Hume’s Purchases for the Library of the Faculty of Advocates

The following is an Appendix to my article: ‘Two Lost Items of Humeana’, published in The Library. The Appendix transcribes the image of National Library of Scotland, F. R. 118—the ‘Register of the Proceedings of the Curators and Keeper’ of the Library of the Faculty of Advocates—reproduced by Dickson in 1932 and Hillyard in 1989. With the minor exceptions noted in my article, this is now the only extant source of Hume’s purchases for the Library of the Faculty of Advocates. The list follows a template adopted earlier in the Register: the left hand column lists the number of the item in a dealer’s printed catalogue, the right hand columns list its price in pounds, shillings, and pence. Thomas Osborne issued several printed catalogues in c. 1754, but the numeration adopted in the Register below does not match that used in any extant catalogue. A catalogue issued by Osborn in 1753–4 includes several items in the Register at the same price, but with a different numeration for the item; for example, the catalogue lists a copy of Henry Coventry’s Philemon to Hydaspes (London, 1742), priced at 4s., but with the item number 8277. In the Register, the same work at the same price is listed with the item number 4574.¹ In lieu of the exact catalogue used by Hume, I have used the catalogue of 1753–4 to assist in the identification of the entries in the Register. These identifications are enclosed in [square brackets]. Where the catalogue is unavailing, I have identified a copy in the National Library of Scotland which fits the description of the entry in the Register. The latter is not necessarily a copy which derives from the Library of the Faculty of Advocates. The use of an approximation (\approx) sign denotes either that the identification of the title is a surmise or that the identification of the edition of the title is a surmise. With the exception of the three notations mentioned in my article, the manuscript is not in Hume’s hand.
