WESTERN KENTUCKY UNIVERSITY

THE schools of a democracy should be human nurseries where ideas grow and individualities flourish; schools that look with disfavor upon any tendency to be stereotyped by officials at the cost of originality or upon a tendency to dissipate the power of initiative and the sense of responsibility in the life of a child; schools that will develop a reading, thinking, serving people who preserve their individuality and who think and act for themselves and challenge the right of any man to intrude upon their inalienable rights to take the initiative in endeavors." These are the words of former Western President Henry Hardin Cherry expressing the ideals of any college or university. The seal of Western Kentucky University contains two additional integral ideas which the University fosters and emphasizes. "Life More Life" stresses that education should increase the individual's power and desire to live a noble life. "The Spirit Makes the Master," the motto of Western expresses the central ideal undergirding the University for it challenges each Western student to realize his full potential.

I'll take English at 9:10 . . . but I already have mathematics at 9:10.

Now, what information must I put on this card?

I wonder if I can get Biology at 10:20?

Academic counseling sessions are available to both students and parents.

To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose . . .

The unrelenting array of tests, meetings and counseling sessions leaves little time for the apprehension felt by every freshman as he undergoes orientation. Although often hectic and confusing, it is designed to familiarize him with University policies, academic program planning and to better acquaint him with fellow students and faculty members.

I'm all finished . . . at last.

How long must we stand in line anyway?

Cards, cards, and more cards!

Registration . . . the beginning of a new semester.

A Time to Begin

What do you mean "the class is full already"?

Thousands of Western students—frightened freshmen, unruly sophomores, blasé juniors and serious seniors—arrive on campus in the fall. The challenging task of registration officially opens the year with hundreds of courses from which to choose and nearly as many IBM cards to complete.

A Time for Inquiry . . .

Ready . . . aim . . . FIRE!!

The seeking out of knowledge is a perpetual process inherent in any university situation. A competent faculty and staff are available to furnish answers and to stimulate further exchange of ideas. Some of the finest classroom facilities in the state provide an atmosphere conducive to the highest forms of academic exploration.

Magnificent . . . a striking resemblance.

Steady, steady, there you have it!

It reads . . . it reads, well, what does it read?

What is that wiggly little creature running around in there?

A Time to Search . .

Over 185,000 catalogue references are available to the Western student.

A renovated gymnasium has proven to be one of the most beautiful and most frequently used buildings on campus. Named for the retired director of library services, the Margie Helm Library is a scene familiar to all Western students. The comfortable, quiet surroundings provide the finest of study conditions.

The xerox machine is one of the most popular aspects of the Margie Helm Library.

To all biology, chemistry and physics majors, the Science Library is as familiar as the classroom.

The many sound tracts available in the Music Library enhance musical training and provide entertainment.

A familiar sight in Central Hall is football player Larry Watkins and his dance routine.

A Time to Relax . . .

The fullest enrichment of the life of a college student comes not only through his academic pursuits, but also through learning to live with and be a part of the people around him. The casual atmosphere of the dorm is a welcome change to one who has spent a day struggling with exams and reasoning with instructors.

Be careful . . . don't gossip!

A Time to Socialize . . .

No one works harder, yells louder, studies more diligently or plays more actively than a Western student. And when it's all over, no one relaxes more completely, whether it be stopping for a quick chat and coke in the snack bar or just strolling around the Hill.

A familiar meeting place on campus is by the statue of Henry Hardin Cherry.

Jessie Stuart gives his personal interpretation of democracy and the role of education.

A Time for Discovery . . .

Western has distinguished itself throughout the state by the number of noted authorities and lecturers who speak on the Hill. By bringing these people to the campus, greater opportunity is provided for the stimulation of creative thought, the discovery of new concepts, and the free exchange of ideas.

Jessie Stuart spoke at various engagements including freshmen assembly.

An afternoon press conference featured Pearl Buck.

Dr. Murray Levin speaks on "The Kennedy Art of Political Campaigning."

One of the most outstanding lecturers visiting the campus was Pearl S. Buck.

"An Evening with Pearl Buck" provided a stimulant for deeper thought.

The 1966 Homecoming Queen and her Court.

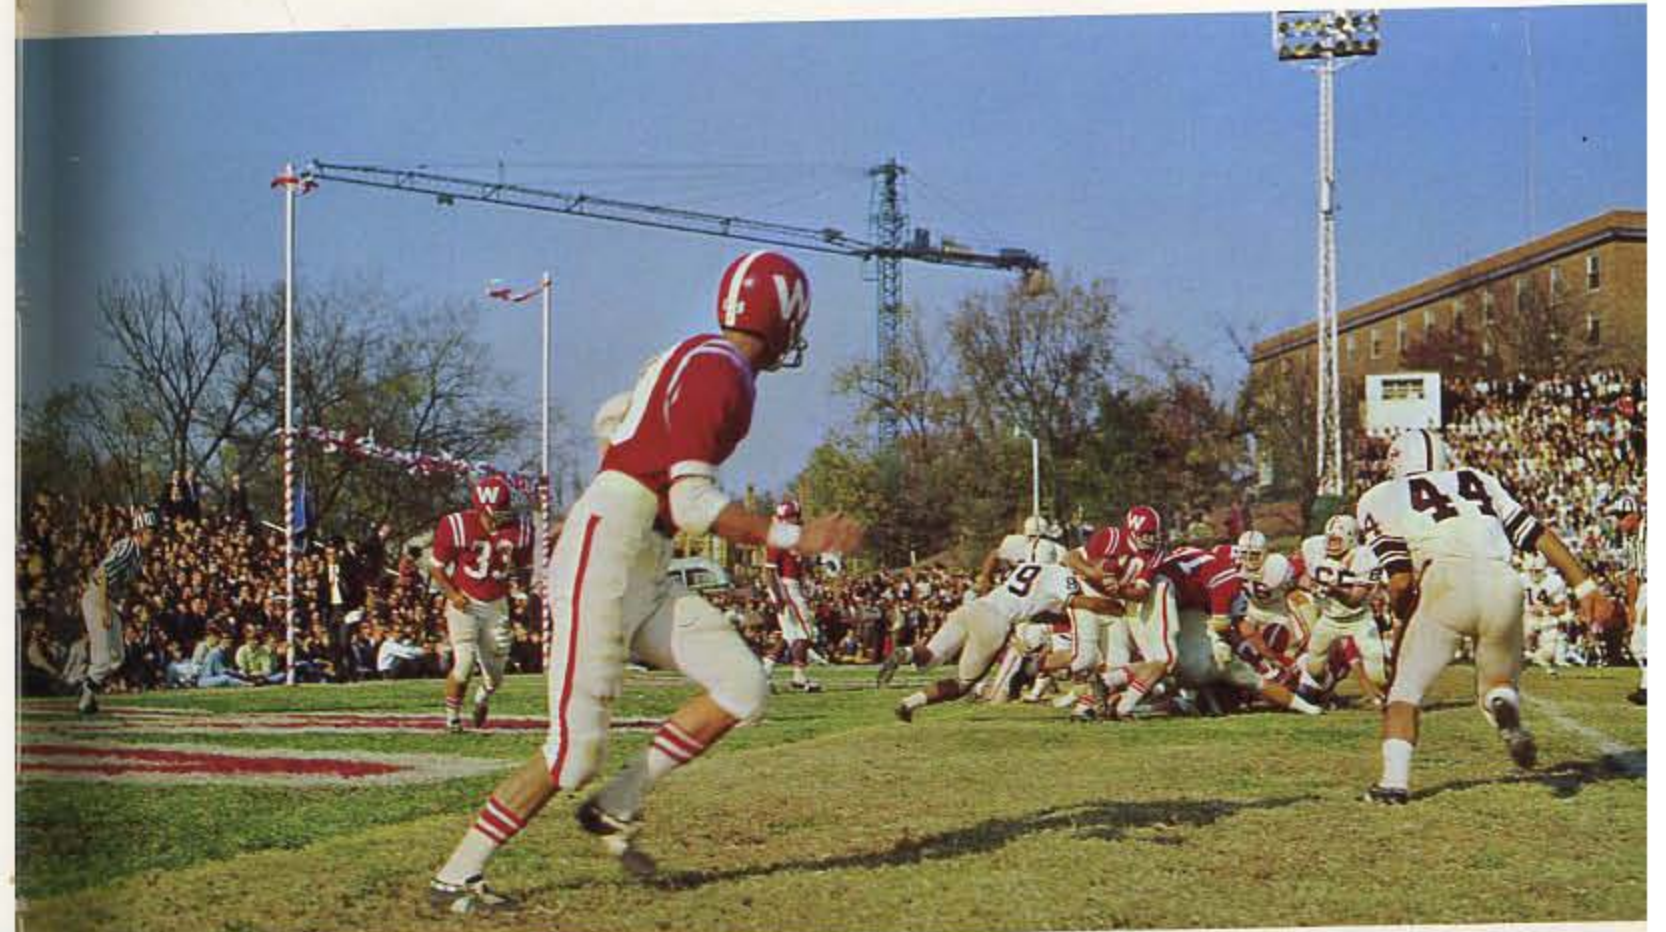

A Time for Memories . . .

