ASG elections slated; filing begins Feb. 21

By CARL CLAYWORTH

Associated Student Government (ASG) approved the dates for the upcoming election and filled three vacant positions on Congress after barely achieving a quorum in Sunday's special session.

The dates for filing as a candidate are Feb. 21 - March 7, with the primary slated March 26, the general election April 9 and the installation of officers April 16.

Also at the meeting Betty Carol Rogers replaced Hamp Moore as vice president of the senior class, Sherry Sharp became the representative-at-large for Potter College and John Minton was approved as alternate from Potter College to the Academic Council. They will be sworn in at tonight's Congress meeting.

Other nominations were made for the remaining vacancies but were not acted on because the nominees were absent.

As part of election reform, a spending-limit increase was discussed. Steve Yater, ASG president, said an increase was necessary due to "the increasing cost of living."

Mike Inman, junior class president, said he was opposed to any increase because of the limiting effect it could have on some candidates. The candidate's ability to effectively use the $175 maximum amount for primary and general election campaigning is part of the process of showing the students what the individual can do, he said.

Inman suggested that since public financing of elections is a growing local and national issue,

Western granted $30,000 for international studies

By TOM CAUDILL

A project aimed at giving Western's students and faculty a broader perspective of problems common to all people of the world has been funded by a $30,000 grant from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW).

The grant money, received late last September, will provide financial support for a number of programs which will "try to show the universality of man's problems," according to Dr. Paul Corts, chairman of Western's 12-man Committee On Strengthening the International Dimension (COSID).

"We want students and faculty to understand that, no matter where you are in the world, the problems of the people are basically the same...Problems are trans-national, global," he said.

As a result of the grant, Western has initiated a program whereby certain sections of undergraduate, general education courses have added units presenting international aspects of the subject being studied.

The sections of courses offering the international unit were not identified "because we didn't want the students to know they were signing up for a special course," Corts explained.

The sections utilizing special international material were chosen by departments from existing course offerings. Single sections of 10-12 different courses have added the international unit. No new courses or sections of courses were created for the program.

The general purpose of the program, as stated in a written description of various programs funded by the grant, is "to stimulate innovative efforts in Western's current courses which

EMT means the difference between life and death

By CARL CLAYWORTH

Area ambulance attendants and drivers, firemen, policemen and nursing students are receiving training at Western that can mean the difference between life and death to accident victims.

Emergency Medical Transportation (EMT) training, opened to all students this semester for the first time, grew out of requirements of the 1966 National Highway Safety Act.

The program was reinforced by a recent Kentucky law which requires emergency vehicles be specially equipped and ambulance attendants and drivers be qualified through EMT.

Henry Baughman, EMT coordinator and instructor, said the course, offered every fall semester since 1971, was sponsored by Kentucky's Department of Human Resources, Emergency Services Branch.

Through last semester, the course was aimed at qualifying area ambulance drivers through EMT to fulfill state requirements, Baughman said.

For the first time, this semester students taking the course will receive college credit hours, Baughman said. Also, the Kentucky Nursing Association has been petitioned to give continuing education units for nurses taking the course.

Previously, most ambulance service in Kentucky was supplied by mortuaries. The only requirement for many of these ambulance personnel was a valid state drivers license, Baughman said.

With the new ambulance law, shake-ups in ambulance service in Warren County and throughout the state have taken place.

The Warren County Fiscal Court recently passed a proposal to place city-county ambulance service under the administration of the Bowling Green-Warren County Hospital Commission. This new service replaces previous ambulance service provided by area funeral homes.

Bob Kirby, Bowling Green finance director, said the EMT training required under Kentucky law is for a "license conforming service," and that is

Murray vet school bill apparently facing death

The Murray State University veterinary school bill is facing imminent death in the state House of Representatives, according to a story which appeared in the Courier-Journal yesterday.

According to a survey conducted by the newspaper, the House State Government Committee will vote not to send the bill onto the floor for debate. Nine members of the 15-man committee said they would vote to keep the bill, Senate Bill 69, in committee. Two representatives said they would vote to approve the measure, and four were unavailable for comment.

An effort to transfer the bill to the House Education Committee failed earlier this week. Supporters of the legislation thought that committee would be more favorable to the bill.

Although the bill authorizes location of the school at Murray, it provides no funds for construction. Many legislators base their opposition to the bill on the lack of funding, while others say it usurps the authority of the Kentucky Council on Public Higher Education.

Uri Geller

Psychic slated next week

Psychic Uri Geller will present a special lecture-demonstration at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 19, in the Garrett Conference Center Ballroom. The 26-year-old, who first surfaced in headlines in his native

Israel, began demonstrating his unusual psychic abilities, psychokinesis, four years ago. Psychokinesis has been defined as the ability to affect material objects by thought or psycho-energetic forces alone.

Geller's speciality is bending metal by thought and not force. Co-sponsored by the University Lecture Series and Associated Student Government, Geller's performance can be viewed through television monitors located at various points in the ballroom.

Last year, the Stanford Research Institute conducted a study of Geller and has attested to the genuineness of his abilities. His feats include halting a cable car in mid-air and stopping an escalator before journalists and photographers in Munich, Germany, in 1971.

Geller, the son of an officer in the Israeli Army, said he discovered his powers when he was seven years old. It was then, he said, he noticed that the hands of his wristwatch moved when he "wished them to move."

Abortion controversy unheard

Kafoglis, Miller discuss issues

By ALCROSS

More than 75 persons heard State Sen. Frank Miller and State Rep. Nick Kafoglis answer questions on issues facing the state legislature in a meeting at the Newman Center Friday night. The turnout was the largest at any of the representatives' public meetings this year. The meeting, sponsored by the Women's Political Caucus (WPC), included discussion of pieces of legislation in the General Assembly, but an expected controversy on Senate Resolution 9 did not materialize.

SR 9, which calls on the U.S. Congress to pass a constitutional amendment prohibiting abortion, was the topic of a heated discussion between Kafoglis and the anti-abortion Pro-Life Association in a similar meeting earlier this month.

James Wesolowski, spokesman for the group, distributed a news release before the meeting stating the Pro-Life was boycotting the meeting. The next day, Wesolowski "withdrew" the release but said the meeting was still boycotted by the organization.

Patay Sloan, chairwoman of the WPC, said she had anticipated a lively discussion on SR 9, and was surprised that it didn't occur.

Kafoglis said he still opposes the resolution because many hardship cases would be ineligible under the provisions it calls for. He cited rape, incest, and other instances where the mother could not get an abortion since her life was not endangered.

