

Migrated guidewire: an unusual cause for recurrent aural polyps

ABSTRACT

Aural polyps are secondary to multiple ear pathologies, most commonly inflammatory or cholesteatoma related. Here, we present a rare case of recurrent aural polyps caused by guidewire migration into the middle ear with serious systemic complications and our attempts at removal.

Keyword: Aural polyp; Bacteremia; Computed tomography; Guidewire