The excitement of Western's Homecoming brought thousands of former Hilltoppers back for a weekend of reunion and remembering. But the alumni weren't the only ones to enjoy it. The entire student body was gaily involved in all aspects—floats, parade, dances and, of course, the "Big Game" itself.

The bonfire marks the revival of an old tradition.

Smokers provide a brief acquaintance with fraternities and their members.

Date parties relieve the tension of rush as they present the social fraternity life.

One of the many beautiful fraternity houses on campus belongs to the Lambda Chi's.

A Time for Brotherhood . . .

The assemblage of fraternity men expanded greatly as record numbers pledged this year. Paralleling the growth in numbers was the expansion of other facets of Greek life as several more fraternities purchased houses. Working together, studying together and participating in activities on and off campus served to enforce the lasting bonds of brotherhood for the Greeks at Western.

The picking up of bids culminates fraternity rush.

A Time to Dance . . .

As the calendar year neared its end, the University social year began to function at its fullest. It is a tribute to Western that one can go from the formal elegance of the Military Ball to the casual chaos of the Sadie Hawkins Dance, and equally enjoy both.

The annual Christmas wreath has deep significance for everyone.

At one time or another, we all pause for the true meaning of Christmas.

A Time for Joy . . .

As in previous years, the wreath on top of Cherry Hall was lit during a program of carols and religious readings, which officially began the holiday season on the Hill. The spirit of the season was evident as students prepared to return to their families for the holidays.

What would Christmas be without packages and a tree?

A special tradition at Christmas is sending cards to old and new acquaintances.

Pearl Hicks fights for position to receive tip from Dwight Smith.

A fine defensive play spurs the Hilltoppers on to victory.

Fullback Jerry Humble eludes Middle Tennessee's tough defense.