Miller said his vote for the resolution was based "on a strictly moral point." He made no further comment.

Asked about the veterinary school bill now in the House, Kafoglis said it was "premature and unwise" and that he had seen more vote trading on the bill than any other he has seen.

Miller, who sponsored an amendment that would have stopped location of the school at Murray, said the bill was bad because it contained no funds for construction and was not included in the governor's budget.

Other topics brought up in the question-and-answer session included collective bargaining for public employees, reinstatement of the death penalty, free textbooks for high school students, no-fault insurance and choice of the state

Thomas lecture slated

Newton S. Thomas, director of division of equal educational opportunities, will be the principal speaker during Afro-American History Week. He will speak tonight at 8 in Paul L. Garrett Conference Center.

Thomas' talk will be on "Helping America Understand: Brotherhood and the Better Way."

Thomas is originally from Georgetown, and is an alumnus of Western.

The program will start with the Amazing Tones of Joy singing the Negro national anthem "Lift Every Voice and Sing."

Director of Afro-American Studies, J.E. Jones, said there will be a reception after the program at Garrett Conference Center.

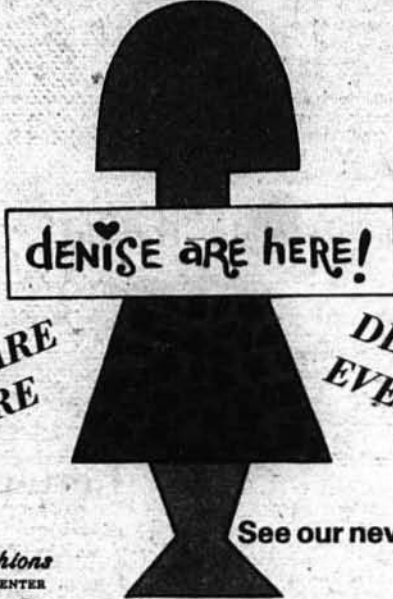

The Center for Intercultural

Studies was inadvertently omitted from the list of co-sponsors of National Negro (Afro-American) History Week in a story in Friday's issue. The Carter G. Woodson Afro-American History Club and the history department are also sponsors. Tonight's program, however, is sponsored solely by the Center for Intercultural Studies.

Sen. Cook to speak

Sen. Marlow Cook (R-Ky.) will speak at a breakfast sponsored by Western's College Republicans at 7:30 Friday morning in the dining room of the university center.

Tickets for the breakfast are $2.50 and may be purchased from a member of the College Republicans.

Herald alters letters policy

Since the beginning of the Fall 1973 semester, the Herald has published its letters-to-the-editor policy 20 times. One of the sections of that policy said letters should be limited to 250 words or less. Now that section is being changed.

In the past the Herald has printed several letters longer than 250 words, because on some occasions we have had the space to do so, and because we wanted to allow letter writers the greatest liberty possible. It was a pragmatic policy, and it worked well until recently, when we began to receive letters so lengthy we did not have the space to print them in their entirety. A trend toward longer letters seems to be developing.

So, to prevent the letters column from being controlled by a prolific few, the Herald is redefining its letters policy thusly: As of the next issue of this newspaper, all letters longer than 250 words WILL BE EDITED to or near that limit without notification to the writers. The only exceptions will be official spokesmen for campus organizations, who may be given extra space at the discretion of the editors.

When editing is necessary, every effort will be made to preserve the writer's main points. The gist of what the letter says will not be warped or distorted.

As in the past, all letters must be signed in writing. Libelous or obscene letters are not acceptable.

By this action the Herald is not trying to infringe on expression of opinion in the letters column. We solicit letters which disagree with us, because the airing of differing viewpoints is one of the most valuable services a newspaper can offer.

What we are trying to do is to insure that each writer has an equal space in which to present his views, and we want the greatest number of writers possible to have this opportunity.

Says spirit lacking

There seems to be a genuine concern of several people concerning the quality of the WKU cheerleaders. Perhaps the criticism is justifiable but one must admit that being a yell leader is not an easy task. However, this should be considered before trying out for that position.

I do not feel that the lack of spirit should be blamed on the cheerleaders alone. It would have to be difficult to be enthusiastic without support from the crowd.

My question is — What happened to the RED towel spirit that has always prevailed at WKU & Diddle Arena has never seen a more lethargic, unemotional group of supporters (I use that term loosely too).

After attending the MTSU game and seeing the great involvement of their fans, it is upsetting not to see this same type of excitement for Western. Granted, Middle Tennessee presently has a good shot at the OVC title, but WKU Toppers will not throw in the towel! With the great potential of this team one can't help but wonder what effect true spirit could have on this group of men. It is not easy for players to get psyched when the opposing fans make more noise than the home crowd.

Western has seen many outstanding individuals in its athletic history, yet probably has never had such a large number of talented players. Perhaps total support and concern from fans the Toppers might have little trouble "getting it together" for the remaining season.

It seems to be easy to back a winning team but lose a few games and see how attendance drops. This is a time when support is needed MOST. Many hours are sacrificed by those dedicated players and athletic personnel. Is this not the least they deserve?

The Spirit Makes the Master if OUR motto; Western Kentucky University is OUR school, the Toppers are OUR team. Isn't it up to US?!!!!

Sees strange reasoning

Although I'm sure Western's Board of Regents feel they make decisions in the best interests of the University, at times I become somewhat bewildered as to the method of reasoning employed. I recall just last spring someone saying that final examinations are planned for in advance and things like Derby Day, traditionally the first Saturday in May (and I assume a long-standing heritage of Kentucky), could not be considered when planning finals week. It strikes me as peculiar then that given only a week's notice on a football game that it was no problem (at least to those who make the decision) to cancel final exams and re-schedule them. Is this an indication of what kind of priorities Western has?

I also recall that the argument last spring concerning visitation was terminated with the comment that "we don't force you to live on campus." Of course the situation since that time has changed. The Kentucky legislature has made 18-year-olds legal adults and we now have mandatory housing. Since the University no longer needs to assume a parental role and since Murray University was bold enough to take the initiative and install at least a semi-realistic visitation program, the logical course of action would be to play follow-the-leader. This of course, with the understanding that no past actions of student groups or petitions had any influence on this sudden flash of realization of a gross mistake in position.

Another curious observation would be a comparison of Dr. McCormack's "swing of things" statement and the statement of the Feb. 1 CHH by Sister Rita comparing dorm life to living in a convent. I assume one of these people is mistaken, unless there's such a thing as a swinging convent.

