'Official' Program Under Way

Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC), offered for the first time last year at RIC on a conditional basis, has been officially approved as part of the college curriculum.

Initial ROTC classes were offered last fall but official recognition of the program needed Faculty Curriculum Committee approval.

"We are officially on board," Dr. John J. Salesses, assistant vice president and dean of academic affairs, said last week.

Classes already are under way. He said tentative approval was given last March and official approval was voted in May. Adoption of a ROTC program had been recommended by college President David E. Sweet.

The proposal was strongly supported also by Student Parliament.

"Student support has been very strong," Salesses said, adding, "the Student Parliament was a prime mover of the ROTC issue."

RHODE ISLAND COLLEGE
ROTC

It is proposed that RIC faculty teach courses in military history while regular Army personnel teach the more technical courses.

ROTC personnel have offices in Mann Hall, Room 061. It is staffed by a captain, who also continues to teach ROTC at Providence College, a master sergeant and an administrative specialist.

Capt. Leo S. Prottzman said students were active during the summer and "have been a great assistance to us in the office."

The office is open weekdays 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Anyone interested in ROTC is asked to stop in, Prottzman said.

Currently, 25 juniors, two sophomores and 31 freshmen are enrolled in the ROTC programs. Six seniors who have been receiving their military instruction at PC continue to take advanced courses there.

Captain Prottzman said RIC is considered a ROTC extension center and "an expand-the-base college." The goal is to make RIC a host institution for ROTC with a complete program of military instruction.

RIC students, as well as students from other colleges around the state, previously had to take ROTC instruction at either PC or the University of Rhode Island, both designated as host institutions.

Captain Prottzman said next semester he will work full-time at RIC.

"A lot of interest" was shown by students and college administrators for a ROTC program, according to a dual survey taken two years ago. Last year 60 RIC students signed up for at least one of the two basic military science courses introduced last fall.

Captain Prottzman said at that time that RIC's "potential is so outstanding" that he hoped it would become an official extension center this fall, and then take steps to become a host institution to end the "cross enrolling."

"We're already two years ahead of schedule because of our increased enrollment," Prottzman said.

He explained that they were only supposed to be teaching freshman courses

RIC Team Wins History Assn. Award

George H. Kellner and J. Stanley Lemons of the history department have received an award of merit for their multi-image production, "Providence: A Century of Greatness, 1832-1932."

The award from the American Association for State and Local History is the highest given in its national competition for local history achievement.

This marks the first time the award has come to Rhode Island College, Lemons said.

Kellner and Lemons were chosen from among 125 nominees.

The award was announced at the AASLH annual convention Sept. 14-18 in Williamsburg, Va.

Presentation of the award will be made at the Steven Hopkins House in Providence at a date and time to be announced.

Kellner and Lemons created their prize-winner during the 1978-79 academic year with the aid of a $15,000 grant from the Rhode Island Committee for the Humanities, and a similar amount of in-kind support from the college.

Using the newly-acquired multi-image equipment of the RIC Audio Visual Department, they created a rapidly moving visual interpretation of Providence's history from the time the city was chartered to the onset of the Great Depression.

The presentation requires use of nine projectors, three screens, a stereophonic sound system and special programming and dissolve controls, Lemons said.

The sound track uses the voices of a number of faculty and staff at the college as well as ragtime, full brass band and vocal music.

Dr. Francis Marciniak scored an old march written to honor a Rhode Island governor in 1913, in a ragtime number used as the signature music for the production.

Dr. Robert Boberg gave piano renderings of a number of Rhode Island tunes for background music, and Lucian Olivier sang a 1907 vaudeville number.

Local radio personality Sherm Strickhouser narrated the script, and Hans Erik Wennberg programmed the 715 slides in sequence and style.

"Because 'Providence' is both a general history and a scholarly interpretation of a city, it has been able to stimulate both the professional historian and the enthusiast of local history as well as general audiences," Lemons said.

The presentation was first shown at the Museum of Rhode Island History in June of 1979 to overflow audiences. A request from the mayor of Providence to show it on Providence Heritage Day followed.

It has been shown at RIC, City Hall,

Central Congregational Church, Bryant College Alumni Weekend, the New England Historical Association, League of Rhode Island Historical Societies and as part of an orientation program to the leadership conference of the Greater Providence Area Chamber of Commerce.