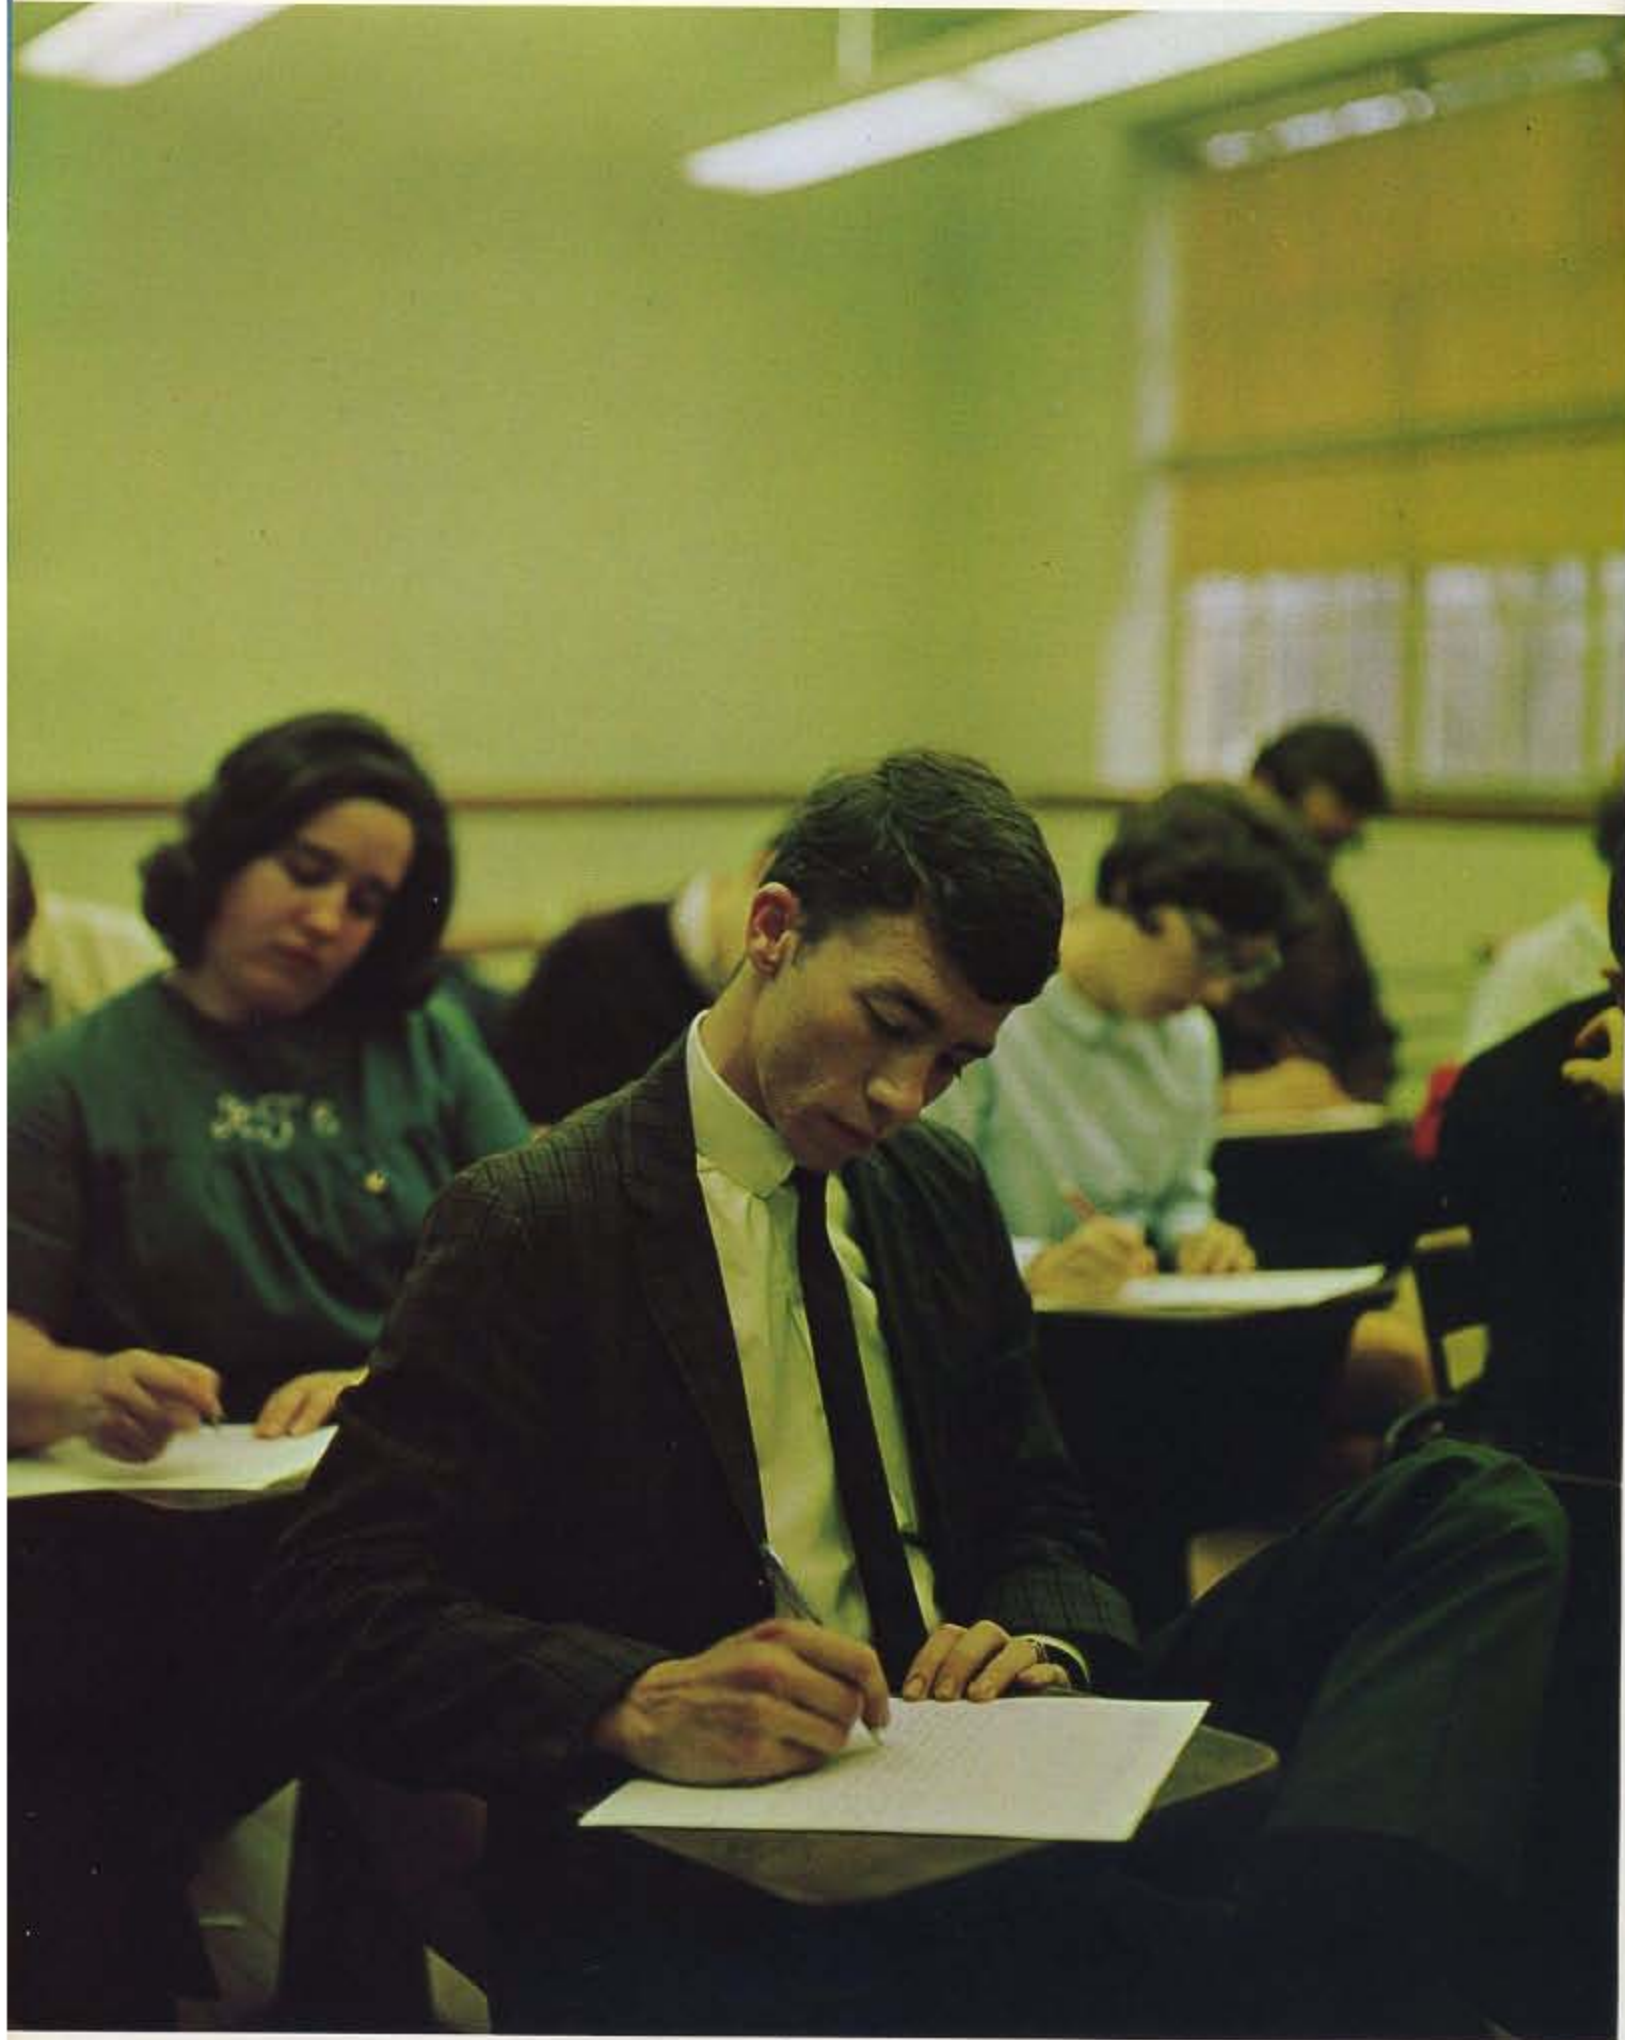

A Time to Compete . . .

The University's athletes again this year justified the strong support which is so characteristic of Hilltopper spirit. Much of Western's campus activity centers around its athletic program. In the wide variety of sports ranging from football and basketball to track and tennis, nearly every student can find some activity on which to vent his athletic interest.

"Moore for more."

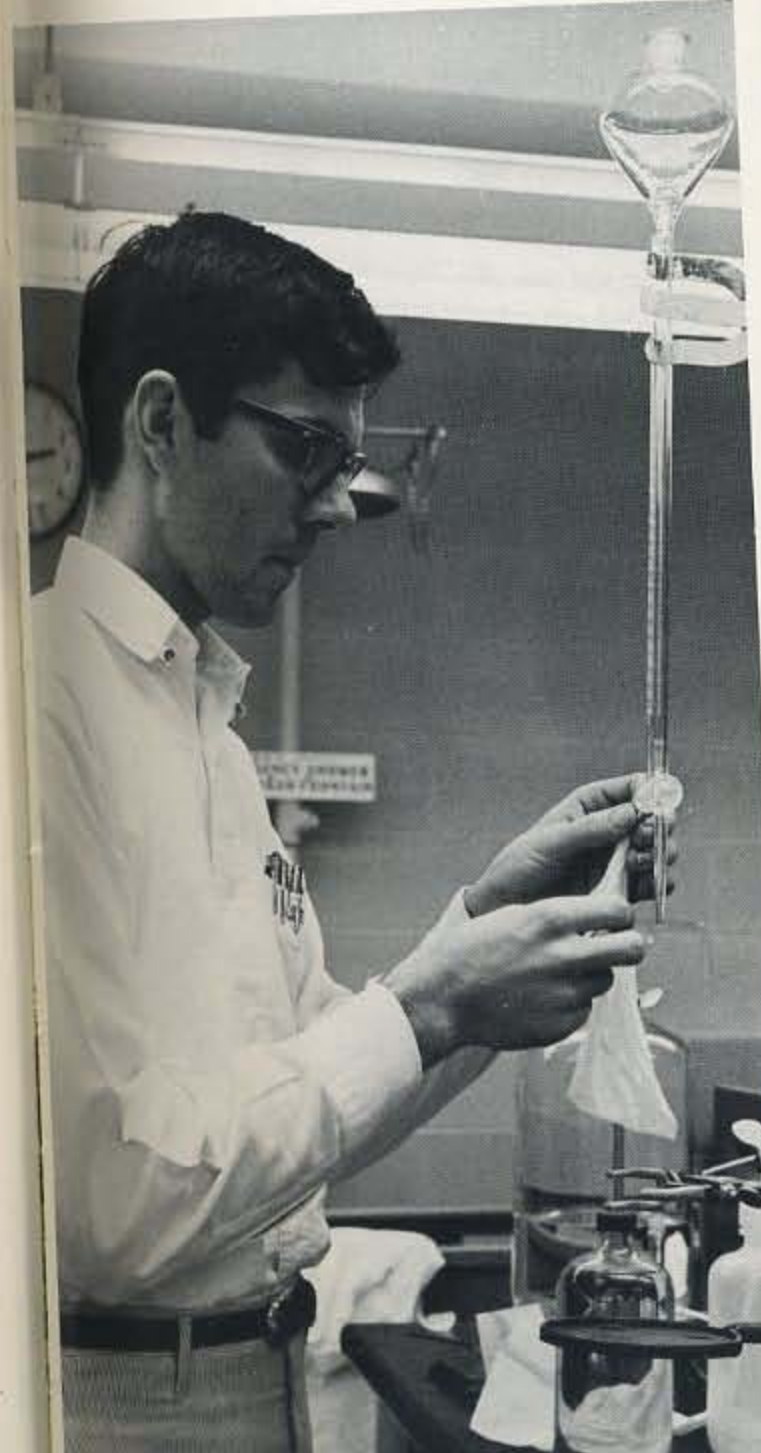

A Time to be Pensive . . .