I seem to recall a debate a year or so ago as to whether a search warrant is required in order to enter a student's dorm room, and the conclusion was negative. Now University attorney Biven says that giving University security officers all the powers of any other policy force has "cleared up a few legal questions." My question now is, does this mean that now a security officer has the right to search and seizure (normal police power) without a search warrant (abnormal police power)?

I can only hope these discrepancies in logical reasoning and consideration of due process are mistakes and not calculated hypocrisy or attempts to control those who may cause minor administrative headaches.

Out-of-state woes

An article in the Jan. 25 issue of the College Heights Herald has caused much concern among out-of-state students. The article dealt with the issue of reciprocal tuition, a play President Downing tends to favor.

This plan, already adopted by Minnesota and Wisconsin, would allow Tennesseans and Kentuckians to attend a public college in either state at in-state tuition rates. Is this fair for the other neighboring states of the commonwealth of Kentucky? Why shouldn't Ohio, West Virginia, Virginia, Missouri, Illinois and Indiana students be able to benefit from this plan?

The plan would by no means gain anything for Western except possible bankruptcy. Then who would the administrators turn to seeking financial aid? Most likely, the poor out-of-state students who live a thousand miles away. Tuition would go up remarkably to counteract for the loss of money under this fabulous plan.

If the reciprocal tuition plan was adopted, much bitterness would be expressed by neighboring states of Kentucky. Out-of-state students would be penalized with a higher tuition. Four-seventy-six-fifty is enough considering we all get ripped-off for much more. What's good for one is good for all.

No female honor society

It has recently come to my attention that Western has no scholastic honors program for women besides the dean's list and president's scholar list.

As upperclassmen, my roommate and I have 4.0 and 3.6 overall averages respectively. We felt that we would be eligible for membership in an honors organization based here at Western. With much difficulty, I found that there is only one scholastic honors union at Western, Omicron Delta Kappa.

In questioning the faculty adviser, Jack Sagabiel, associate director of undergraduate advisement, we met all qualifications for membership except for the fact that we were of the wrong sex. This fact is entirely unfair. I asked Sagabiel if there was a comparable organization for women on campus and in reply, "Of course not. You don't even have a dean of women to work for one."

It is not the fault of Western's female population that we do not have a dean of women. Also, I don't feel it is fair for those students excelling scholastically to be deprived of recognition simply because "we're just girls".

VOCs to host convention

Western's Veterans On Campus will host the 1974 Kentucky Collegiate Veterans Association convention this weekend.

Now in its third year, the association will hold business and social meetings in Room 226 of Downing University Center beginning Friday and continuing through noon Saturday.

The veterans of Kentucky colleges are currently supporting legislation in Frankfort to get a state-funded bonus to supplement the federal G.I. Bill. Also scheduled for discussion at the convention is the group's efforts to secure free tuition to state schools.

The convention also hopes to organize other programs to present to the legislature while it is still in session.

After being welcomed officially by President Dr. Dero Downing at the noon luncheon Friday, the veterans will hear State Sen. Walter Baker, R-Glasgow, address the noon luncheon Saturday, and provide the convention with an update on present legislation being considered.

Leo Sullivan, the local VOC president said, "The KCVV is an organization of Veteran Clubs at colleges and universities around the state, which have banded together to aid all veterans, whether they are in school or not."

By trying to help and reach all veterans, not just school-attending members, it is hoped that a college education can become a possibility for all the state's veterans, Sullivan said.

This year's KCVV president is Steve Bandura of Eastern. member schools (with veterans' clubs) are Western, Eastern, Kentucky, Louisville, Murray, Morehead and Jefferson Community College.

the ultimate goal of the Bowling Green-Warren County ambulance service.

However, Kirby said the EMT training would not be a prerequisite for work now in an effort to get the service underway as soon as possible.

EMT training will be required, however, within the first six months of employment, according to the ordinance passed by the city commission and the county fiscal court.

Baughman explained that a major difference between the EMT course and a first aid course, which will be required before employment in the city-county service, is the emphasis on equipment used in the rescue and transportation of the injured or ill.

First aid is "home oriented," Baughman said. It is taught from the standpoint that aid given will be with things at hand rather than with the specialized equipment of an ambulance or emergency vehicle.

"The EMT course is not just theory," he continued. "These people are trained more thoroughly, and practice is supervised until they are competent in performing correctly and efficiently."

Each graduate must demonstrate his ability to recognize symptoms of common medical emergencies. He must be proficient in closed-chest heart massage, treatment of types of shock and treatment of open wounds and hemorrhaging.

The EMT course consists of 71 classroom hours (lecture, demonstration and practice) and 10 hours of in-hospital emergency room experience. Students must pass several written examinations and be qualified to perform emergency skills necessary to sustain life or to handle and move injured or ill patients.

Besides medical training, the course tries to erase some misconceptions that emergency personnel commonly encounter, Baughman said. One of the worst of these is the over-emphasis placed on speed in transporting the injured.

"Seldom is speed necessary," Baughman said. Patients with internal injuries can be aggravated by quick turns, stops and accelerations, he said. For example, speed can increase anxiety and heart-beat rate in heart attack victims, causing more damage to the heart.

Another area EMT training could benefit is teacher education. Now there are no requirements for teachers to have first aid training to obtain their certificate, he said.

The text of the EMT course is also used in 46 states, thus standardizing training throughout most of the country. However, a certificate from one state is usually not accepted in other states.

Preaches what he practices

Politicians are Shannon's specialty

By MARY LYNN McCUBBIN

Library. Shannon was present and his daughters, Margaret and Phyllis, had asked him to get

"Distinguished visiting professor" is his catalog listing; politicians are his specialty.

Dr. Jasper B. Shannon of the government department draws from his vast political experience to teach students political science.

His teaching role has taken him to the campuses of Transylvania and John Hopkins and the Universities of Kentucky, Wisconsin and Nebraska. After exhausting tenure at the University of Nebraska, Shannon began teaching at Western. He is now in his second year as a distinguished visiting professor, a position he describes as "flexibility into the rugged standard of retirement."

A native of Carlisle, Shannon earned degrees in English and political science at Transylvania University in Lexington, graduating magna cum laude. He received his M.A. and doctorate degrees from the University of Wisconsin, where he was inspired by John M. Goss, whom Shannon describes as the "greatest teacher of political science in this generation."

Shannon said his role as a political scientist educator is to "stimulate people into politics." His former students include former Kentucky governor Ned Breathitt, Commissioner of Agriculture Wendell Butler, U.S. Rep. John Breckinridge and several college presidents. "They were kind enough to give me some of the credit," Shannon added.

