HTC Distinguished Teacher-Scholar

Jen E. Boyle, Ph.D.

Professor, Department of English

Jen Boyle's teaching and writing explores "new" media; bodies and technology; and theories of virtual and material networks, from the 17th century to the digital present. She is the recipient of teaching awards and of grants and fellowships from Brown University and the Folger Institute, among others. She is the author or editor of three books, as well as multiple articles, chapters and new media installations. She earned an M.A. in comparative literature and a Ph.D. in English from the University of California, Irvine. Samples of her work can be found at, <http://jenboyle.squarespace.com/>.

This is life. Connect with it.

HTC Distinguished Teacher-Scholar Lecture Series

The intent of the HTC Distinguished Teacher-Scholar Lecture Series is to recognize annually a Coastal Carolina University faculty member who has distinguished himself or herself as a teacher, scholar and communicator. The awardee is an individual who embodies the University's teacher-scholar ideal of searching for and transmitting knowledge through critical inquiry and teaching in his or her discipline and who supports and appreciates critical inquiry and teaching in the other disciplines of the University. The committee that recommends selection of the awardee is unique in that it comprises faculty members and representatives from the student body, staff and administration.