Inevitably, the Western student must be called to account for what he has achieved during the semester, with the hour of reckoning coming during final exam week. Even though some review and some cram, the final critical sessions leave the student with a genuine sense of accomplishment.

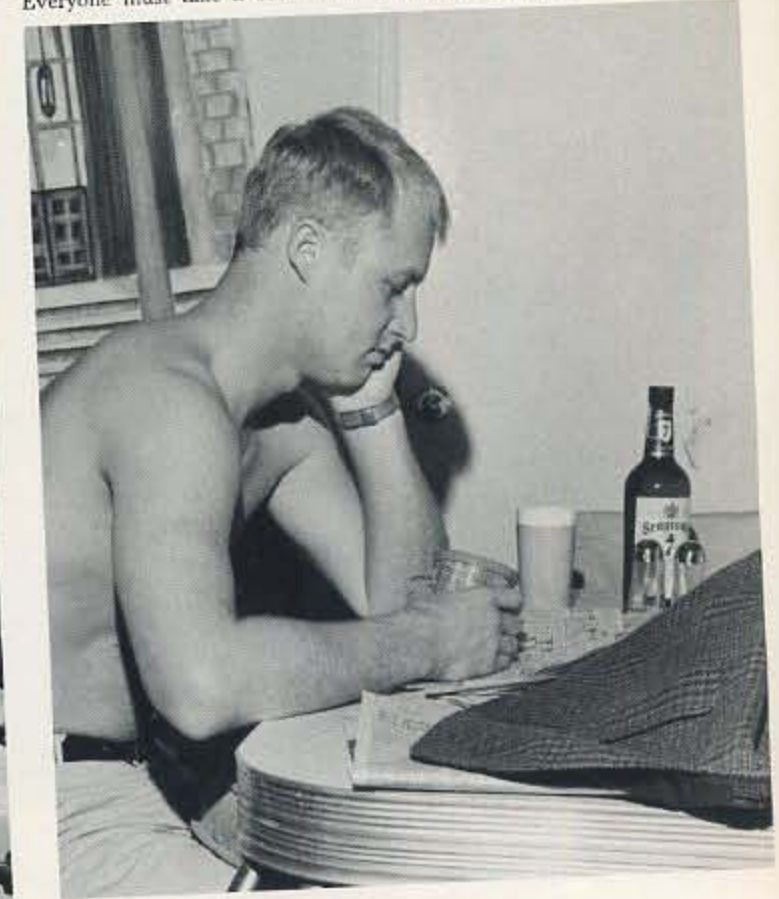

Be careful now, don't let it drip!

Hurry, it's five till ten and the exam begins at ten.

Everyone must take a break from studying for exams, shouldn't they?

A Time for Creativity . . .

A student's need for self-expression is perhaps best exemplified in the dramatic productions and oratorical contests presented on campus. This year the Van Meter stage served as a South Sea Island as well as an Elizabethan courtyard, as talent and skills were displayed in a variety of ways.

"And I say to you . . ."

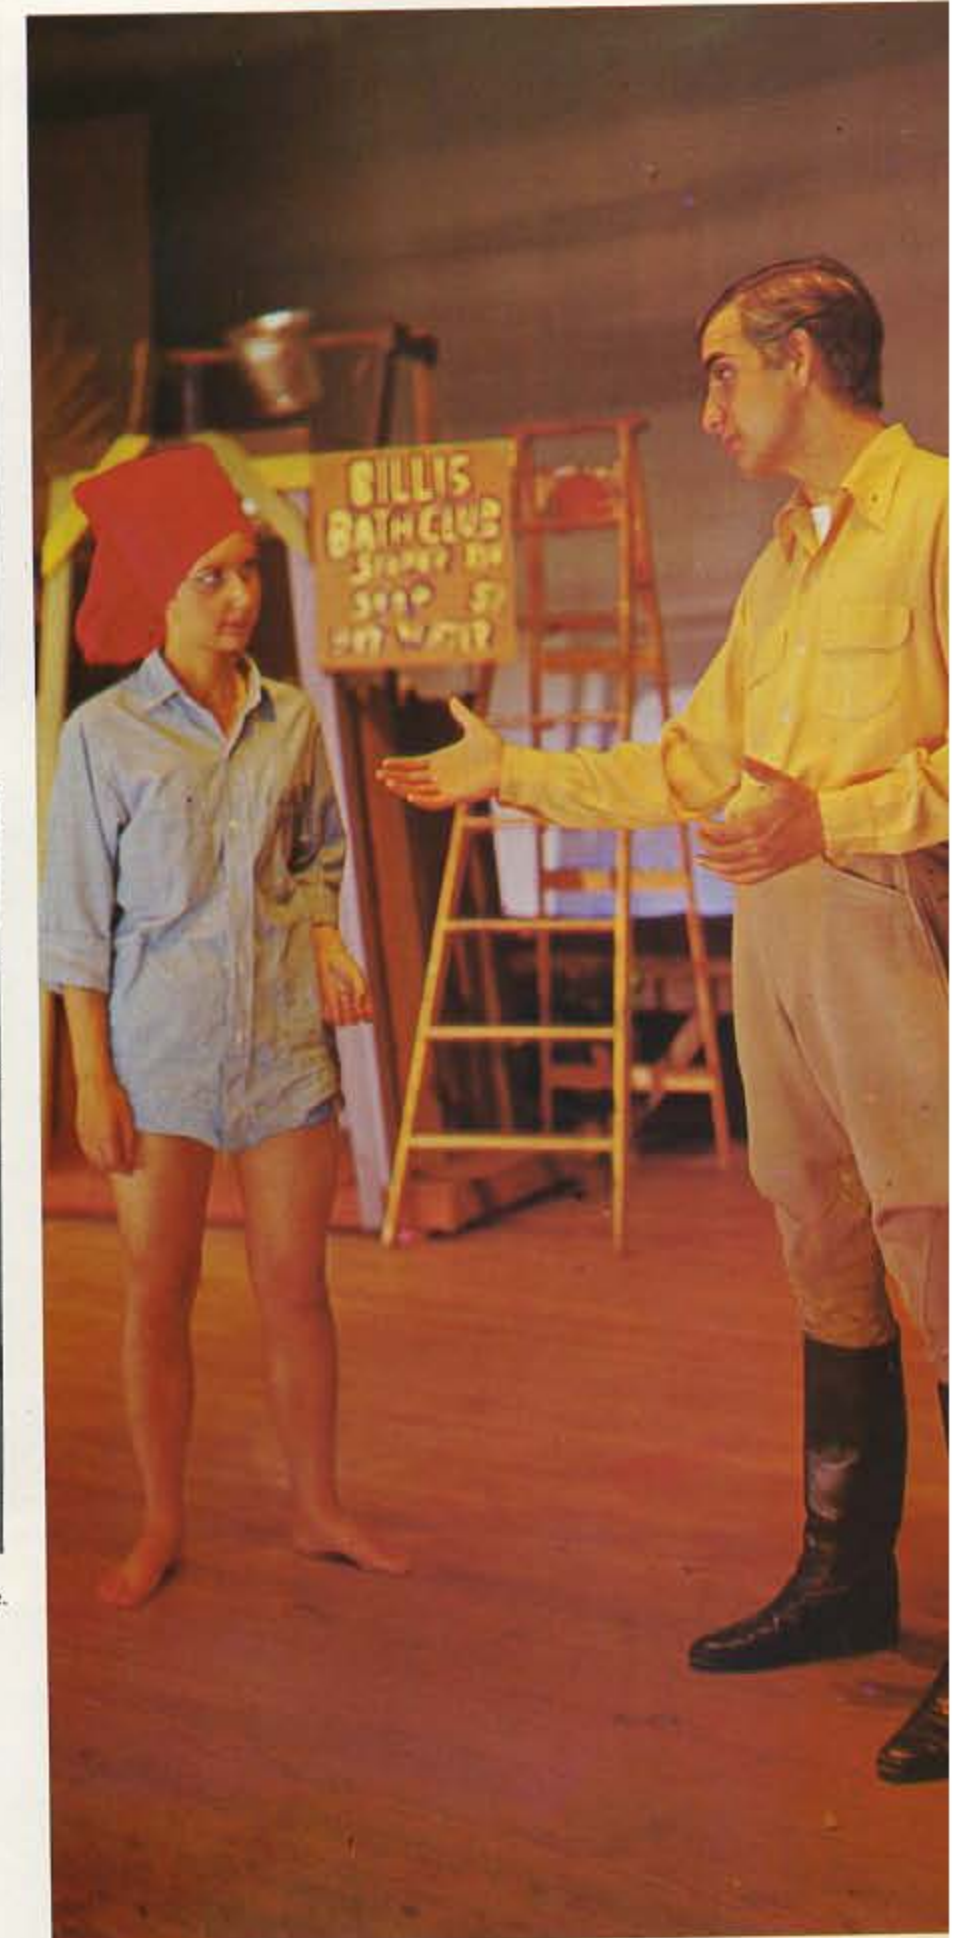

A charming smile makes a speaker enjoyable.