Political leaders, however, are his declared specialty. "Some people study grasshoppers; I study politicians," Shannon said.

He has "rubbed elbows" with such national and state leaders as Harry S. Truman, Happy Chandler and Alben Barkley. His acquaintances with Barkley and Chandler resulted in two sketches that were published in books of political biographies by J. T. Salter.

Chuckling to himself, Shannon reminisced about humorous anecdotes concerning Harry Truman. He told of an incident at a meeting of political scientists and historians which Truman had called to discuss the Truman Truman's autograph.

When Shannon finally made his request, Truman asked to whom he should address the autograph. Margaret's name caused no difficulty, but when he started to write "To Phyllis," the former president replied, "How in the hell do you spell 'Phyllis'? They tell me I ought to learn how to spell."

On current issues, Shannon is doubtful of Nixon's impeachment unless more evidence is found. "An impeachment should not be just a means for conviction of a crime, but to remove a poor administrator," Shannon said. "If we do impeach, we will move more toward the parliamentary system of Great Britain and more cohesion between the executive and legislative branches."

More protection of individual privacy and the end to bugging devices are some of Shannon's foreseen results of Watergate. However, he sees the best outcome to be public financing of political campaigns with a strengthening of the "dollar-check-off" plan offered on income tax forms.

This "dollar-check-off" campaign contribution idea originated with Shannon, and according to him, is his only contribution to the passage of a law.

He sees Dr. Henry Kissinger "not as any magician, but a man with insight and avenues to know who wants what." Conditions in Russia and China were described as "ripe" and communism as "aging."

The student political mood was termed by Shannon as one of "indifference and confusion." He thought that "students were misled in the 1960's to think that demonstration and disruption were the way.

"My view is to go into politics at the precinct level and work up as in any other career," Shannon commented. "Students should stay in and follow the formal process of politics instead of resorting to demonstration politics."

1890s style featured in 'Dolly' costumes

By MORRIS McCOY

When "Hello Dolly" opens Thursday night the costumes will be the creations of Becky Mounts, a sophomore interior design, clothing and textiles major.

Miss Mounts explained that designing for a musical requires a somewhat different approach than for a straight play. The concept is to make the costumes lively and in some cases exaggerated. She used a large variety of colors, choosing from the more brilliant hues when possible.

One example of "exaggeration" that she has used is the male dancer's sleeve garters and bow ties that match the costumes of their female partners.

The period of the show is the 1890's. This is just after the bustle went out of style although a trace remained in a gathering of material at the waist to form a train for the dress. The dresses also have leg-of-mutton sleeves. They look like a lamb's leg which are large at the top and tight fitting at the wrist.

One of the most interesting aspects of the ladies' costumes is the hats of the period. They were ostentatious and showy, to say the least. This is the period when ladies of fashion wore artificial animals and other giegaws in their hats. Miss Mounts said the possibilities of having stuffed birds or rats in a hat, or even a bird's nest, were quite real. She used some of these ideas in her own designs.

Parasols and gloves were also very fashionable.

Miss Mounts drew her own designs for the major characters and used one pattern for the other women's costumes. She varied the patterns, using lace and trimmings, so the pattern would not be obvious.

But there is more to design than choosing patterns and materials and setting down to a sewing machine. The designer must consider who will be on stage with whom and make sure the costumes do not clash but complement each other. There are some colors and patterns that will not work together and the designer must be familiar with the stage traffic to keep her colors and patterns harmonious.

The designer will also give the most dominating color to the main characters. There are two ways to achieve this. One is to let the principal be the only character on stage in a very bright color that obviously causes him to stand out. Another method is to put the main character in the lowest shade of a color with the rest of the characters appearing in lighter shades and tints of the same color.

The personality of the character must also be considered. For example there are certain colors that a king would wear and some colors and textures that a lady of ill-repute would dress in.

In the Harmonia Gardens scene of "Dolly," Dolly is dressed in red. Miss Mounts said she was very careful not to have any of the other characters in red so that Dolly would definitely be the dominant force of the scene.

Miss Mounts worked on costume construction over Christmas and has spent 180 hours on the show since the spring semester began. She had a total of 50 costumes to assemble although some may only call for the change of a coat to change the costume. A costume change should suggest to the audience a change of scene or place in the same manner a set change does. It may also serve to indicate the time of day or the season of the scene.

The costumes must also be harmonious with the set and the period of the play.

Although the actors do all the work on stage, many persons contribute to the show from behind the scene. The costumer is one of these.

"Hello Dolly" opens Thursday and will run through Saturday and again Feb. 21-23. Tickets for the performances in Van Meter Auditorium are available at the theatre box office in the Ivan Wilson Center for $2. Tickets may also be available on the night of performances at Van Meter.

Unique pieces accent senior exhibit

By MORRIS McCOY

A varied exhibit of art by seniors B. Mickey Rains and Steve Reeves is on display through Thursday in the art gallery of the Ivan Wilson Center.

Artwork allows an opportunity that the other arts deny in that one can spend as much time with the subject as he likes and at his own discretion. Not much is required to experience art except for the person to take his time whether it be for a few seconds or several hours. He cannot complain the subject of his study went too fast or that too much participation was required.

Architecture is the art that comes closest to exemplifying the same traits as art. But it also has a function of utility and is not totally devoted to aesthetics.

With the art of literature, one may spend the time and use discretion as with art, but he must also seek out his subject actively in order to enjoy it.

Theatre, music and dance have limitations being performing arts, because they exist only for the moment. The time factor is controlled by the performer. Once the selection is finished, it cannot be recalled, although it can be repeated.

None of this is to say that artwork is the superior art form, for that is an individual decision. Each art has its special considerations and adherents. Some may call drama the superior art form since it involves all the other arts in its composition. Others would say this aspect of drama causes it not to be an art at all, but a conglomeration of arts, therefore making it less pure.

Art comes in diversified forms and there are innumerable subjects for each form.

Several unique pieces are being displayed in the art gallery at this time and one should determine for himself which pieces qualify as art.

Some had no appeal to me at all, but two pieces particularly interested me. One was a progression of three prints on the subject of "see and hear no evil." The other was a sculpture of a Christ head on a wooden-block cross. To me these were good art works, whereas someone else may prefer to toss them in a trash can.

But this is what art is all about. Even though all of us view the same subject, we will come away with different impressions. Indeed some may be impressed and some depressed.

