Report of Engineers.

The board of engineers submit the following report:

No general alarm has been given during the year.

Still alarms have been attended to as follows:

Apr	7	Joseph Deyo's,	brush,	slight damage.
	12	Boldt, Barber and others,	“	“
	12	Shaw,	“	“
May	17	Duggan, Pike and others,	“	“
	19	Whittaker,	“	“
Apr	16	Old fair grounds,	“	“
July	13	Taylor's, near depot,	“	“

We would recommend that the pipe system in the village be improved from time to time by larger pipe laid below the frost line.

For the ordinary expenses, would recommend that five hundred dollars be raised and appropriated.

REPORT of THE PUBLIC LIBRARY and READING ROOM.

LIBRARY.

Total circulation for the year, 15,145, as follows:

Fiction,	10,570
Miscellaneous,	1,034
Magazines,	3,541
Largest monthly issue, March,		1,537 volumes
Smallest " " November,		941 "
Largest daily issue, Saturday, Feb. 13, 1909,		208 "

The first time in the history of the library when more than 200 books were issued in one day, the largest previous circulation being 189.

Number of new books purchased, 305 volumes

Divided as follows:—

Fiction,	214 volumes
Miscellaneous,	91	"

Gifts to the library are gratefully acknowledged as follows: R. A. Clogher, 9 volumes; Mrs. John Goodhue, 3 volumes; Rev. J. R. Weakley, 1 volume; Henry Richardson, 1 volume; also 3 volumes of poems from the author, Geo. L. Raymond.

A considerable number of books which were in a dilapidated condition, have been rebound, thus fitting them for circulation.

Balance on hand February 15, 1909,	$10 77

The small number of books issued in November is accounted for by the fact that during that month the library was closed for ten days because of an outbreak of small pox in the town, and the circulation was considerably diminished after re-opening, from fear of contagion.

The interest in the public library continues unabated, the circulation of books having increased by several hundred in the year just ended. We believe the public library to be of inestimable value, as a means of profit and pleasure in our homes, and also as an educational factor, to the pupils in our schools, as both teachers and pupils have frequent access to books of reference, etc.

During the year, we were unfortunate in losing, by his removal from town, Rev. D. L. Fisher, who had for several years, rendered valuable service on the library committee.

The recent appointment of Mr. F. S. Leonard to fill the vacancy, is a source of satisfaction to the remaining members, as the selection of books to be purchased, their preparation for circulation, and the many details necessary to its successful management, demand a full library committee.

It has been our aim, as far as possible, to make such selections, with the ever efficient aid of the librarian, as are best suited to the place, and the taste of the reading public, always with a willingness to receive any suggestions or advice from patrons of the library.

Respectfully submitted,

MRS. A. A. BAILEY,

H. M. WILDER,

Library Committee.

SUPERINTENDENT'S REPORT.

TO THE SCHOOL BOARD, HINSDALE, N. H.:—

It is a matter of considerable pleasure to me to hand you herewith the first report from a supervisor of schools in your town. And as it is the first report of this kind which has ever been presented, certain matters may properly be spoken of which would be more out of place in districts longer established.

This matter will deal with certain aspects of the work of supervision; the purposes, plans of, and results to be accomplished by, such work in your town.

First of all it is desired to set plainly before you and the town whose schools are under your charge some statements designed to lead to a general and intelligent cooperation with the work of a supervisor. Cooperation with various people cannot be of permanent value unless it be intelligent; it cannot be efficient unless it becomes rather general.

The work of supervision is chiefly executive in nature and there are certain distinct ends to be accomplished by it,—the organizing and grading of the public schools as an effective system for mind training; the securing of competent teachers who can carry out the work desired; the oversight and encouragement of these teachers and informing them as to the best and quickest methods of work; the furnishing to schools of a regulated systematic course of study in each subject for each year; a close planning for the equipment of our schools so that much may be done with comparatively small expense; an oversight of the working of the scholars in their class rooms, so that, if possible, proper and effective work may be done; a general care for the discipline of the schools.

In order that the schools of a town may be effective, that they may actually accomplish the feat of training a brain to think for itself and grow, instead of the reverse, they must be organized into a system. The basal principles of such a system are these: first, a careful grading of the pupils according to ability to work, rather than according to age or length of time they have attended school. This grading is usually made on the basis of arithmetic. Second, taking means to see that the pupils of each grade are receiving, during their stay in each grade, the proper quality and amount of instruction, given by the most approved methods. Third, supplying to the teachers outlines of study to follow in the prosecution of their work with the grade. More will be said of these outlines later.

This organization is the work of the superintendent chiefly. But the supreme need of any business organization is skilled workmen; and this is the second object mentioned as being essential in the work of supervision. A school system is as deserving as any other enterprise of being considered purely as a business proposition. We cannot organize it as a public charity. Not every person who wishes to teach is a skilled teacher and it is not a paying proposition to hire teachers merely because they wish to earn a convenient livelihood.