Kellner and Lemons are writing an illustrated history of the state under the sponsorship of the Rhode Island Historical Society.

The book, entitled Rhode Island: The Independent State, will be published in 1982 in conjunction with the 150th anniversary of Providence receiving its city charter.

The AASLH is a nonprofit educational organization with a membership of 7,500 persons. It includes institutions in the United States and Canada.

Comerford: Be Safe, Not Sorry

The security and safety department has reissued its recommendations for personal safety, particularly for the benefit of new students, staff and faculty.

The recommendations will help ensure personal safety through prevention and through information about services available, Richard M. Comerford, director, said.

During the past year, lighting in many parking areas has been added, and emergency telephones have been installed in classroom buildings so that anyone can contact security in an emergency or to request an escort, Comerford said.

The escort service was instituted last year after an attack on a student in an area next to the campus.

WRIC, the campus radio station, conducts the service in conjunction with the security and safety department and the office of the vice president for student affairs.

Anyone wishing escort service may arrange for it at the Student Union or by calling Ext. 400.

The service provides student escorts Mondays through Thursdays from 4:30 p.m. to 10:15 p.m. Service members will escort female students from classes to dorms or other points on campus.

While the escort service is still in effect, there are staffing problems and more escorts are needed.

Calls to security can be made from the following outside emergency phones which connect directly:

— Information booth at the south end of parking lot B and College Road;

— West wall of Donovan Dining Center across from the side entrance of the Student Union;

Deadlines for Grants, Sponsored Projects Announced

Applications are invited for new projects under the Fullbright-Hays Training Grants — Faculty Research Abroad; Foreign Curriculum Consultants; Group Projects Abroad; and Doctoral Dissertation Research Abroad program.

The purpose of the awards is to improve and develop modern foreign language and area studies in the educational structure of the U.S.

Awards are granted to the institution of higher education.

The applications deadline is Nov. 20.

The German Marshall Fund is awarding fellowships to establish scholars and professionals whose research might contribute to a better understanding of problems common to industrialized societies.

Each project must include the U.S. and at least one European country. Topic priorities include: international economic interdependence; European-American relations; employment policies; labor market problems; labor-management issues; equal employment opportunity policies for women; employment and civil rights issues related to migrants; administration of criminal justice; urban economic development; and public participation in development and implementation of policy.

The application deadline is Nov. 30.

The National Endowment for the Humanities provides support for humanistic projects developed and conducted by youth, including educational projects,

Discussion Moderator

Dr. P. William Hutchinson of the communications and theatre department will moderate a panel-audience discussion following a performance of "The Freud/Jung Letters: A Mythological Clash of Youth and Age" tonight in Gage Auditorium.

A What's News at RIC article last week reported that Professor Hutchinson would narrate the performance/discussion.

humanistic research, media presentations, and community programs.

The application deadline for Youth-grants is Nov. 16.

The National Institute of Health offers research grants in two categories, New Research Project Grants which support basic, clinical and behavioral research projects in all fields related to health, and New Investigator Research Awards, which support special research grants for relatively inexperienced investigators, with research ideas in areas of special emphasis identified by the NIH institutes.

Awards are restricted to individuals who have not previously been PHS-supported principal investigators. The NIH institutes that have areas that might be of interest to Rhode Island College applicants include, the Institute on Aging, and the Institute of Child Health and Human Development.

The application deadline for both types of awards is Nov. 1, 1981.

The National Institute of Mental Health awards regular research grants to institutions on behalf of principal investigators who have designed and will direct a specific project. Information has been requested by the Bureau for research awards to be made in the following areas: Crime and Delinquency; Mental Health and the Aging; Prevention and Control of Rape; Psychosocial Treatments; and Work and Mental Health. The application deadline for research grants is Nov. 1, 1981.

The Rhode Island Foundation reviews proposals on a quarterly basis, accepting the first 40 proposals prior to each meeting. The Oct. 6 review is already filled and 32 proposals have already been submitted for the January meeting. If you are considering the Foundation as a funding source for a proposal, I suggest that you submit your application as early as possible. There will be another quarterly review in April.

For more information on any of these programs, contact the Bureau of Grants and Sponsored Projects.