Well, what's wrong with it?

An Elizabethan courtyard provides a spot for love.

South Pacific . . . a magnificent drama.

Western's newest sorority, Alpha Xi Delta awaits formal installation.

Panhellenic "get-togethers" go better with Coke.

"But I got a Sprite . . . not a Coke!"

Theme parties relieve the tension of a hectic rush weekend.

A Time for Decisions . . .

Sororities, under the leadership of the Panhellenic Council, offer many invaluable experiences as they strive to develop the individual to her greatest capacity. The sorority members stands for good scholarship, guarding of good health, maintenance of social standards and for serving to the best of their ability the college community.

A Time for Gaiety . . .

The social whirl of a college career is just as important to the education of the whole self as the academic offerings. The University affords each student the opportunity to broaden himself socially by attending the Military Ball, Talisman Ball, Sweetheart Ball, Sadie Hawkins Dance and Homecoming festivities.

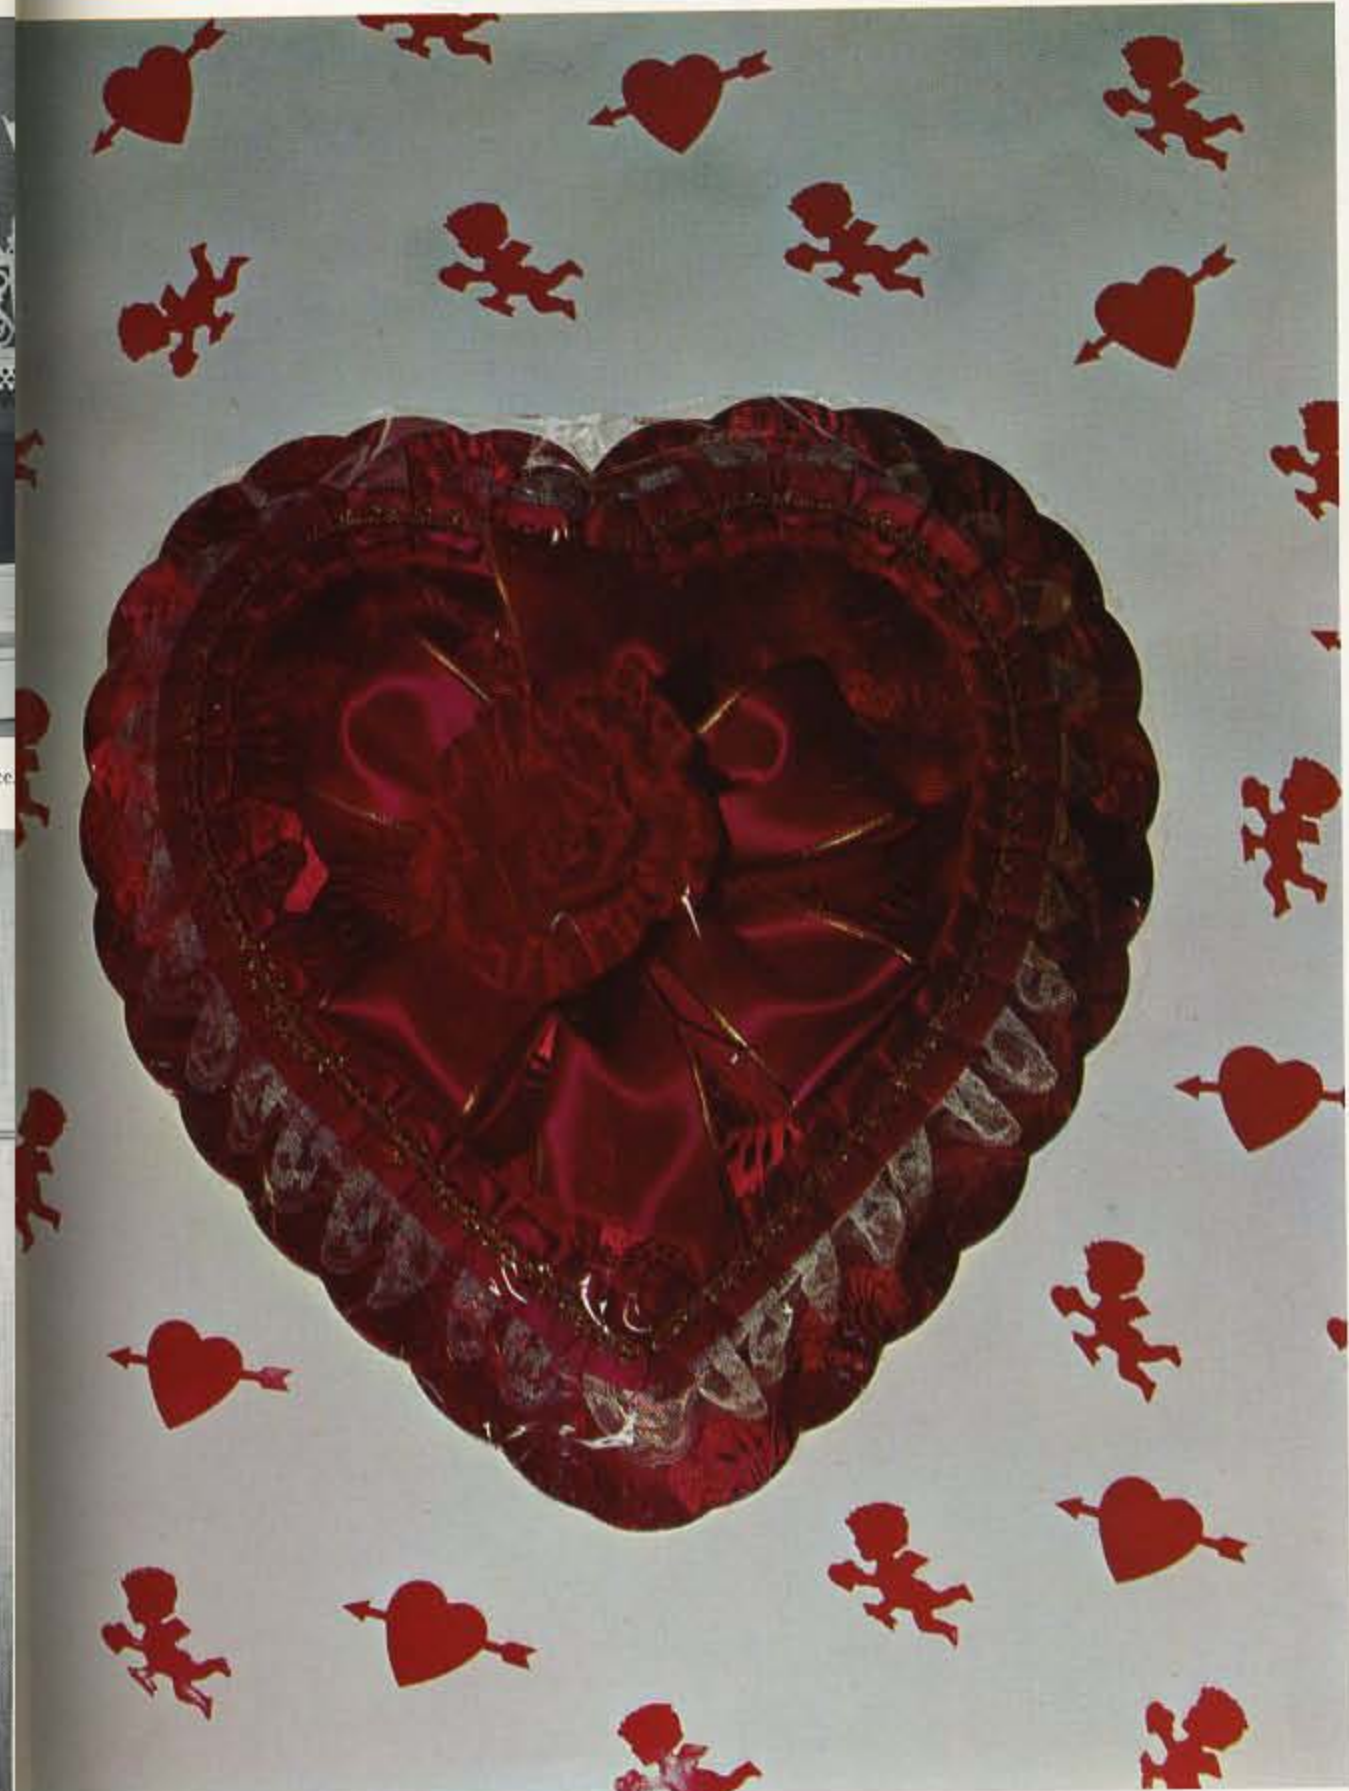

The Military Ball Queen begins her reign with an honored dance.

