

A Multidisciplinary Approach to the Prevention of Infant Torticollis and Plagiocephaly

Abstract:

Research suggests that parents are more likely to carry out positioning recommendations from a health care professional than any other source. Occupational therapy practitioners can play an important role in educating parents, caregivers, and healthcare providers about the importance of providing tummy time and limiting infant time spent in baby gear.