Fashion show set

"The Way We Were," a fashion show reflecting current styles, which are reminiscent of the past, will be presented Wednesday night at 7:30 in the Kentucky Building by the Display and Promotion class (Home Economics 428).

Musical entertainment will be provided by Dr. David Livingston.

Tickets are 50 cents and are available from class members or at the door.

This senior art show offers works of tapestry, pottery, sketches, sculpture, hanging art and paintings.

Gallery hours are 8 p.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays.

Music good, crowds fickle at concerts

By AL CROSS

A heavily-booked month of music for Bowling Green rock audiences began last weekend with two good shows at the National Guard Armory.

Charlie Daniels and Eric Quincy Tate entertained a small crowd (estimated at 150) Thursday night. Daniels returned to Bowling Green with an almost totally new band, a tighter and more talented unit than the one here last spring. Daniels' stage leadership was energetic as ever, and he did a good job in turning on the small audience.

Daniels opened his set with "Way Down Yonder," title cut from his new album. A brief reference to Bowling Green in the lyrics brought a loud response from the crowd, and Daniels hollered his regard for the city after the song.

The versatile Daniels acted all night as a nucleus for his band, four highly-charged electrons who performed instrumental tradeoffs in the traditional Southern style.

On "Give This Fool One More Try," Daniels stopped playing guitar to do a powerful vocal, delivered by his huge lungs. He then pulled a slide from his pocket and extracted some beautiful Allman-type notes from the guitar, rounding out the classic blues number.

An extended jam on "Them Changes" was the best showcase for the band's talents. Deafening guitar licks and riffs echoed through the sparsely-populated hall, with a short but professional duet from the group's drummers, Freddie Edwards and Gary Allen. Bassist Mark Fitzgerald provided a solid foundation throughout, and keyboard man Angus Modelle did a fine vocal job while Charlie trotted offstage to take a smoke.

No Charlie Daniels concert is complete without a rendition of "Orange Blossom Special," in which he seems to set fire to his fiddle with its stick. This version included a bar of "My Old Kentucky Home."

For his encore, Daniels answered several requests by doing his hit of last summer, "Uneasy Rider." The song, which has been eliminated from the band's live act, didn't fit in with the rest of the set. Daniels compensated by closing out with "Wine Spodee Odee," a rollicking country-rocker that sent the remnants of the thinned-out audience home happy.

The Eric Quincy Tate Group opened the evening with a lower-energy performance that drew heavily on jazz and old Electric Flag tunes. Though the band showed considerable talent, they needed a horn section to do many of the songs justice.

Saturday night was a drastic contrast, with a sellout crowd packing the Armory to hear Goose Creek Symphony, Slickrock and the Little River Band. Many left at the end of the first set because there wasn't any place to sit.

Goose Creek, playing the last concert of its tour, was very loose through most of the show. They played more of their older songs than anticipated, and did many of them with a lack of energy that disappointed many who saw them last spring.

Goose Creek has changed musical direction slightly, keeping an old-fashioned country influence while trying to implement more modern vocal and melodic styles. They were more energetic while performing the new material, but aimed mainly at pleasing the audience with older songs like "Rush on Love," "Words of Ernest," and "Mercedes-Benz."

"Saturday Night at the Grange," tentatively set as the title cut of their new album, was one of the best examples of the changed style. This well-constructed tune featured fine instrumental jobs by every member of the band.

Several short, fast fiddle breaks inserted between songs lent a continuity to the set and helped to keep the crowd lively. They also offered a taste of pure Goose Creek that the audience seemed to expect.

"Guitars Pickin', Fiddles Playin'" and "Orange Blossom Special" were both outstanding encores that had nearly all those left standing and clapping in time to the music.

Little River Band, from Hopkinsville, opened the night with a surprisingly good set. They were reminiscent of the Marshall Tucker Band, using flute, saxophone and clarinet with a modern country-rock base that sounded quite promising.

Slickrock, a local band, played a good second set. Their song selection and tight three-piece work kept things moving well.

Debaters take fifth in tourney

Western recently placed fifth among the 34 schools for accumulating the best record in two divisions of debate and four individual events at the Wilcox Forensic Invitational Tournament at Marietta (Ohio) College.

Individually, four students brought home winning records and trophies. John Bird, senior from Bowling Green, placed fourth in broadcast speaking; Margaret Harrison, junior from Bowling Green, placed third in original oratory; and the debate team of Marc Levy, sophomore from Miami, Fla., and Jill Metz, senior from Napierville, Ill., advanced to quarterfinals after posing a 5-1 record in preliminary rounds. The team lost to Ohio State University in the quarterfinal round.

Two road wins avenge home setbacks

Western pays back East Tennessee...with interest

By LEO PECKENPAUGH

Western did just what it wasn't supposed to do last night, a trait most Ohio Valley Conference teams seem to have inherited in the topsy-turvy race.

The Toppers shelled East Tennessee 85-68 at Johnson City. They did so by taking advantage of some icy shooting by the hosts in the early stages of the second half, at one time running off 25 points while the Buccaneers could manage just four.

For the Jim Richards-coached Hilltoppers, it meant revenge, for it was this same Buc team that downed Western on its home court early in January, 88-75.

That devastating spurt by Western came just after halftime when East Tennessee led 39-37. Johnny Britt opened the half for the Toppers with an 18-footer, knotting the score at 39-all.

Kent Allison, following a missed Buc shot, then hit one from close range and moments later Britt hit a 10-foot fallaway.

Then, it was Chuck Rawlings who went to work. In the next minute and a half, the 6-1 wingman hit from 15, scored on a fast break and bombed in one from the corner and Western commanded 49-41.

East Tennessee guard John Curtis hit from 18 feet with 16 minutes left and Western went on another binge. In the next three minutes, Allison hit a follow-up, Britt scooped one in on a drive, Ray Bowerman tallied five straight and Allison hit from 10 to make it 60-43 at 12:38.

But it wasn't over as Britt hit an 18-footer before the frigid Bucs finally got a bucket from forward Morris Tampa to make it 62-45.

The remaining nine minutes merely saw the teams go through the motions as Western held a 20-point advantage on numerous occasions.

Western jumped out to an early 12-4 lead in the contest as Rawlings pumped in eight of his 22 markers.

But Roy Frazier's crew, on the strength of Curtis' outside shooting caught the Toppers at 16 and took a six-point lead of its own, 26-20.

Western was forced to rely solely on the scoring of Rawlings, Britt and Allison during the first 16 and a half minutes of the contest. It was 3:38 left in the half before any other Topper had scored when Bowerman followed up a missed shot.