The Sweetheart Ball King lends a helping hand to his Queen.

Candy—a symbol of love.

Let me think . . . just let me think and I'll let you know in a minute!

Love is a many splendored thing

A Time for Love . . .

Students escape from the frustrations of too many extra-curricular activities, homework and dormitory life into the comfortable world of friendship and dating or the peaceful world of solitude. It is now that one discovers that college life is, as life anywhere will be, a mixture of both good and bad.

Love is giving to that very special "someone."

Many couples searching for entertainment find the T.V. the last resort.

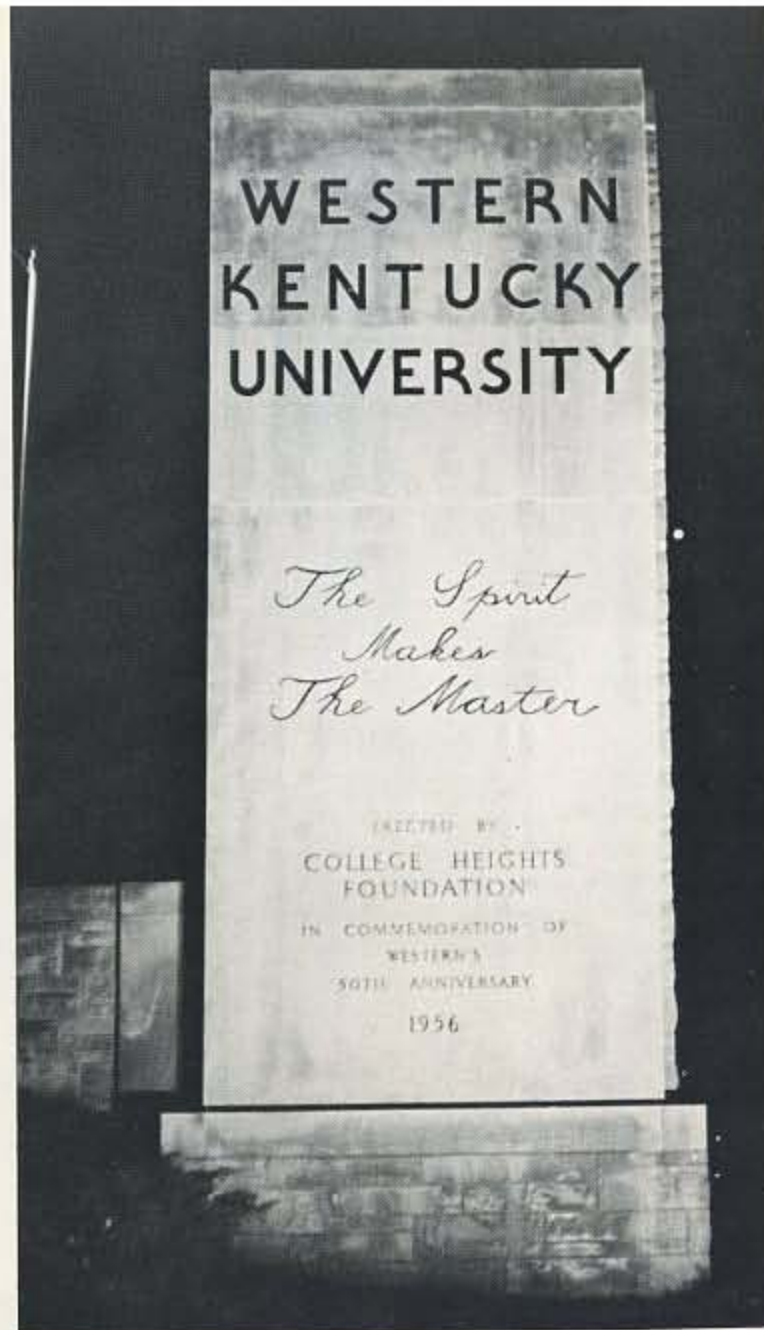

We could get ours and then get the baby a pair.

The diploma . . . a symbol of the completion of four long, but joyful, years.

Truly, the spirit makes the master.

What gain has the worker from his toil?

The year has ended and all phases of life at Western Kentucky University have been encountered. The academic and social aspects both equally important, are inherent in the graduate as he prepares to face life. But, it is asked of each and every student . . . not just the graduate . . . "What have YOU gained from your toil?"

GOVERNOR EDWARD T. BREATHITT

Governor of the Commonwealth

Governor Edward T. Breathitt, nearing the end of his term of office, has served the Commonwealth in a most distinguished manner. In February, 1966, Governor Breathitt signed into law the bill which created four state universities. This is an act which is a landmark in the field of education in the state of Kentucky. Governor Breathitt was the youngest man to hold the office of governor in the history of Kentucky. In time this fact will not be the novelty it once was, but the untiring and unflinching perseverance of Governor Breathitt will be the novelty remembered. Governor Breathitt is a true and loyal friend to Western Kentucky University, the state of Kentucky, and its people.

The Board of Regents of Western Kentucky University consists of seven distinguished Kentuckians. Dr. Harry M. Sparks, Superintendent of Public Instructions, is the chairman of the Board of Regents. The six other members appointed by the governor are: Dr. W. Gerald Edds, Dr. Chalmer P. Embry, Dr. J. T. Gilbert, Maxey B. Harlin, Douglas Keen and Hugh Poland. The government of Western Kentucky University is vested in this body of men. Among the varied functions of the Board of Regents are the following: they determine the number of divisions, departments, offices, and agencies needed for the conduct of the affairs of the college; and they grant diplomas and confer degrees upon recommendation of the President and faculty. Western Kentucky University is indeed fortunate to have in its service these men who are dedicated servants to this institution.

President and Mrs. Thompson truly present the Western spirit to the state to the nation, and to the world.

Western Kentucky University's First Family

President Thompson meets with a student; he desires to know what the students want for Western.

For the past eleven years President and Mrs. Kelly Thompson have fulfilled their respective roles on campus with meaning and purpose. Under the leadership and foresight of President Thompson, Western has grown from a small college to a thriving university. He began his dedicated service to Western some thirty-six years ago. Education for Leadership is one of the by-lines for Western. President Thompson received his education from Western, and this education truly developed a leader; a leader involved in a meaningful way in every phase of campus activity. From this involvement President Thompson gains many insights to the happenings on campus, which in turn aid him in his solutions to the many varied and complex problems which arise. "The Spirit Makes The Master," the official motto of the University, is also capable of describing President Thompson. Without the spirit which President Thompson has concerning Western, Western would be just an ordinary university. However, the spirit of President Thompson dispels this idea, and in the place of an ordinary university is an ever-growing and purposeful university.

Dr. Raymond L. Cravens has served in his present capacity for several years. In lieu of this position Dr. Cravens is also Dean of the Faculties. Under the capable leadership of Dr. Cravens, Western's faculty has increased in size manifold. However, the size of the faculty is not the important factor; the important factor is the quality of the faculty. The University's faculty is an intriguing and exceptional body of people. Through the imaginative and inventive thinking of Dr. Cravens, Western has made many advancements in its academic program. Much time and effort was spent in the formation of the five colleges which compose the University today. Dr. Cravens was involved intensively in this development. As the University grows larger, and the need for other academic offerings become apparent, one can be assured that with the foresight of Dr. Cravens, Western will never be lacking.

Dr. Cravens serves Western with distinction and vigor in the performance of his duty.

DERO G. DOWNING

Vice-President for Administrative Affairs and Dean of Business Affairs

Dean Downing is unfailing in his efforts for a growing Western.

