nuclear power plants until safety questions are answered. That poll was conducted one month after the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant.

In the latest poll, men split evenly over whether new plants should be built but two-thirds of the women respondents said more nuclear power plants should not be built.

The anti-nuclear power movement claimed a victory last week when Nuclear Regulatory Commission suspended the license of California's Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant, the site of frequent demonstrations this year. The NRC said it wants additional tests conducted to determine the safety of the plant.

On the question of closing existing plants, men opposed it by a 2-1 margin, while women split 48-39 in favor of mass closings.

Sentiment for both closing all plants and not building new ones was stronger on the East Coast and the West Coast than in the rest of the country.

AMONG ALL respondents, 63 percent said the future energy needs of the United States would be better served by more conservation and expansion of other energy sources. Eighteen percent said expanding nuclear power would better serve the nation's future energy needs.

Fifty-eight percent said it would worry them to live within 10 miles of a nuclear power plant, 35 percent said it would not worry them, 5 percent said they already live within 10 miles of a nuclear power plant and 2 percent were not sure.

Men were evenly divided over whether living within 10 miles of a nuclear power plant would worry them, but women said it would by 3-1.

Figures compiled from Nuclear Regulatory Commission statistics show that 2.1 million people now live within 10 miles of operating nuclear power plants.

The 10-mile radius is called the "plume exposure pathway," representing the area that would in theory be covered by the "cloud of radioactivity" that would cause immediate and direct radiation poisoning in the event of a serious nuclear accident.

In addition, figures compiled from other NRC records indicate an additional million live within 10 miles of nuclear power plants that are either under construction or in the planning stages.

AS WITH all sample surveys, the results of AP-NBC News polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variation in the sample.

For a poll based on about 1,600 interviews, the results are subject to an error margin of 3 percentage points either way because of chance variations. That is, if one could have talked this past week to all Americans with telephones, there is only 1 chance in 20 that the findings would vary by more than 3 percentage points.

Of course, the results could differ from other polls for a number of reasons. Differences in the exact wording of questions, differences in when the interviews were conducted and different methods of interviewing could also cause variations.

Hello, is this the Division II officials?

Volleyballers place second; wait for phone call

By JIM DESIMIO
Sports Writer

Raider volleyball Coach Peggy Wynkoop will be anxiously awaiting a phone call Wednesday morning from the Division II tournament officials. She's hoping that the call will be an invitation to play in the National Tournament at Colorado Springs, Colorado.

The reason Wynkoop is playing a waiting game is that the Raiders placed second in the Midwest Regional Tournament last weekend, losing to Lewis College in the final match.

Only the winner of the Midwest Regional was guaranteed a spot in the Nationals, but a few teams from around the country will be given at-large berths. These teams will be chosen from tournament runners-up, a category which includes Wright State.

"We're thrown in with all the others," said Wynkoop. "All we can do is sit back and wait."

Last weekend's tournament final loomed as a titanic struggle, pitting Wright State against Lewis College, both of whom were undefeated in four tournament matches.

THE RAIDERS had no problems in the first game of the best-of-five match, winning 15-7.

Game two was a close contest, but Wright State was the victim of a bad call near the end, according to Wynkoop. A back-row player from Lewis blocked a ball at the net, which is illegal for someone playing that position to do.

No violation was called, so Lewis won the point, and went on to win the game, 15-13.

"It was the turning point in the match," said Wynkoop, whose team lost the next two games, 15-4, 15-10. "We lost our composure and started to crumble, and Lewis took control."

The Raiders opened the tourney Thursday night, beating Eastern Illinois by scores of 15-12, 15-4. "It was about the most consistent we've played all year," said Wynkoop.

Friday, the Raiders slipped past Marquette, 17-15, 15-12. "The scores weren't indicative of the match. Marquette wasn't that good," said Wynkoop, who admitted she probably broke the continuity of the match by making frequent substitutions.

LATER ON Friday, Wright State met Indiana State-Evansville and lost the first game, 15-13. The Raiders then came back with vengeance exploding on Evansville for a 15-4 win in game two, and maintaining control for a 15-10 victory in the deciding game.

The Raiders thus emerged first from their four-team pool. Their opponents in Saturday's semifinal match consisted of some familiar faces, the University of Dayton Flyers, who were second in their pool.

Breaking away from the pattern established in the previous weekend's marathon encounter, Wright State took over the controls and won the first two games, 15-10, 15-3. Then the Flyers climbed to a 15-13 decision in game three. Game four could have gone either way, according to Wynkoop, but the Raiders prevailed, 15-13, sending WSU into the final with Lewis.

For the Raiders, outside hitter Debbie Perlenfeld was named to the All-Tournament Team.

If the Raiders don't get that invitation to the Nationals, their season record winds up at 45-9. There's no reason to complain about that record but they'd like to get one last chance to improve it in the beautiful state of Colorado, Dec. 3-5.