Western's Rose, Briggs, Stuart sparkle in Mason-Dixon Games

By FRED LAWRENCE

World records in two running events highlighted the 14th annual Mason-Dixon Games in Louisville Saturday night and completely overshadowed the two best running performances turned in by Western athletes.

The first world record was set in the two-mile relay by the Chicago Track Club, holders of the outdoor record for the same event. They ran 7:20.8 to lower the record by two seconds.

Meanwhile, WKU's team of Louis DeFreeze, (1:58.4), Swag Hartel, (1:55.9), Joe Tinius (1:55.9) and David Jagers (1:55.7) finished dead last, but still shattered the school record.

Western's foursome lowered the record from 7:57.4 to 7:45.9.

But the best performance of the night was in the 5,000-meter run in which Ethiopian Olympian Mirus Yifter lowered the world record from 13:45.2 to 13:34.2. There was not a school record in this event for Western's Nick Rose to break or he surely would have. Mostly overlooked by the crowd, which yelled itself hoarse spurring on Yifter, Rose came home third in 13:56.2. This is only 11 seconds off the old world record.

"I thought the best performance for us on the track was Nick in the 5,000," said Jerry Bean, head track coach. "It was the second fastest time this year by a collegian (the fastest being by Neil Cusack of East Tennessee who beat Rose by three seconds.) and it's almost certainly a new English record. His time was under the American record, so it's faster than any American ever ran it. It's probably the second fastest ever by a collegian."

Rose's three-mile time, taken enroute, also establishes a school record. His three-mile time was 13:28.8.

"I think if anybody was wondering if he could come back, they've got that answer now," said Bean, referring to the freak automobile accident over the Christmas holiday which sidelined Rose for several weeks.

In the field events, some excellent efforts by Western athletes also were overshadowed. Emmett Briggs triple-jumped a school record of 51 feet to finish fifth. The old record, set in last year's Mason-Dixon Games by Briggs, was 50-8.

Briggs said after the competition, "I'm satisfied. I felt good, I couldn't get it together." His jump was one foot longer than the NCAA indoor qualifying standard.

Western's second entry in the triple jump, Ken Waller, leaped 48-7½.

"I couldn't pass it up," explained Jesse Stuart when asked why he was competing in the shotput after having all but said he wouldn't. "I watched the high school shot put last night (Friday night) and had to throw." Stuart threw 65-4¼ for second.

"I think Jesse's throw of 65-4¼ on Saturday after being on crutches on Wednesday is a real fine competitive effort," said Bean.

In the high jump, Western's Chuck Durrant cleared a school record equaling 6-10 to take second. No one cleared a higher jump, but Durrant had more misses at lower heights. Durrant's jump equaled his personal best outdoors and is a new indoor personal record.

Robert Ware also set a school record. He covered 70 yards in 6.9, one-tenth of a second under the old record. Ware was fourth. Robert Dudley, running in what Bean said was the tougher of the two preliminary heats, was eliminated. "Ware is certainly coming along," said the coach.

Ross Munro turned in Western's best mile run at the games with a 4:14 for fourth in the Kentuckiana mile. Chris Ridler was sixth in 4:18.1. Friday night, in the Alumni Mile, Tinius finished third in 4:19.6, Jagers fourth in 4:21.1 and Steve Smith, running in spite of a cold, finished in 4:35.5.

In the final running event of the night involving a Western team, the Kentuckiana Mile Relay, the Topper team of Leo Emmett Briggs leaped further than he ever had before Saturday at the Mason-Dixon Games. His 51-foot triple jump qualified him for the NCAA indoor championships.

Home finale is happy for Yeloushans

By RICHARD ROGERS

The name of Yeloushan is a big part of Western's five year swimming history. Rick Yeloushan, a senior standout, is called by his coach as the greatest swimmer in Western's history. His parents are the Hilltoppers' No. 1 fans.

In Western's double-dual meet victory over Morehead and Wabash here Saturday, the Yeloushan family made its last appearance in the Middle Arena swimming pool.

Yeloushan and six other teammates swam for the last time in the pool. Two of them were the leaders of the squad. But the pool lost something just as important. It lost its No. 1 fans.

Jim and Libby Yeloushan are always leading the cheers for the swimming team. For the past year, they have traveled from their home in Tampa, Fla., to every Western meet—both at home and away.

Before Saturday's meet, coach Bill Powell introduced his seniors—Rick Baranyi, Tom Foltz, Bob Carr, Rick VanDellen, Jim Finn, Dan Meyers and Yeloushan. The crowd cheered.

And then he announced that the Yeloushans were cheering for the last time here. The swimmers cheered and gave the couple a standing ovation.

The seniors helped lead the Hilltoppers to victories over defeated Wabash, 60-51, and Morehead, 63-48. Wabash defeated Morehead in the third meet by the same score of 63-48.

Looking over the results of the meet, Powell said, "We were very tired. From Monday to Thursday, we have swum 43,000 yards in practices."

Yeloushan remained undefeated in the 50-yard freestyle, winning the event with a time of

By surprising 118-96 margin

Paducah pounds Topper JV's

By DON COLLINS

Paducah Junior College sent the Western jayvees down to their third defeat of the year, 118-96, last night in Paducah.

It was a case of too much Chris McGuire for the Hilltoppers. The 6-9 Paducah ace burned the nets for 31 points on 13 for 22 shooting from the field and a perfect 5 for 5 night at the charity stripe. McGuire also collared 12 rebounds.

Paducah jumped out to an awesome 32-point margin in the first half of the fast-moving contest via a fast break and deadly field goal shooting. Western managed to whittle the halftime deficit to eight points at 51-43.

Paducah wasn't to be denied, however, and the second half was all theirs as they jumped out to a comfortable 22-point lead and coasted to the final spread.

Coach Jay Harrington, who accompanied the team while Ralph Baker was away with the varsity, said that the squad just didn't hustle. "We had no desire and just didn't play the game tonight," he groaned. "Don't take anything away from Paducah, however. They really had a hot shooting night," he praised.

Western committed 22 turnovers in the affair while Paducah had 16. Fouls were about even with the Tops picking up 25 and Paducah had 22.

Gary Elliott led the Western scorers as he has all season. The 6-5 forward picked up 26 points and was Western's top rebounder with 11. The rest of the team featured balanced scoring which will usually win most games, but not many when the other team shoots 60 per cent from the field like Paducah did last night.

