

Subtitling And Loss Of Meaning: Politeness Features In Pièces D'identité/ID

A thesis submitted to the Faculty of Humanities, University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg, in fulfilment of the requirement for the degree of Master of Arts in the field of Translation.

Johannesburg 2007

Abstract

This research investigates the extent to which constraints of time space and synchrony in the subtitling of cultural features lead to loss in meaning, in particular loss of politeness features, and the effect of such loss on the message deciphered by the subtitle viewer, in the film Pièces d'identité/ID (1998), by Mweze Ngangura. It also explores why, given such loss, audiences of subtitled films still continue to watch, enjoy and understand subtitled films as viewers of the original sound language do. It starts by looking at constraints in subtitling which compel subtitler to deliberately sacrifice meaning in text, then the relationship between language, culture and translation with focus on the translation of politeness features, and evokes the difficulties involved in the translation of cultural elements. The theory applied in this research is that on language, culture and translation and its application also takes account of the constraints of time, space and synchrony under which the subtitler's task is set.

Acknowledgement

It takes a village to raise a child. I may be the author of this work but I will forever remain indebted to the following.

To God Almighty whose Miracles kept working in the most difficult times in the writing process and whose promise of hope kept me alive as I sought his path, help and guidance. I declare O Lord that I was nobody without You and in You I became somebody. Amen

To my Supervisor and Head of Department, Dr Elizabeth (Libby) Anne Meintjes “Mrs No-nonsense” whose patience and guidance and most importantly, blunt critiques challenged me to work harder. Dear Libby, you might not have realised what you did but it will forever be inscribed in the Good Books in Heaven.

To Prof. Judith Anne Inggs, my Course Coordinator, for her help, advice and guidance, but most especially for her course on Special Language Skills which greatly helped in improving my writing skills. If it is good, the credit is yours, if not, then I faltered somewhere.

To Mrs Evelyn Rosaline Philips of Toekomrus in Randfontein, Johannesburg, whose financial and emotional support sustained me in these difficult moments. I am who I am and where I am because of you and in God’s name, only the finest treasures in Heaven are yours.

To Marilyn Thorne, “mother of all students” but above all, my own new mother. She knew and still knows how to make me smile. She shed my pain and motivated me to work harder. Please remember, there is no wage for your kind and sweet heartedness on Earth. Do not relent in your effort to help for it is your appointment and mission on Earth. You are the Secretary of GOD and always will you be.

To Dr. Kadjingulu Mubenga for his guidance and experienced advice. May God continue to use you in this way. The blessings are all yours.

To Dr. Jan -Louis Kruger, Director, School of Languages, North-West University. Your motivation, advice and proposed support gave me the courage to continue when I almost gave up.

To my daughters, “angels of my heart”, Endam and Aliogh Anyele. A father’s job among many others is to show the light and I sought the righteous path. It is hard but the fruit is sweetest at the end. The Thought of you missing me gave me the courage to brave this rocky path and with your love and prayers, I stood up to the challenge.

To my Dad and Mum, Nde and Enjei Anyele for your continuous encouragement “Ya book na ya papa, na ya mamy, na ya woman, na ya family, na ya life”. Thank you mamy and papa for these wise words which gave me a reason to continue when times were so tough.

To the Anyele family worldwide, Tambe, Njang, Abamukong, Anyele, Tikum, Akenji, Sindoh and children for their support and understanding. Your unconditional love, friendship and support gave me the strength to continue.

To my sweet and lovely wife Alice Dimakatso Khoba Anyele for the delicacies she made to sustain my stomach during the writing process. Although I pretended not to listen to you at times, just know that your very enriching advice and sustained support was of great importance. Thank you for understanding and bearing with me during the cold and lonely nights spent during the writing of this research.

To Sue-Ann Anita Foster for her help, support in every way. You knew exactly what to do when I was down.

To the Khoba family for their unconditional love and support.

To my colleagues and friends who in one way or the other, have been instrumental in the completion of this dissertation.

To all of you:

May the God of your father help you; May the Almighty bless you with the blessings of the heavens above, and blessings of the watery depths below, and blessings of the breasts and womb.