Dero G. Downing has been associated with Western for numerous years. He has served with the University in various capacities culminating in his appointment to the Vice Presidency. Dean Downing is responsible for the administrative work of the University. His office is involved in varied activities ranging from the issuing of student payroll to the studying and letting of bids for the buildings on campus. The University is a growing business concern; the extent to which it will grow is unknown. As such the Business Office is involved in most events happening on campus. Dean Downing touches upon every phase of college activity in his capacity as the head of this office. He works tirelessly and vigorously in fulfilling his obligations to the University.

The Bowling Green College of Commerce is composed of the departments of Accounting, Business Administration, Economics, Government, Office Administration, Sociology, and the Tax Research Center. This college, encompassing the academic disciplines classified in the area of business and including the social science departments, prepares graduates for careers in public affairs. Moreover, each department within the college offers curricula for the training of secondary teachers. In addition to the four-year degree curricula programs, two-year Associate of Arts Degrees in Data Processing, Secretarial Administration, and Small Business Management are offered. The Tax Research Center was established in the College of Commerce due to the increasing importance of research in business and government. It is oriented toward and emphasizes tax matters as they affect Kentucky. The center, as it is contemplated, will serve as a source for the training and development of tax specialists.

The techniques of audio-visual aids prepares future teachers for the modern classroom.

In the College of Education the following departments have been grouped by the Board of Regents: Elementary and Secondary Education, Psychology, Industrial Arts, Home Economics, Health, Physical Education and Recreation, and the Training School. Professional growth of teachers and school leaders is the basis for the design of the programs in this college. These programs encompass the pre-service, in-service, and continuing education aspects of the teacher's professional preparation.

The various programs of professional preparation are designed to enhance the full range of professional and academic skills and competencies. Within this framework, the programs serve to develop positive attitudes toward the profession of teaching, skills in specific areas, and skills and techniques necessary for continuous professional growth. While the College of Education assumes primary responsibility for the professional preparation of teachers, the opportunity to educate teachers of the schools of the Commonwealth and the Nation is seen as a function of the total institution.

DR. JOHN D. MINTON
Dean, Graduate School

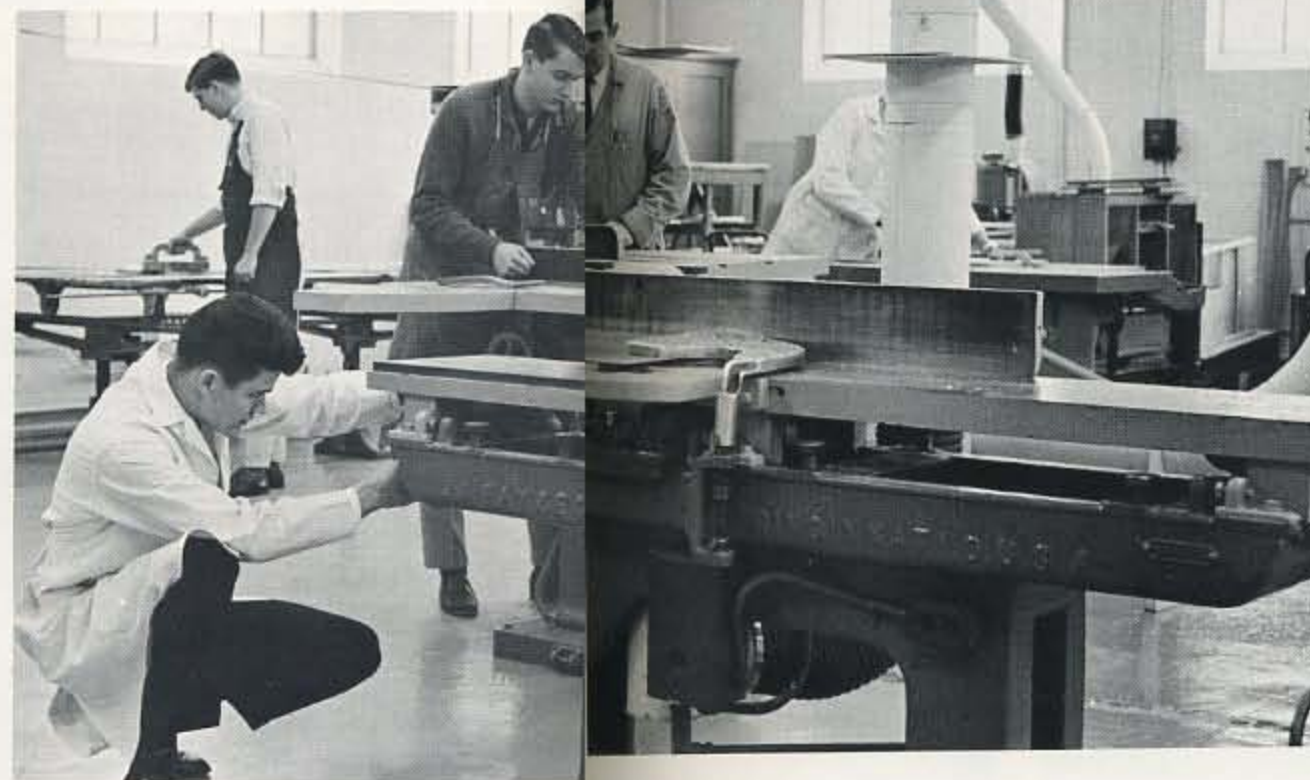

The Board of Regents reorganized Western's Graduate Division into the Graduate School in June 1964. Graduate work has been offered by the Hill since 1931. The Graduate School offers the Master of Arts in English, History, and Education. In addition to the Master of Arts in professional education, the Master of Arts in Education with a major in English, Math, Music, Science, or Social Science is offered. The Master of Science in Engineering Physics is available to those in the field of science. The Graduate School faculty is carefully selected and is composed of teachers with advanced degrees and of demonstrated teaching proficiency. Graduate assistantships are available for qualified students. These enable them simultaneously to pursue their education and to gain experience in the teaching profession. An ever-growing graduate offering and ever-increasing curriculum is seen for the University in the future.

Graduate classes are often small, and the teacher-pupil relationship is different from that found on the undergraduate level.

Creativity is an attribute stressed in all the advanced music classes on campus.

To learn from the past so as to free the future from mistakes is the aim of all history courses.

The Potter College of Liberal Arts is basically a grouping of the humanities departments. Included within the college are the departments of Art, English, Foreign Languages, History, Music, and Philosophy. A synopsis of the functions of each of the departments follows. The programs presented by the Art Department are planned to meet the needs of the classroom art teachers and creative artists. The English Department, in addition to the major and minor areas offered, makes a significant contribution to the general education of all students with its debate team, dramatic productions, and creative writing ventures. The desire for a knowledge of a language for professional or personal reasons is the purpose fulfilled by the Foreign Languages Department. The stated purpose of the Department of History is to acquaint students with history—the story of man from the beginning of time to the present. The Department of Music exists primarily for the purpose of training music teachers. However, it also provides an opportunity for all students to develop a musical heritage. The courses in Philosophy aim to help a student to understand the meaning of life, to think correctly, and to evaluate such principles dealing with life intelligently.

The Ogden College of Science and Technology contains the Departments of Agriculture, Biology, Chemistry, Geography and Geology, Mathematics and Physics. Situated on the campus of the Ogden College, an educational institution established in 1877, this college has embedded in it a tradition of high scholarship. On June 1, 1960, the Ogden Board of Regents signed a ninety-nine year lease granting to the University the right to use the existing buildings and to construct new buildings on the Ogden campus. Construction was begun in the spring on a 2½ million dollar science complex. It will house the various departments composing the college. Also included in the complex is the Hardin Thompson Planetarium which will be extensively used in astronomy and space science work on the college level. Many curriculum advancements have taken place in recent years. Besides offering majors and minors in the departments of the college, related majors and minors may be obtained in seven additional areas including medical technology and pre-optometry.

DR. WILLIAM HOURIGAN
Associate Dean of Undergraduate Instruction

In the Military Science Department young men learn the essentials necessary to the defense of our country.

Departments lying outside the various colleges include the Library Science Area, the Department of Military Science, and the Department of Nursing. The Library Division consists of the Kentucky Library, the Science Library and the Margie Helm Library, which is the major concentration of the school's reference material. Also located in the Margie Helm Library is the Library Science Department. Students are trained here for positions in elementary and secondary schools and for positions as assistants in college or public libraries. The Military Science Department, whose program is in consonance with that prescribed by the Department of the Army for all senior ROTC units, offers four years of Military Science education divided into a basic and advanced course each consisting of two years. The Department of Nursing provides eligibility leading to licensure as a registered nurse and to the Associate of Science Degree in nursing.

