

Bachelor's thesis „Anti-discrimination legislation in practice of social work“ is concerned with the describing of the impact of anti-discrimination legislation in the context of antiopressive approach to social work. Stresses the importance of paradigm of social work (social work as a reform of the social environment) and its potential impact not only on individuals, but on possible reform and upgrading the quality of society's wealth. Anti-discrimination legislation can finally give people, victims of discrimination, and the social workers, who work with victims, the reserve and defence tool. In the meantime it is missing in our legislation.