Bill Scillian added 19 points, Dennis Benningfield canned 15 points and had 10 rebounds, Mike Gilbert, 11 points and David Beckner contributed 10.

Paducah's attack was led by McGuire, of course, with 31. George Williams hit 24, Greg Davis, 19, Mike Arnold, 13, and Gary Duncan, 12.

Paducah coach Lawrence Smithier said he felt that the contest was extremely well played, but most coaches do after their team has ripped off a 22-point victory. "We're extremely proud of Chris," said Smithier. "As a lot of Western folks know, McGuire played high school ball with Mike Gilbert at Henderson City and he just might get up a little more for the Western game."

In avenging an earlier 91-85 defeat by Western at Bowling Green, Paducah hit an outstanding 75 per cent from the foul line while the Toppers were a little colder at 62 per cent.

The big win improved Paducah's season mark to 18-2 while the loss dropped Western to 10-3. Western beat the Tennessee Tech jayvees for the second time this season, 94-85, Saturday night at Cookeville.

Coeds to host two games

By DON COLLINS

Western's basketball coeds entertain Kentucky State and Louisville this weekend in hopes of improving their 1-4 season mark and pointing towards the state tournament early in March.

Western's lone win was over Kentucky State, which comes to town Thursday. The Topper coeds handled the Thoroughbreds rather easily two weeks ago with senior forward Patty Sutherland popping in 31 points.

Coach Pam Dickson plans nothing different for this rematch. "We'll play a 2-1-2 defense and try to press their leading scorer, who burned us for 16 points the last time we played them," she commented.

"Offensively we'll try to combat their zone with cutters through the center of the lane and take the good outside shot. We've been working on our picks and screens this week in

Injury-wise, the Tops could be hurting going into the weekend action. Krista Gaddis, who suffered a severely sprained ankle in the Kentucky State game, hasn't fully recovered and trainer Russell Miller has advised her to sit out both games. Cheryl Soucy will take her place as the back-up center behind Leslie Cole.

Miss Dickson sounded extremely optimistic about the two games. "I really feel like we have an excellent chance of coming away with two victories this weekend and raising our record to 3-4. I feel like we may be reaching our peak right around state tournament time," she concluded.

Mason-Dixon

Fain (54.7), DeFreeze (49.6), Dennis Platte (55.7) and Donald Thornton (48.3) did not place. Their final time was 3:48.1. "Thornton ran just out of sight," said Bean. "His 48.3 indoors is blazing."

Toward the end of the meet, Bean said, "We've had a real good night. Heads above anything else we've ever had." Yesterday Bean added, "We're now in a position to know what we have to work on."

With four school records broken, two established and another athlete qualified for the NCAA indoor meet, there appears to be few areas needing work.

SLIDING into the water, Western diver Jim Finn completes one of his dives in Saturday's meet with Wabash and Morehead. Finn finished second in both diving events, but Western whipped both of the invaders to up its season mark to 9-1.

Use of numbered tags begins

The physical education equipment room in Diddle Arena will issue numbered tags to students, faculty, and staff after they present I.D. cards to use the facilities. The tag system will be in effect after 6 week nights and from 10 a.m. until closing on Saturday and from 1 p.m. to closing on Sunday.

Night intramural participants do not need tags.

The facilities are for authorized use only, this procedure is designed to guarantee proper use.

The University requires all students, faculty, and staff to have their ID cards with them in order to use its facilities.

Dual victory marks last home meet

22.3. Carr placed second with a time of 23.2.

Two Western swimmers had their personal bests in the meets. Dave Johnson won the 400-yard individual medley with a time of 4:38.8, five seconds off the school record.

Freshman Steve Merrill had his personal best in the 200-yard backstroke. He swam the distance in 2:07.3 for second place. Another freshman, Dave Kowalewski, placed third for the Hilltoppers.

Other winners for Western were Bill Lowendick, John Heller, and Tag Garrod. Lowendick won the 1000-yard freestyle in 10:55.6.

Heller's time of 1:55.4 placed him first in the 200-yard freestyle. He also placed second in the 200-yard butterfly with a time of 2:10.9.

Garrod, one of the freshman standouts on the squad, remained undefeated in the 500-yard freestyle. He covered the distance in 5:02.9. Garrod also is undefeated in the 1000-yard freestyle, but he did not swim the event Saturday.

The meet against Centre College Friday night, was cancelled when the visitors couldn't make the trip. The bad weather and lack of gas were cited for Centre's failure to show up.

Toppers down Tennessee Tech 78-77

hit 53 per cent of its shots while the homesteaders could hit on only 37 per cent.

The first half gave clear evidence of the Bucs' cool hand as Mitchell hit one of 10, leading scorer Ron Mitchell four of 13. Charlie Stuart one of seven and reserve Henry White only one of four. Their combined halftime statistics showed only 33 per cent, but nine Topper turnovers kept ETSU ahead.

Western, who out rebounded the losers 58-45, was led by Rawlings and Britt with 22 each. Allison had 12 and Bowerman, who pulled down a game-high 14 rebounds, had seven points.

Tampa had 20 points in a reserve role for the Bucs; now 8-13 for the year. Reynolds added 14 and Curtis 12 in supporting roles.

The Toppers avenged an embarrassing one-point defeat to Tennessee Tech in Diddle Arena earlier this year when Calvin Wade popped in a free throw Saturday night to rally the Toppers to a 78-77 triumph.

Tech broke out in front 26-13 midway through the game and decided to sit on the ball until Western came out of its zone defense.

But Richards simply brought his zone out after the Golden Eagles and in less than six minutes Western had caught the hosts at 32-32.

Western went on to take a 42-40 halftime advantage.

The second half was close all the way as the Toppers would occasionally gain a six-point advantage, their last at 77-71.

The Connie-Inman-coached Eagles then poured in six straight, the final two on a pair of free throws by Stan Coa with 27 seconds left to tie the score at 77-77.

But 17 seconds later Wade was fouled and hit the first shot in a one-and-one situation for the final margin. Tech's Jim Clemens hit a 15-footer, but it was after the horn had sounded to end the game.

Western got a 20-point effort from Britt and 17 tallies from Allison. Gampfer ended with 10.

Western, now 4-5 in OVC play, will host league-leader Morehead Saturday afternoon at Diddle Arena.

No indoor track, but what a team

By LEO PECKENPAUGH

You couldn't compare what Jerry Bean has done since taking over the track coaching duties at Western. Unless, let's pretend, that Jim Richards would take his basketball Hilltoppers to the NCAA tournament, without the use of hoops to shoot at every day.