But it is a necessary corollary to the above statement that it requires skilled wages to get skilled workmen. The thing of prime importance, before anything else receives consideration, is to secure teachers who can teach. As is the teacher so is the school. And it would only be a business proposition could some of our most deserving teachers be paid wages sufficient to induce them to remain continually in their present positions, and that a sufficient salary be attached to the more important positions to secure the best teachers for them. Such teachers can and are commanding good wages and we want that kind; but if they are to come and remain with us, the inducement will need to be that we can pay them more than they are now getting. The time will likely sometime come when unskilled teachers will not be permitted to practise on the brains of pupils any more than ignorant physicians are allowed to practise on their bodies. A technical training is not all there is to skill; some of our present force are not normal trained, but are highly efficient. We are simply asking business men to consider the school question in business earnest, without sentiment; and it is both unbusiness-like and careless to entrust our childrens' minds to teachers not most carefully selected.

Common sense comes high in the markets of the world, and generally we are willing to pay for it and call it a good bargain; teachers need also a large supply.

The amount of absence and tardiness in our schools is surprisingly great. It seems as if parents would not permit their children to be unnecessarily absent from a session of school if they realized the harm done to the child thereby.

We have our schools in operation from 170 to 180 school days a year. When we deduct the holidays and the days wasted at the beginning of the term and at its close, the available working school days are not far from 160 per year. When one stops to think of how much a child must master if he is to take any proper place in the world and only 160 days in the year in which to do it, it is evident that the child cannot lose many of these days out of school and yet amount to much in his education. Furthermore, the records of the teachers show that these pupils who are most absent are also most backward in their studies; a fact which speaks for itself. No one disputes the value of arithmetic, reading, in this world of ours; nor of history and English grammar. These things cannot be taught to a child on the street or even while doing errands. If every parent would guarantee the school officials that the child in his charge would spend 160 days per year in school, the school officials would be willing to guarantee that child advancement and education; and they would give bond that schools would amount to something. It is much to be desired that parents and all interested in our schools cooperate with the teachers and other officers in securing prompt and constant attendance of children.

The last mentioned objects of supervision, the courses of study and instruction of teachers is being carried on by your supervisor in the following ways,—written outlines of subjects to be taught in each grade and by teachers' meetings.

I have been considerably occupied during the past three months in developing outlines of study. These give each teacher a line to hew to, and contain, definitely stated, the amount of matter to be taught in each grade. These are designed to secure the extremely close connection between successive grades so that a pupil shall lose nothing in passing from one grade to another; but that, in each lower grade his instruction shall be so carefully planned that it shall be the exact thing needed for his best progress in the next higher grade. These outlines contain besides, suggestions to teachers concerning methods of teaching and results to be expected from work properly done. These outlines have been furnished to all the teachers in Arithmetic and Geography: to the lower grades in reading. The district schools have also been supplied. More of these outlines are in preparation and will be in the hands of the teachers soon.

I have planned in carrying out in Hinsdale a series of teachers' meetings, to be held once a month, usually on Fridays at 3.30 P. M. At these meetings subjects are discussed which would seem to be particularly helpful to teachers in their work; methods of teaching are explained; the ends to be reached by instruction; the way a child's mind should be treated by an intelligent teacher. It is hoped that these meetings may be a source of great help to teachers in advancing their schools and an inspiration as well. It is also hoped that any person in town who is interested in methods of school management will come and join in the discussion.

I have visited the schools in town each week, and given as much time in such visiting as seemed consistent with the amount of clerical work which needed to be done at the same time to place the schools on a permanently organized basis. The district schools have not received as much of my attention as I would have wished, owing to the imperative needs of the village schools, and I felt that as a beginning must be made at the nearest point and systematically extended, I have devoted considerable time to these. However, I have tried not to neglect the outside schools and have had conferences with their teachers, supplied them with courses of study, and visited them as often as I could.

The problem of creating an effective high school, in every sense of the word, is receiving the most careful thought of your superintendent and principal. The report of the principal herewith included, is worthy of your attention. The improvement of a high school lies along the general lines of more effective equipment of the manual and technical portions of the course of study, and the urging of efficient handling of the course by both teachers and students. Regarding the former it may be said that under the manual and technical portions of a course of study are included all subjects which can train the thinking power of a pupil by means of his hand work. Such are the natural sciences, practical work in book keeping and commercial studies, construction work along the lines of mechanics; all of which is not necessarily a call for manual training as generally understood, but the effort to make it possible for a student to understand the laws of the natural and business world, in which he must get his bread and butter, by constructing his own apparatus and operating it, and learning to depend on himself.

I cannot conclude this report without expressing my genuine gratitude to the teachers of your town, who without exception have been most faithful in their endeavor to second my plans. It is on these teachers that the success of supervision depends. My thanks are due in great measure to the school board, who have been generous in their provision for material for new plans of work and cordial in their attitude toward this new work.

