

Steve Hallam, Professor of Management

Stephen E. Myers

I was not part of the University until after Steve Hallam's tenure as dean of the College of Business Administration. When invited to serve as executive-in-residence, I was assigned to work with Steve in his capstone course on Strategic Management. I was privileged to work under his direction with his students in that course for the next ten years. Steve was unremittingly enthusiastic with each succeeding semester, usually teaching two sections as well as a lower level management course. His capacity for work was prodigious. It was a joy to watch his courses go from good to better as each of twenty semesters succeeded one another. Both in and out of class, Steve was generous with his abundant knowledge and experiences.