It's true, because in less than three years, Bean has taken the Western thinline to the limelight of collegiate track and field throughout the United States.

Well, you can counter, he hasn't won any NCAA championships, or ever finished in the top five, for that matter.

But in the past year, Western track squads have finished 13th, 10th and (only because a violation moved them out of second) sixth in the NCAA indoor, outdoor and cross-country championships, respectively.

His indoor squads have no indoor facilities, except for Diddle Arena, which was not built with track in mind.

And his present indoor squad, one that showed so well Saturday in the Mason-Dixon Games in Louisville, will more than likely finish in the top 10 of the NCAA indoor meet this year. It could possibly finish in the top five, "A 50-50 chance," says Bean.

It's not unlikely the Toppers could take the crown from Manhattan College, last year's champ.

There are several reasons, all of which add up to the possibility of a strong Western showing.

First you start with athletes, which Bean has plenty of. Back from last year's squad is NCAA shot-put runner-up Jesse Stuart. He had the best throw (66-9 and some two feet better than any collegian this year) of his illustrious career in New York three weeks ago.

There's Nick Rose, second-place finisher in last year's cross-country championships, who ran a 13:28.8 three-mile Saturday. He finished third in the two-mile in the NCAA indoor last year in Detroit.

For the first time in history, Western has a first-class sprinter in Bobby Ware. The pint-sized Cleveland native ran a 6.9 70-yard dash Saturday night, only one-tenth of a second off the world mark. He won two qualifying heats in last year's NCAA 60-yard preliminaries.

Emmett Briggs leaped a personal best 51 feet in the triple jump in the Mason Dixon, qualifying for the NCAA meet.

And, Chuck Durrant leaped 6-10 in the high jump for a second place finish Saturday. He needs a 6-11 jump to qualify for the NCAA, but one has to note that at this time last year he had cleared only 6-6.

With these five you have championship material abounding, and Bean has more darkhorses in the grooming.

It doesn't take many points (18 won last year's) to win an indoor championship. "Yeah, Manhattan won last year's with two firsts and two thirds," noted Bean.

That's 18 big ones, though, and it's hard to do.

"You have got to look at the competition," he moaned while enjoying the thought of making a sterling performance in the top indoor meet. "We're trying to qualify as many as possible 'cause it's kind of like a chess match. We don't even know what event we're going to enter Nick in yet (the two- or three-mile) because we have no idea who is going to be in what. But it is a lot easier to win indoors because it is so spread out," he continued.

Last year 53 schools scored in the meet, and aside from Manhattan's surprising first-place 18 points, 12 points meant second place, where a bunch tied.

Western led the competition after the first day last year with seven points, and said Bean, "I actually had about a dozen coaches come up to me and tell me we were right in contention."

But Western was left with only two competitors (Ware and Briggs) for the second day, neither of whom finished in the money.

So, with the NCAA championships just around the corner (March 8-9), Jerry Bean can only hope. And when they finally arrive, the bespectacled coach can only hope that some way his forces can score two firsts, a couple of seconds, a third...

Don't be surprised, however, because who'd ever thought a team that had no indoor track could ever be in contention, anyway.

$30,000 HEW grant used to study 'man's problems'

have an international perspective and to encourage a wide range of departments to infuse other existing general education courses with an international perspective."

Corts said money from the grant is also being used to purchase media material, such as films and books, which will be used in the experimental classes.

In addition to the internationalization of the classes, Corts said the grant will be used on a number of other projects.

One program will bring authorities to campus to conduct sessions on topics of international concern. The first such seminar on Multi-Lingual, Multi-Cultural Societies will be held March 4-6.

Guest speakers for the seminar will include Dr. Edward Dimock and Dr. A.K. Ramanujan of the University of Chicago, Dr. Walburga VonRaffler Engel of Vanderbilt University and Dr.

Amry Van den Bosch of the University of Kentucky. Asian countries will be the area of concentration for the seminar.

Other seminars will study the role of women in modern societies; urbanization, regulation, food resources and health problems; and the universality of the human condition.

The grant money will also bring to campus a number of foreign artistic groups, the first of which will be a Japanese dance ensemble in April.

Corts said the grant will enable faculty members to attend meetings on international affairs.

"We want to get the faculty involved in this program...to get them interested and excited," he said.

An international study tour, possibly to South America, may be conducted in late summer through money supplied by the grant, Corts said.

Western was one of approximately 25 colleges in the country to receive a grant for international education programs. Each college developed its own program for utilizing the funds, which were distributed by the International Studies branch of HEW's Office of Education.

At Western, COSID is in charge of implementing the programs funded by the grant. "There was open competition for the grant money," Corts said. "We were extremely pleased that our proposal was accepted."

Western was unable to utilize the grant money until this semester, because notification of funding came too late for the various programs to begin last fall. The delay was due to the impoundment of appropriated funds by President Nixon, Corts said.

The present funding period expires Sept. 30, but Western has submitted a request for approval of funds for another year. "We have to justify what we've done in the first year and present a concrete program for the second year," Corts said.

He added that Western's chances for receiving another $30,000 grant for 74-75 are good. "If we receive second-year funding, we'll try to diffuse the program...We'll try to get the special international units plugged into other sections and other courses, and we hope to create some new cross-departmental courses."

Corts said the government will not fund the program beyond the second year. "After then it should be self-supporting so that the programs will be extended past the period covered by the grant money."

ASG elections scheduled

and since the ASG representatives will be making these decisions in the future, ASG should consider going to an election funding program of its own.

Yater replied that while public financing of elections was a fine thing in theory, it left much to be desired in practical terms.

"What if you have a hundred people who want to run for office?"

Interaction programs scheduled this week

Three sessions of the Associated Student Government-sponsored Faculty-Student Interaction Program are slated this week.

Each session will be in Room 226 of the university center from 1-3:30 p.m.

Representatives from the philosophy and religion department will meet with students today, instructors from the sociology and anthropology department and the social work area Wednesday and representatives from the physical education and recreation department Thursday.

the general election was then raised by Inman, but Lee Goodpaster, ASG treasurer, said the budget was not set up for an expenditure-like that this year.

Tom LaCivita, activities vice president, gave a synopsis of the entertainment program for this year in relation to the past and future.

He said in past years ASG had sponsored major concerts, two of which were free, and six mini-concerts which were all free.

This year, LaCivita said, there will have been three major concerts, with one free, three "major" mini-concerts, with two free, and six mini-concerts, all free.

Next year there are plans for 18 programs, of which only three would be pay concerts, LaCivita said.