It is most earnestly desired by the committee, superintendent and teachers, that parents and any interested, feel personally invited to come into the schools. If there is any criticism to be made, any desire to know what is being done, any help to be given, it can be accomplished better in school than outside and is all welcome. Our schools are in every sense of the word. public, and the public is cordially invited to them.

Respectfully submitted,

H. HOWARD PRATT.

PRINCIPAL'S REPORT.

TO THE SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS AND MEMBERS OF THE SCHOOL BOARD.

The attendance of your High School for the half year ending January 29, 1909, is as follows:—total number enrolled 38, average attendance 33. One pupil has left town, one has left school because of ill health, and one to go to work.

The curricula which are being followed are appended to this report. Several changes were made at the beginning of the year. One of these changes makes it possible for a pupil to take a full English curriculum without taking latin in the first year. Other changes are contemplated looking to yet more practical curricula.

A table, such as is used in the best laboratories, and considerable apparatus has been added to the physics laboratory equipment. The policy of increasing the equipment of the science department by the addition of some permanent apparatus each year will greatly increase its efficiency and at the same time keep it up to the state requirements.

One of the needs of our school is a well equipped gymnasium. It is much better for pupils to be engaged in some good exercise during intermissions than to remain in the school room. Not only is it physically beneficial for pupils to take exercise but because of it they can do more and better school work.

Pupils and parents should bear in mind that but a limited amount of time is available for study in the high school. A pupil of average ability should spend at least two hours per day in home study. The tendency of pupils and parents to overlook this difference between the Grammar School and the High School work is the cause of many failures. Unless the pupil has regular and uninterrupted hours of study at home, the best results cannot be attained. Pupils should feel that this school work is their business, and that it is their duty to attend to business, and parents are urged to see that their children make a business of their school work.

Respectfully Submitted,

CHARLES L. CLEMENT, Principal.

SUPERVISOR of DRAWING.

---

MR. HOWARD PRATT,
SUPERVISOR OF SCHOOLS.

Dear Sir:—Through this report I wish to bring before the public, the aim and plan of the work in drawing. Progress and results can be observed to the best advantage by visiting the schools.

In all the grades during the fall, nature is taught with pencil. The material used in drawing, are grasses, flower and fruit sprays, autumn foliage and vegetables. A step in advance is given with colored crayons or water color. Cutting out of paper is introduced in the primary grades as a preliminary to pencil drawing.

At Christmas time, gifts were made in simple decorated cards, paper baskets, picture frames, calendars and pillow covers. This work enables the intermediate and grammar grades to apply original designs obtained from the fall work in nature drawing. A process of block printing was applied to Christmas gifts in the intermediate grades, and stenciled designs in the grammar grades.

Printing is being taught in correlation with the school work, from the fourth to ninth grade inclusive.

Since January first the work has progressed in pencil drawing of common objects, as bowl, pitcher, cup and saucer, bean pot, etc; by this study, the child gains power to draw what he sees with an understanding of the principles of foreshortened ellipsis, perspective is introduced in the drawing of a chalk box, strawberry basket, and books placed at an angle showing two sides of an object with the top face. This work proves to the child that parallel lines seen at an angle, will converge—a principle most essential to correct representation.

The little ones are constructing furnishings for a doll's house along with pencil drawings of play objects which are used as the leading subject in an imaginative picture.

The spring work will bring paper cutting as a preliminary to the pencil in the primary grades, and the pencil in the upper grades from the human figure. Drawing from the live fowl or animal will also be given, completing with the bud and flower sprays in pencil and color.

More time is given this year to pencil study for accurate detail work with less to color, though the latter receives enough attention to give a knowledge of its right use and appreciation.

You will observe that manual training has been omitted in the plan of work, though the writer believes it is most essential to public school education.

It is not drawing when a child weaves a rug or makes a school bag from knotting cord, or whittles a paper knife out of wood but this manual work strengthens drawing in measurement and proportion, and above all, in the use of the hands. A pupil is better qualified to find his place in the world and to enjoy life in a broader way, because of his knowledge of the simple principles of the trades.

Knowledge of working drawing is deemed essential to manual training and will be taught in the public schools this spring.

The High School is doing good work in design applied to useful objects, also in charcoal drawing of grouped objects as vase and bowl.

The pupils are showing much interest and progress in their work this year. Improvement is evident in every respect over the results achieved last year.

We aim to uplift and awaken the child to the beauty in nature through the drawing of the flower. A knowledge of color is gained, which teaches color harmony in the dress, with color blending in the home. Design is made practical in application to useful objects, teaching how to beautify common things.

Drawing from the human figure in quick sketches teaches concentration, action and proportion. Good printing is useful in the child's education, as it teaches proportion, accuracy and design.

At the close of school education we hope this work will have aided the pupil to a brighter, broader life.

I wish to thank the teachers for their loyalty in the work.

Respectfully submitted,

LILLIAN V. WHITING,

Supervisor of Drawing.
