phantom pains

| early morning and dim | sunlight, a kaleidoscope – |
|---------------------------------|---------------------------------|
| white spots on white duvet | this is not the first time |
| these hands have twisted and | turned across soft sheets |
| to find soft skin and better | yet, a happy yawn |
| how do you train, wandering | limbs with a mind of their own |
| cool cotton can feel warm, | pliable even if you believe it |
| twenty years of practice turned | muscle memory - a lifetime |
| of repetition, what's harder? | making a habit or breaking one? |
| you never liked surprises | these rituals are honorary |
| how do you preserve a memory | ? you never let it go |