Focus on the Faculty and Staff

Rose C. Merenda, assistant professor at the Henry Barnard School, presented a paper entitled "Children's Art as a Reflection of Cultural-Social-Political Factors" in Taipei, Taiwan, in August. She was attending the joint meeting of the second Asian conference of the International Association for Cross-Cultural Psychology and the first Asian conference of the International Council of Psychologists.

Dr. Alexander H. Cornell, professor of economics and management, participated recently in Brown University's discussions of "Atlantic Security." Brown was host to 18 cabinet, professional and media representatives from 15 nations. Cornell introduced his book on "International Collaboration in the Management and Organization of Co-development and Co-production of Weapons by NATO allies — 10 years Later and Beyond."

Dr. P. William Hutchinson, professor of theatre, will perform "Recollections of Clarence Darrow" at Grace Church Center for the Arts on Mathewson Street in Providence on Oct. 10 and 11 at 8 p.m. The one-hour one-man show explores the civil libertarian issues.

Center on Aging Plans Contest For Children

"Realizing its responsibilities to engender greater community awareness of the importance of developing healthy attitudes toward the aging and aged," the Rhode Island College Gerontology Center is sponsoring a contest for children throughout the state.

Using art forms, students in grades four through eight will express their attitudes toward aging, death and dying.

Original works regarding the children's conceptions of aging, death and dying will be judged and cash prizes awarded at a fair/conference in February.

The theme of the fair will be "Children and the Elderly."

In addition to individual entries, classroom and group multi-dimensional projects will be encouraged and rewarded with-cash prizes.

Announcement of the contest is being mailed to schools now. Deadline for submitting entries is Dec. 14. the fair/conference is set for Feb. 19.

Dr. Gamal Zaki, director of the gerontology center, said a growing interest has developed in studying the attitudes of children toward aging, the elderly, death and dying.

Co-sponsors of the contest are the Providence Journal-Bulletin, WEAN Radio, and the Rhode Island Department of Elementary and Secondary Education, Office of Higher Education, Department of Elderly Affairs, Art Association, Council of Teachers of English, Federation of Teachers, Music Educators Association, and the Foster Grandparents Program.

Notes From Bernadette

By Bernadette V. Small

Our graphic artist and resident water-colorist, Spencer Crooks, is out of the hospital and back at work on a part-time basis. Looks great and feels great! He is located in Alger 211.

Those of you who remember Ralph D'Amico, former affirmative action officer at RIC, would be interested to know that he and his wife, Nancy, have a new son, Ralph B. D'Amico.

He was born on Sept. 23 and weighed 7 lbs., 8 oz. Those wishing to send congratulations should mail them to: 173 Salem St., Reading, Mass., 01867.

Drs. Elaine and James Magyar of the department of physical sciences are parents of a baby boy, Andrew Parsons Magyar, born on Sept. 27. Mother and son are doing fine. Congratulations can be sent to them at 57 Forbes St., Providence, R.I., 02908.

Erik R. Viens and Carolyn J. Miller were married on Sept. 26 in Barrington. Erik, a chemical engineer with Dupont in Nashville, Tenn., is the son of Shirley and Robert Viens. Shirley is secretary to Kathryn Sasso in the office of conferences. Robert is an associate professor in the department of physical sciences. Erik's new wife was recently voted the outstanding marketing major in the Northeast by Suffolk University.

The newlyweds will live in Nashville.

John Ricci, employed many years at RIC in the housekeeping department, died on Sept. 24 after a long illness. He was the brother of Mrs. Mary Luzzi, secretary to Provost Eleanor McMahon. The condolences of the campus community go to his family.

Sociology Group To Elect, Organize

There will be an election/organizational meeting of the Student Sociology Organization tomorrow at noon in the Sociology Lounge, Craig Lee, Fourth Floor. All students interested in sociology are urged to attend. You don't have to be a sociology major or minor, advisor William Aho said.

Grants and Awards

Dr. Patrick J. O'Regan, professor of mathematics, has been named project director of a National Science Foundation grant of $27,618 to teach teachers how to teach problem-solving more effectively.

The project, which will have a team of four faculty members from the departments of elementary and secondary education, mathematics and the Henry Barnard School, is designed to revise an existing mathematical problem-solving course and to provide a problem-solving experience for students preparing to teach. They, in turn, can transfer this experience to their own classrooms in grades three through algebra.

A team of faculty, and teachers from the Providence public schools, will revise the present problem-solving course offered by the mathematics department.