FEATURES

SUSE FRENCH
JIM COBB

We feature those honored . . .

This special life . . .
 One that comes not easily to all
 Aspects of popularity, leadership, grace
 Tensioned expressions shown on a face
 With the smiles that rise
 And fall.

Exciting moments . . .
 In constant, hurried, frenzied demand
 Greetings acknowledged with humility's tune
 Meetings attended—arriving never soon
 Bystanders watching don't Understand . . .

The seeds of leaders we must sow
 Opinions mount . . . ideas grow
 As beauty is a rarity
 We place her high for all to see
 Triggered from an unknown source
 Though undefined we feel its force . . .

That greater life . . .
 Filled with goodness and prosperity
 A world of joy, contented hearts, human pride,
 Successful projects bring warmth from inside . . .
 Our honors received gratefully.

Sparkling jewels . . . adorning symbol of loyalty . . . tonight a queen is chosen . . . to reign forever in memory.

Athena . . . goddess of wisdom and skills . . . reflection upon the past . . . outstanding achievements attained by few.

Congratulations . . . a gift of flowers and warm embrace . . . tearful ecstasy . . . the proud glances and gracious smile . . . sincerity's touch—one word means so many things.

To choose or be chosen . . . humanity's privilege . . . decisions seem so unimportant until one must decide himself.

A cheering crowd softens . . . becomes silent . . . then only moments of stillness preside as beauty's radiance commands.

SCHOLAR OF THE UNIVERSITY
 1966-67
 Herbert B. Sparks

University Scholars

The student or students, in case of a tie, who has the highest academic standing in his first three years of college, this being in residence at Western, is deemed Scholar of the University. The 1966-67 scholar is Herbert B. Sparks, a political science and history major from Edmonton, Kentucky. He achieved an over-all grade point standing of 3.94. Recognition is also given to the student graduating in August who has attained the highest scholastic standing. Carolyn Cole Strong, Glasgow mathematics major, received this honor in August, 1966. She had achieved a point standing of 3.85.

Honors Program

The Honors Program at Western Kentucky University provides a system of study for the gifted student who is qualified to profit from the exchange in ideas possible in small groups and from the freedom and responsibility inherent in individual study. The need for an Honors Program and Honor students is reciprocal. The University wishes to attract students with special ability because the intellectual atmosphere is heightened by a tangible awareness of and concern with the best potentialities. The gifted student provides leadership and the University assumes the responsibility to recognize and encourage these students who in turn provide leadership in their own development.

All students in the Honors Program are required to attend during each academic year five special events presented by the University.

The Honors Program is under the capable leadership of Dr. William Hourigan, who is assisted by Dr. Elsie Dotson.

Events available to participants are plays, recitals, concerts, lectures, films, and art exhibits.

A special room in the library has been designated for use by students in the program.

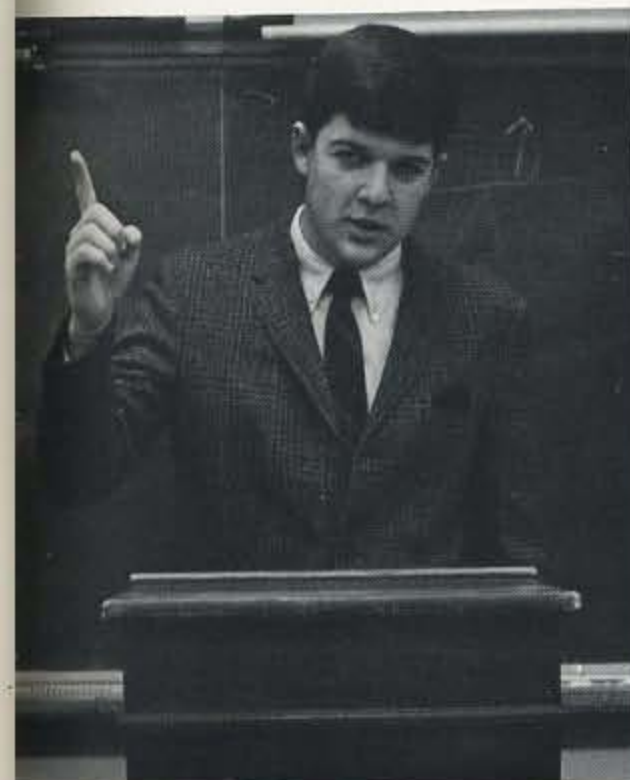

Honors Program

A first semester freshman becomes eligible for the Honors Program by achieving scores on the Freshman Test Battery which fall in the upper 15% of the normative group and by graduating in the upper 25% of his high school graduation class. Second semester freshmen, sophomores, juniors, and seniors become eligible for membership through achieving an overall quality point average of 3.3. First semester freshmen who join the Honors Program take part in the FRESHMAN HONORS COLLOQUIM. The Colloquim concentrates on a particular topic or theme which has been chosen by the course instructor for study and discussion by the group.

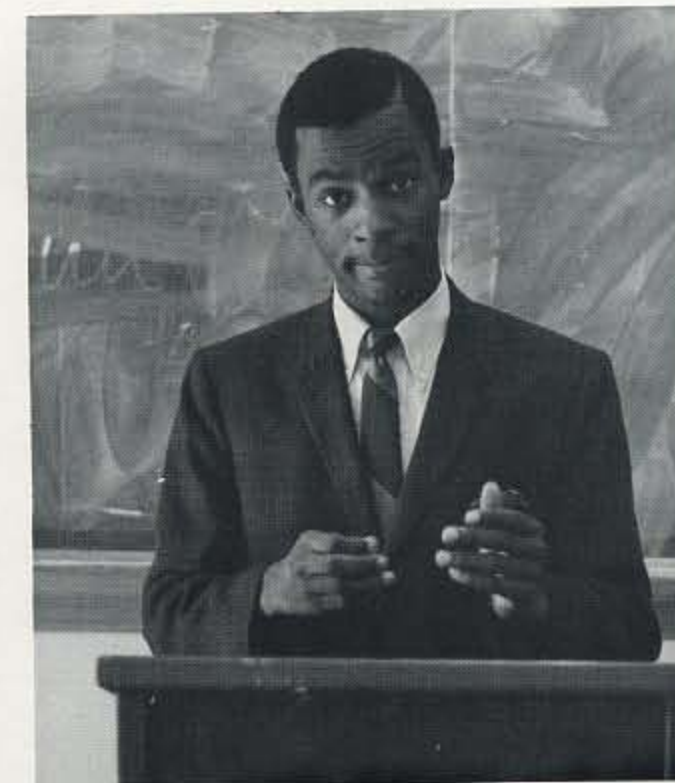

Honor students are encouraged to spend leisure time browsing in the library.

Conversation with other students and faculty is also encouraged of Honors Program participants.

The 1967 Talisman Staff

The 1967 TALISMAN Staff has mirrored recollections of all phases of life at Western Kentucky University through the photographs and copy presented in our yearbook. The reflections of the TALISMAN represent the coordinated efforts of two semesters' pursuits which resulted in happiness, frustration, regrets, and glories. These reflections could not have been possible had it not been for the photographers who imprisoned on film the actions, moods, and emotions from our 1966-67 lives, the section editors and their assistants who imposed coherence upon the photographer's art; and the Editor-in-Chief and Assistant Editor who provided essential guidelines, coordination, and supervision over the compilation of this yearbook. We, the staff of the TALISMAN, are proud of all the "blood, sweat, toil, and tears" expended in presenting this yearbook to, Western Kentucky University—1967, to serve as a memory for many years to come.

Concert Band

The Hill is alive with the "sounds of music. . . ." Western's hill, that is, and Western's big marching band provides the sounds. As tremulous, yet somehow nostalgic melodies echo between empty, deserted dormitories, chills of excitement play mischievously with spines; the team is ready for action; a stanza of "Dixie" is playing; students stomp their feet anxiously; uncontrollable tension rises. . . "we've gotta win!" and then, reminiscent of Jeckle and Hyde, serene tranquility falls upon the Western fans. A few eyes water. . . many hats fall; ". . . oh say does that Star-Spangled Banner yet wave. . . ." Of course, most people are ethical; talking ceases at the "anthem's" introduction. Western people are also polite, yet in addition they are proud. . . proud of having such fine spirited "sounds of music" represent their university and as well they are doubly proud of those "music-makers."

The flute section of the Concert Band rehearses for a performance.