The team also will develop materials on teaching problem-solving which can be used in the methodology courses offered by the departments of elementary and secondary education. These materials will be developed in conjunction with Providence public school teachers.

A number of special projects will be conducted in the schools as part of this development.

The project will also sponsor a statewide conference on teaching problem-solving. The grant is for a two-year period.

SUE Throws A Party

Student Union Events threw a 14th birthday party for itself recently, capping off the celebration with a cake large enough to serve 1,000 persons.

RIC's president was there and so, it seemed, was everyone else, as music and balloons filled the air befitting a festive occasion.

Series Subject: 'Hidden Minorities'

"Hidden Minorities" will be the subject of a Rhode Island College Lecture Series from Oct. 14 to Dec. 2.

Dr. Rudolph Vecoli, director of the Immigration History Research Center at the University of Minnesota, will give the first lecture, "Ethnicity in America: Mosaic or Melting Pot?" on Oct. 14.

All lectures begin at noon in the Amos Lecture Hall in the Clarke Science Building, Room 125.

The advent of the series coincides with the release of a book entitled "Hidden Minorities: The Persistence of Ethnicity in American Life," edited by Dr. Joan H. Rollins, professor of psychology at RIC.

Professor Rollins also wrote an overview of the problem of hidden minorities in the first chapter of the book which is due to be published this month by the University Press of America in Washington, D.C.

Professor Rollins said all profits from the sale of the book will go to the Ethnic Studies Project at RIC. Dr. Carmela E. Santoro is director of the project.

Other lecturers, their subjects, and dates are:

Dr. Frank A. Stone, professor of international education at the University of Connecticut, "Armenians of North America," Oct. 21;

Marlene Koury Smith, executive director of Rhode Island Common Cause, "Syrian and Lebanese Communities in Rhode Island," Oct. 28;

Dr. Ethel Boissevain, associate professor emeritus of anthropology at the Herbert Lehman College of the City University of New York, "New England Indian Identity Persistence," Nov. 4;

Dr. Ellen Ginsburg, assistant professor of anthropology at RIC, "Cape Verdean Americans," Nov. 6;

Dr. Onesimo Almeida, assistant professor of Portuguese studies and Azorean civilization at Brown University, "Portuguese/Azoreans in New England," Nov. 18;

Dr. Tony Teng, associate professor of history at RIC, "The Hmong in Rhode Island," Dec. 2.

All lectures are free and open to the public.

Summer Rolls Down Slightly

Summer Sessions enrollment at RIC this year was slightly lower than last year — 2,960 compared to 2,987, Dr. William A. Small, session director, has reported.

Graduate student enrollment declined while undergraduate rolls increased, he said.

Some 257 sections were scheduled between May 26 and Aug. 13, with 32 being canceled because of insufficient registration. Average enrollment was 15 students a section.

Some 50 "early bird" courses and workshops were also offered and averaged more than 17 persons in 47 of these.

Activities included a music festival, cabaret, summer theatre for children, Henry Barnard Summer Camp, recreation program, gymnastics school, picnic and two overseas workshops.

In addition, the continuing education division sponsored a successful Elderhostel program in June.

Staff Assn.

Elects Gilfillan

John P. Gilfillan, director of tutorial services, was elected president of the Rhode Island College Staff Association at its Sept. 23 meeting.

Others elected to serve for the 1981-82 year are: William H. Hurry, director of financial aid and student employment, vice president; Patricia T. Stevens, staff assistant in the school of continuing education and community services, secretary; and Robert F. Paolo, accountant in the accounting office, treasurer.

Elected departmental representatives are: Ken Binder, Linda McEnery, Trish Parish and William Swighart, academic affairs; Allyson Fraille and Joseph Ingegneri, administrative affairs; Audrey Hefner, business offices; Kathryn Sasso, college advancement; and Gail Davis and Cherie Withrow, student affairs.

Alumni Assn. Plans Trip to Peru

The Rhode Island College Alumni Association is sponsoring a "Peruvian Adventure" March 13-20, it was announced today by Holly L. Shadoian, alumni director.

Cost of the trip is about $1,200 and varies slightly, depending whether you leave from New York or Boston. The price includes air fare, accommodations, (double occupancy), meals and chartered transport on site.

Departure is March 13 from either Boston or New York to Miami and from there via Faucett Peruvian Airlines jet flight to Iquitos, Peru's "Atlantic Port."

For further information contact the alumni office.

Facility Management To Be Discussed

Dr. Robert H. Sigholtz, manager of the Robert F. Kennedy Stadium — District of Columbia Armory Complex, will discuss facility management in a colloquium at the Student Union, Oct. 14 at 3 p.m.

Sigholtz, who is a member of the board of directors of the International Association of Auditorium Managers, also will discuss academic studies as preparation for facilities management.

Sigholtz was chairman of the federal investigation team that analyzed "The Who" incident at Riverfront Stadium in Cincinnati, and published recommendations to prevent similar incidents.

For further information, call Lynn Singleton at Ext. 8045.

Safety Tips

— Front of Walsh Gym on south end of building.

Numbers for security and safety are Ext. 8201 or Ext. 201.

The following recommendations for your safety when walking are:

- 1) "Safety in numbers." Have a friend join you.
- 2) If you go out at night alone, notify a friend where you will be and what route you will be taking.
- 3) Stay in well-lighted areas at night.
- 4) Stay in areas where other people are close by and can give you assistance.
- 5) Avoid wooded or dimly lit areas on the campus, and off.
- 6) If it necessary to go into an area that might be a hazard, call security or WRIC escort service.
- 7) Report all persons acting suspiciously to security and safety immediately.
- 8) Report all criminal acts as soon as possible and wait for the security officer to respond so that a report and immediate action can be taken.

Unreported offenses encourage the attacker to strike again.

9) The longest route is sometimes the safest. Don't take shortcuts through areas that are not well traveled.

10) Cooperate with the security and safety department and the local police in prosecuting criminal suspects that have been apprehended. Only with your assistance can the college have a safe and crime-free atmosphere.

11) If you see a criminal act while walking, do not become directly involved. If it is a physical assault, you can keep your distance and scream to try to scare the assailant away and to attract the attention of others in the area. If a vehicle is being used, try to get the registration number and description of the assailant and notify security as soon as possible.

12) Do not hitchhike or accept rides from strangers.

College officials have termed RIC "a fairly safe campus" but said precautions should be taken considering the size of the campus and its location in a metropolitan area.

Digging into his work...

ROTC

this year "but due to the large turnout" they are also teaching sophomore and junior courses.

"At the rate RIC is going, next year we'll have more seniors graduating (and receiving commissions) than PC," he said.

The Army requires four graduates after a three-year cycle to create an extension center. RIC will be graduating 25 men and women, he said.

Advertisements of RIC's ROTC program have already appeared in weekly newspapers, including The Anchor.

The Chronicle of Higher Education reported recently that as ROTC regains its popularity on many campuses, the Pentagon plans more scholarships.

Pentagon officials say they will award 8,500 Army ROTC scholarships — an increase of 2,000 over last year.

Upon graduation from college and the ROTC program of advanced studies, cadets are commissioned in the Army as second lieutenants.

Workshop Focuses on Counseling

"An innovative, educational experience" best describes a summer workshop for the handicapped held on Prudence Island.

The workshop brought together 15 students and three faculty members representing three academic disciplines (counseling, sociology and psychology) for seven days of learning and actual experience of what it means to be handicapped.

Dr. Mary Ann Hawkes, Dr. John Evans and Dr. Phillip S. Very joined Michael Nordstrom, peer counselor for the handicapped at RIC, in this first off-campus offering for the handicapped.

The group dealt with such questions as "What are the strains on the family of a handicapped person?" and "What significant differences or commonalities do the handicapped share with non-handicapped?"

A postscript: Professor Evans, Patricia Ferreira and Nordstrom have since appeared on Channel 10's "WELCOME" show with Sara Wye to discuss the workshop entitled "Counseling with the Handicapped."

'Oedipus' Showing Slated This Week

Oedipus the King, a 96-minute film featuring Christopher Plummer, Lilli Palmer, Cyril Cusack, Orson Welles and Donald Sutherland, will be shown in Gaige Auditorium tomorrow, Wednesday and Thursday.

Members of the college community, especially faculty and students in History 110 and English 101, are invited to the showing by the English Department Western Literature Coordinating Committee.

The 1968 film will be shown tomorrow at noon, Wednesday at 4 and 8 p.m. and Thursday at noon.
